S. W. FARMERS' CLUB.

The Club met at the residence of Benj. G. English, on Friday, Jan. 8th. Owing to the severity of the weather the attendance was not as large as usual, though forty proved their fidelity to the Club's interest by their presence.

Mrs. E. T. Green read a fine selection and Mrs. J. P. Lapham an essay appropriate for the time—the beginning of the New Year.

Amariah Hitchcock followed with a paper written in his careful, but, conclusive style, upon the subject: "Shall the farmer feed for an early or late market?"

John F. Spafard, S. M. Marithe J. G. and A. D. English, H. R. Palmer and Richard Green discussed the subject from its several standpoints.

One year ago a resolution was introduced in the Club that the members keep an account of their income and expenses and present the same at the January meeting for 1892. At this meeting not a lady had the courage to present her account and but two of the gentlemen did so. They appeared to enjoy discussing the profit or loss derived from feeding for the January or the April market better.

The subject for the next meeting is: "The future of the sheep industry," with a paper by Albert D. English.

This is the way to raise pork: Sam'l Steele sold three hogs that weighed 1720 pounds. He also sold 13 spring hogs that weighed 3930 pounds. Who can beat that?

FRANKLIN UNION LYCEUM.

The Franklin Union Lyceum met at the residence of Reuben Langdon on Saturday evening, Jan. 9th. A good literary program was carried out, consisting of vocal and instrumental music, recitations, etc. After recess followed the debate upon the question—"Resolved, that invention has done more than literature to advance civilization." Carl Wisner and Tom Conlin represented the affirmative, and Hollis Taylor and A. D. Hunt the negative. The question was ably discussed on both sides, but was finally decided in favor of the affirmative. The next meeting will be held at the residence of A. D. Hunt Saturday evening, Jan. 23d. Question for debate—Resolved, that the free coinage of silver would be beneficial to the welfare of the people. Affirmative, Carl Wisner, Hollis Taylor, L. E. Taylor, G. W. Allen, J. C. VanDoren and Howard Whelan; negative, Tom Conlin, A. D. Hunt, S. N. Munger, A. B. Wisner, J. S. Allen and Leroy Dibble.

Let there be a general preparation made to attend, and especially to take part in discussion.

MACON MUSIC.

Passenger rates are high now on the "Motor Line."

The M. E. church is without a sexton. Who wants to enlist?

News is as scarce this week as boys who do not use tobacco.

Mrs. Thomas Marshall is visiting her son, Alonzo, in Chicago, for a few weeks.

The Maconites gave Laverne and Lena Camburn a surprise last Tuesday evening.

Edward Carter, who has been laid up for repairs on account of a carbuncle, is able to out again.

It is rumored that Will Frost has rented John Buck's farm in Saline and will move there in the spring.

Milan Sage's weather eye has been turned heavenward praying for snow. His prayers are now being answered.

Two Maconites went out into the woods to saw wood and after they had sawed off several logs they discovered that one-half of the handles was on the under side of the saw.

NORTH-EAST FRANKLIN.

Mrs. Oliver Mull is quite sick with sore throat.

Mrs. Edie Smith visited her sister in Holloway last week.

The news of Andrew Wilson's death caused sincere sorrow among his many friends in Franklin.

Mrs. Alvinza Whelan is very sick, having suffered an attack of apoplexy, as we understand. Her friends are greatly alarmed.

The Lyceum assembled at Reuben Langdon's Saturday evening and was an enjoyable occasion. Next meeting in two weeks, at A. D. Hunt's, when the silver question will be settled. Our Solons at Washington please take notice.

The grippe, which was the occasion of so many newspaper jokes two years ago, has fairly, or foully, fought its way to more respectful consideration. So widespread are its ravages as to be simply appalling. Franklin has its full share of victims, some of whom are alarmingly ill. All of Samuel Wilson's family are sick and Mrs. Wilson is reported very low. At last accounts Adelbert Whelan had been unconscious for several days, with scarce a possibility of improvement. Mrs. Mart. Whelan was also dangerously sick, but was thought to be a trifle better Sunday. Other sufferers are John Joseph, Mrs. German, Myrtle Kemp, Mr. and Mrs. DeLong,—but perhaps it would be easier to give a list of the well ones.

ATTESTED POPULARITY

One of the most honest and reliable houses we have ever dealt with is the Swift Specific Company, of Atlanta, Ga., the well known founders and manufacturers of the so very popular blood remedy, S. S. S., which to our personal knowledge has cured many people throughout this section of terrible blood diseases. Our druggists inform us that in the past six months they have sold more of S. S. S. than any other preparation for the blood on their shelves. The success achieved by that firm is mainly due to their extensive advertising and to the purity of their medicine, which does everything claimed for it. We are unable to record a single instance where a purchaser has been deceived or disappointed. A treatise on Blood and Skin diseases will be mailed free to all who address

Farmers, a Word with You!

Do you know that the National Stockman and Farmer, of Pittsburgh, Pa., is the largest and best agricultural, live stock and family journal of its class published? It is the largest because it has twenty-four pages (ninety-six columns) every week the year round—no supplements. It is the best because it is the most practical, comprehensive and ably edited. It is, as its name implies, a magazine for the farmer and stockman. As such it covers the whole field. Each of its departments is ably edited; its matter is practical and to the point. All its correspondents are farmers and stockmen who keep up to the times in their various branches, and it combines more fully than any other journal of its kind all of the branches of husbandry. Each of its twenty-four different departments is represented in each issue, consisting of Agriculture, Horticulture, Live Stock, Veterinary, Dairy, Apiary, Markets, Poultry, Household, Young Folks, etc., etc.

Its market reports have a national reputation of being the most reliable, comprehensive and freshest of any of its competitors. Their new press enables the publishers to mail their entire edition within twenty-four hours from the time it goes to press, thus enhancing the value of its market reports and other departments.

It accepts no fraudulent advertisements. Its organization page is one of its most valuable features. League, Grange and Alliance matters are intelligently and honestly discussed. It aims in this department to bring about a more equitable and harmonious state of affairs than now exists. It gives a table of contents with each issue and a complete index every six months, enabling one to find at once any article desired. It enters into political matters only so far as it is of interest to the farmer and his welfare.

The regular subscription price is $1.50 per year, but in clubs of five it is offered at $1.00 each. Send for a sample copy free. It gave away to its agents $3,000 in cash prizes the past year. Send for terms and supplies. Address

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, January 8, 1892.

Everybody is talking about a sudden attack of illness that Mr. Blaine had this week. The attack was insignificant of itself, being only a little nausea which passed off in an hour, but the fact is pointed out by those who insist upon believing Mr. Blaine's health precarious that he was taken in precisely the same way last summer. Those Republicans who do not wish Mr. Blaine to be the nominee of his party are doing all they can to exaggerate the matter, presumably in the hope of alarming Mr. Blaine about the condition of his health to such an extent that he will decline to be a candidate. Everything seems to be considered fair in politics.

It is now well nigh certain that we shall have no war with Chili, and it is believed, although no announcement has been formally made that Mr. Blaine and Senator Montt, the Chilian minister, have reached a satisfactory settlement. It is probable that the correspondence will be withheld from Congress until the whole matter is officially settled.

Representative McMillin, who was elected Speaker pro tempore, to act during the illness of Speaker Crisp, makes a very satisfactory presiding officer.

Senator Morrill this week made a speech in reply to Senator Stewarts recent speech in favor of the free coinage of silver. His arguments, were well made, but they contained nothing new on the subject.

The newspapers which printed last week the decision of the Supreme Court in the Nebraska governorship case were just a little too enterprising, inasmuch as no decision has yet been reached in the case. There has never been a leak in the Supreme Court, which fact caused the alleged news to be regarded with suspicion by the old-timers here

The first "bill" day in the House was a decided success, as far as the number and importance of the bills introduced are concerned, 375 public bills having been introduced when the call of the States was suspended at Ohio. Four bills for the free and unlimited coinage of silver; one each by Townsend of Colorado; Clover, of Kansas; Stone, of Kentucky, and Bartine, of Nevada, were introduced. Two for free postal delivery in rural districts, one by Clark, of Alabama, and one by O'Donnell, of Michigan. Cutting and Geary, of California, both introduced bills absolutely prohibiting Chinese immigration into the United States.

Mr. Harrison's selections for the vacancies on board of Interstate Commerce—J. W. MaDill, of Iowa, Republican, and W. M. Lindsey, of Kentucky, Democrat—appear to have given general satisfaction. Likewise the reappointment of R. R. Morrison, who has been a member of the commission since its organization.

Among the bills of interest introduced in the House are: By Oates, of Ala., authorizing National banks to loan money on real estate; by Breckinridge, or Ark., for the admission of Indian Territory as a state; by Watson, of Ga., and Lane, of Ill., for an income tax; by Snively, of Ind., for the election of postmasters by the vote of the people; by Otis, of Kan., to change the monetary system, reduced interest, and to provide for loans on land; by Simpson, of Kansas, to prohibit usury; also to establish a department of finance and Commerce; by Kerr, of Nebr., to carry into effect the Alliance sub-treasury system; by Boatner, La., proposing a constitutional amendment prohibiting lotteries; by Chipman, Mich., to prevent aliens from competing with citizens of the United States upon work done in this country; by O'Neil, of Mo., to reduce letter postage to once cent; by Greenleaf, of N. Y., for woman suffrage, and several for the election of Senators by the people.

Senator Peffer has introduced bills for the establishment of a bureau of irrigation, and for the increase of the circulating medium by the issue of treasury notes based on gold and silver coin and bullion; also to amend the inter-state commerce act, and to prohibit options, trusts and combinations.

Senator Stewart has set the anti-silver people by the ears by the introduction of a resolution instructing the Judiciary committee to inquire and report if any further legislation is necessary to make it the duty of the officers of the mint to receive and coin silver bullion for the benefit of depositors. Senator Stewart has found an old law passed in 1837, which provides that "gold and silver bullion brought to the mint for coinage shall be received and coined by the proper officers for the benefit of the depositor." As the Senator has been unable to find any record of the repeal of this law he is of the opinion that it still holds good, and he desires the opinion of the eminent lawyers who compose the Judiciary committee, hence his resolution.

COMPARING THE COST.

The Cost of Producing Dress Goods Here and Abroad—With Free Wool We Could Compete With England.

When Mr. Schoenhof was the United States consul at Tunstall, England, he made a study of the comparative cost of producing dress goods in England and the United States. He was specially fitted for this work, having previously been engaged in textile manufacture. Mr. Schoenhof shows clearly that with free wool and dyestuffs we would need no tariff on goods, but on the contrary could build up an export trade in woolens. He says:

"In dress goods a change seems to be taking place which favors the softer goods again, the same as in men's wear, against cassimeres, which had a run for quite a number of years. The trouble in dress goods is that one can seldom say from one season to another what class of goods will be in demand. Hence the domestic manufacturer with his limited market is always tossed about between the rocks of overproductions and of inability to supply the goods just in demand. In this the foreign manufacturer has an advantage. He originates fashion and designs for America as well as the rest of the world. He can turn his looms with ease and more readily than our manufacturers, partly because he works on a smaller scale and more scattered basis (in Germany and France a very large number of hand looms are still in operation) than our big concerns, and partly because he has the world's nations as his customers and is, therefore, not engaged with his entire force on one and the same class or style of goods. Importations will, for these reasons, always go on, whether we continue advancing the tariff or not, and the bulk will continue to be made here after increase or reduction of tariffs. Whether with a profit or without depends entirely on whether we happen to hit the thing in demand or not. That the labor cost plays no great part in this can be seen from a statement of comparative cost relating to dress goods of carded wool, so-called sackings. These goods are very extensively manufactured, and at present seem to have a run. They are of the flannel kind, and what applies to them in the manufacturing and cost would be applicable to that class of goods, too. In a slightly modified form this applies also to stripes or plaids.

The goods in America are made from the wool up, carded, spun, woven, dyed and finished in the mill. The English goods to which the comparison relates are made complete in the mill, except the dyeing and finishing, which is done by outside parties. I found the relations to stand thus:

"The general cost outside of the wool was stated by the manufacturer as being covered by 33 cents a pound. In England the dyeing and finishing is higher, being done outside. The American dyeing cost has to be corrected, being higher than given in my report on these dress goods. I intimated then that some corrections might be necessary. What stands for the pound ought to stand for the yard price, which would make the dyeing cost in all colors, except navy and myrtle, to be 4.6 cents the pound, dress goods. Allowing for this difference there is still sufficient margin in the general cost to make American flannels and carded wool dress goods independent of foreign competition, were there no tariff whatever. The American weaver gets 2.65 cents per yard of these goods, turns out about 300 yards a week, and earns accordingly $7.95. The English weaver gets 7s 8d per piece of seventy-two yards, 2.56 cents per yard, turns out 105 yards on an average, and earns $2.71.

Both are paid by the piece at nearly the same rate. The American operator handles two looms, works harder and longer hours. The Yorkshire girls handle one loom and are satisfied with earning twelve shillings a week. Higher than fifteen shillings their ambition seldom goes. This is the alpha and omega, the question and the answer, in the problem of to-day. This class of goods needs nothing so much as free wool to make it exportable. Manufacturers know this very well, and have been very outspoken at times about it. How could it be otherwise? The general cost of production, aside from wool, is somewhat below the foreign cost, but the wool costs more than twice as much as abroad. Regarding the wool question in general an American manufacturer and commission merchant writes me:

"English goods are invariably made out of a blend, and in this blend there are all the way from five to twenty different qualities of wool, each of which is associated with it, to give some desirable quality to the goods, either of texture, finish or price." "I am obliged nearly every week," he further states, "to refuse profitable contracts to make goods which would occupy considerable quantities of American machinery simply because the raw stock and the experience of handling the same do not exist in this country. The importation of the former is prohibited by the tariff and the tariff is likewise responsible for our inexperience in handling certain raw stocks, which have been excluded from this market for upwards of twenty-five years."

Here we have the whole difficulty. We have neither the experience in handling raw stocks, nor have we the stocks of wool required for the blending, because they have been excluded from the market for upwards of twenty-five years. Otherwise we could employ our cheap labor and working methods very profitably on orders now going constantly to foreign countries on account of the absence of these necessary requirements.

OFFICIAL SOPHISTRIES.

Tame Attempt of Secretary Foster to Show That the Foreigner Pays the Tariff Tax.

Both the president and the secretary of the treasury are at great pains, in their recent communication to congress, to assure the people that the McKinley bill is fulfilling all the prophecies of its authors and mightily advancing the prosperity of the country. The president dwells with such satisfaction on the recent increase in our foreign commerce as to suggest the belief that he thinks it was the tariff bill that gave us the prodigious crops of the past season and at the same time blighted the harvests of Europe so as to insure us ready markets at paying prices for our unusual surplus. But the secretary of the treasury is still bolder and does not hesitate to declare:

"A comparison of the prices of goods imported respectively under the old and new tariffs where rates have been increased will demonstrate that the tariff is a tax upon the foreign competition in our markets, in the sale of such articles as are extensively produced here, and that the duties are in fact thus deducted from the foreign market value and are paid by the foreigner as a tax for the privilege of selling his goods here at prices fixed by our own people competing among themselves in their own market."

Before adopting into an official report this commonplace of the stump orator, which John Quincy Adams years ago declared to be contrary to the first principles of common sense, Secretary Foster should have turned to the twenty-fifth section of the very bill he is seeking to vindicate. That section provides for the repayment of 99 per cent. of the duties paid on imported materials used in this country in making articles for exportation, and according to Maj. McKinley's own statement applies as well to wool and other "materials extensively produced here" as to things not produced in this country. If the secretary's proposition is true, he is constantly helping the American importer to practice a fraud on the government by refunding to him out of the treasury 99 per cent. of the duties which the importer never paid, but which were paid by the foreigner who sold him the goods.

Further, if the secretary had turned, say to paragraph 395 of the McKinley bill, he would have found that it imposes on women's and children's woolen dress goods weighing less than four ounces per square yard a duty of 12 cents per square yard and 50 per cent. ad valorem. The foreign market value of these goods is 20 cents per yard. The tax under the McKinley bill is 22 cents per yard, an increase of 5 cents per yard from former rates. Now these goods are "extensively produced in this country" and also extensively imported, and according to Secretary Foster the duty of 22 cents per yard is "deducted from the foreign market value, which is 20 cents per yard, and is not paid by the American consumer, but by the foreigner for the privilege of selling his goods in our market. In other words, the foreigner, besides giving us the goods for nothing, loses two cents a yard on them for the purpose of making us take them. The McKinley bill will furnish hundreds of similar illustrations of the absurdity of the secretary's position.

Moreover, there are times when all these shams and sophistries fall away of their own falsity and men deal with each other on the basis of things as they are.

The famine in Ireland was more potent than the arguments of Cobden and Bright in sweeping away the British corn laws and with them all the wretched pretenses by which English landlords had so long maintained their privilege of taxing the bread of the people. At the very time the secretary was writing his report our neighbor, Mexico, was seeking to alleviate the famine in some parts of that republic by suspending the duties on grain from the United States. When Secretary Foster voted in April, 1872, to exempt for one year all building materials except lumber when used for rebuilding Chicago from tariff duties, did he think he was aiding that fire-ravaged city or relieving the foreigner from a tax for the privilege of selling his brick, cement, glass, tin plate, structural iron and the like in our market?

The first great secretary of the treasury was a protectionist also, but Mr. Hamilton made no attempt to deceive the people as to the meaning and the logical results of the protective theory. He frankly admitted that it included not only protective duties, but premiums, bounties, patents, government banking and subsidies. And it may be well to quote in conclusion a sentence or two from the report made by Mr. Hamilton to the continental congress in 1782, when Rhode Island was alone of all the states refusing to grant to congress the right to levy import duties for the purpose of providing a revenue for the confederacy:

"The most common experience, joined to the concurrent opinions of the ablest commercial and political observers, has established beyond controversy this general principle, that every duty on imports is incorporated with the price of the commodity and ultimately paid by the consumer, with a profit on the duty itself, as a compensation to the merchant for the advance of his money."

All subsequent experience, as indeed all reason itself, confirms this general principle, and the occasional exceptions are not at variance with the principle itself.

In the January Arena Hamlin Garland's much-talked-of novel of the modern West opens brilliantly. The publishers of the Arena claim that this will be "the great American novel," and certainly it bids fair to be by far the strongest work that has yet come from the pen of the brilliant novelist of the West, though this is saying much, as those who have read "Main-Travelled Roads" and "Jason Edwards" will admit. This issue also contains strong papers by Alfred Russell Wallace on "Human Progress: Past and Future"; Prof. A. N. Jannaris, Ph. D., of the University of Greece, Athens, on "Mohammedan Marriage and Life"; Henry Wood, on "The Universality of Law"; Ex-Gov. Lionel A. Sheldon, on "Louisiana and the Levees"; D. G. Watts, on "Walt Whitman"; Chas. Schroder, on "What is Buddhism?" and several other able papers. The Arena fully maintains its brilliant reputation and should be in the homes of all thoughtful people.

The history and the exact methods of the conduct of the business of the Louisiana Lottery Company have, we believe, never been explained in brief compass until the Jannary number of The Forum presented the complete history of the company by one of the founders of the Anti-Lottery League and the editor of the anti-lottery organ of New Orleans. From this narrative it appears that the Lottery Company was organized by a charter given by the Reconstruction Legislature of the State, and the successive stages of its growth are all explained up to the time when it has now put a ticket of its own in the field with the hope of renewing its charter for another 25 years. The total amount of money taken in by the Lottery per annum, if all its tickets are sold, is $28,000,000, and the largest possible amount that can be drawn by the holders of the tickets is a little more than $14,000,000; so that the Lottery puts into its own coffers about 47 per cent of all the money that it receives, and this

Few [illegible] from dys[illegible] well known grocer of Staunton, Va. He says: "Before 1878 I was in excellent health, weighing over 200 pounds. In that year an ailment developed into acute dyspepsia, and soon I was reduced to 162 pounds, suffering burning sensations in the stomach, palpitation of the heart, nausea, and indigestion. I could not sleep, lost all heart in my work, had fits of melancholia, and for days at a time I would have welcomed death. I became morose, sullen and irritable, and for eight years life was a burden. I tried many physicians and many remedies. One day a workman employed by me suggested that I take Hood's Sarsaparilla, as it had cured his wife of dyspepsia. I did so, and before taking the whole of a bottle I began to feel like a new man. The terrible pains to which I had been subjected, ceased, the palpitation of the heart subsided, my stomach became easier, nausea disappeared, and my entire system began to tone up. With returning strength came activity of mind and body. Before the fifth bottle was taken I had regained my former weight and natural condition. I am today well and I ascribe it to taking Hood's Sarsaparilla."

Some time ago a sunstroke so affected my nerves that at times they were beyond control; eyes were dull and without expression, and a twitching of the muscles of the face and almost continual movement of the hands and arms, especially the left side. There was impediment of speech, and at times would be so overcome with dizziness as to be unable to stand. Heard of Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic; tried one bottle, and noticed a great change; tried another, and now can say that I am enjoying perfect health, steady nerves and a good appetite, which I had lost entirely before using your medicine.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT

THE OLD VAGRANT.

Weary and old, here let me die—
Here in this ditch, I care not how,
"He is drunk!" the passers-by may cry,
I do not want their pity now.
'Tis so, save when with shuddering glance
And scarce a pause, their sous they throw;
Why stop to lose the play, the dance?
Pass on, for I can die alone.

Yes, here to time I yield the last,
Since hunger can no longer kill;
I once did hope when youth was past,
My eye some sheltered nook might fill.
But in no refuge was there room,
So many wretches houseless roam!
The streets through life have been my doom;
So, after all, I'll die at home.

When young, to those who earned their bread,
"Teach me your trade," I used to say;
"We scarce find work ourselves," they said,
"Go beg, my lad," and turned away.
Ye rich, who made work, nor saw
How hard I strove, ye gave, 'tis true,
My crust of bread, my couch of straw,
I dare not lay my curse on you.

I might have robbed—I begged instead;
The greatest theft I can recall,
Was but an apple o'er my head
That overhung some garden wall.
Yet, want has such an evil look,
That into jail I oft was thrown;
The only wealth I had, they took:
At least the sunshine was my own.

What country has the poor man? None?
How shared I in your corn and wine?
The battles by your soldiers won—
Your arts, your commerce were not mine.
Yet, when beneath the stranger's rule
The pride of France was crushed and low,
I wept: 'Twas like a thoughtless fool,
For rich and generous was the foe.

If we, indeed, mere vermin are,
'Twere wise to crush us ere we sting;
If men, Oh! teach us—wiser far—
How from our lives some good may spring.
Worm that I am, had human aid
Or guidance reached me, ever I
Might here have labored, loved and prayed,
Where now I leave my curse and die.

—From the French, of Beranger.

Two Single Tax Criticisms Criticized.

Taking first the argument that "the theory derives all its vitality from the principal of confiscation," it must be plain to everyone who will stop a moment to consider, that the tax levy against any persons possessing improvements and personal property, or either of these, of equal values to their land holdings, would not be increased by the adoption of the proposed system, as the abolishment of taxation on one-half their property would compensate them for the increase rate on the other half, since all forms of property are at present taxed at the same ad valorem rate. Admitting however, that those who had recently purchased more land than they could adequately improve might not find the increase of business actively due to the absence of taxation on products sufficient to enable them to dispose of their land holdings at cost, plus the additional tax levy, the system might be said to involve confiscation. But it is useless to think of effecting any reform with exact justice to all. We are, strictly speaking, never called upon to choose between absolute justice and injustice, but between a greater and a less injustice.

The hardship the inauguration of the single tax in the manner suggested might bring about to the class named could certainly be no greater, if nearly as severe, as every change in our import tariff schedule, whether wise or unwise, and every prohibitory game or fishery law.

It has been further objected that the single tax could not be adjusted equitably, as there are some improvements which become so incorporated with the soil that it is impossible to estimate their value separately, and they would be taxed as part of the land value. But what real improvements are there that do not add to the value of the land and thus become indirectly taxed. Have not railroads and canals alone added more to the land value of the United States than all the cultivation, fertilizers or other unreckonable improvement that the soil has received since its discovery? Do not commercial and industrial centers outlive even their outward form, and their past reputations become the guarantee of new and even more prosperous life, though the buildings and wharves and railroads have been ruined by fire or flood? Under the present system the reckonable improvements are taxed twice, first through the additional value they give the land (the land tax always being paid ultimately by the user of the location), and again in a specific tax on the things themselves. The benefits to be derived from the proposed measure lie in the fact that the improvements on any piece of property could be increased indefinitely without any such increase in the owner's share of the tax levy as follows their creation at present; for although the increase of improvements would add to the accessible land value it would augment not alone that of the land on which they were situated, but all lands in proportion to their public usefulness. A justly eminent social and political critic, Mr. Edward Atkinson, has attempted to demonstrate that the coft of land rent in the United States is so small per capita that it can not have any serious effect against the prosperity of the working classes. Were the charges collected in equal proportion from each individual, the figures he gives might not seem exorbitant, provided any adequate benefit accrued from the payment. It is a very different matter, however, when, as is actually the case, this charge is originally mainly levied, as he himself has demonstrated, at industrial or commercial centers. In other words, it is a toll collected on the interchange of commodities, paid only by those who are industrious and capable enough to have anything to exchange. The more idle or incapable a man is, the less he shares in the tax; and the high cost of marketing wares, acting as a restraint on business, accounts for the comparatively low cost per capita of the entire population. If it be true that the majority of the "middle men" are Shylocks, why do not outsiders step in and share in their gains, and by the competition thus created reduce the rates of commission, retail profits, etc. Is it not because when others seek to do this, they find the "enormous profits" vanish in land costs?

This is a moral as well as a social question, and the favoring by the state of speculative shrewdness rather than productive labor must tell on the character of its inhabitants.—H. F. Hudson.

Obituary.

In the week ending October 31, Rev. Hugh Gilmore, of Adelaide, South Australia, died in that city of cancer of the stomach.

Mr. Gilmore was one of the world's great Christian preachers. Born somewhere in the underworld of Glasgow, in 1842, he said of his childhood: "My first recollections are of the busy streets of a large city; they were my home, my school, my playground. I lived in them, slept in them, played in them, starved in them, and nearly perished in them. Within a certain area I knew every lane and alley, every hole and corner, where the flagstones were warmest at every hour of the day, and the most sheltered nook when the winds blew piercing at night. I was thrown among the poorest of the poor, with whom were associated many of the offenders of society—the sinning and the sinned against."

Such a training as Mr. Gilmore's, if undergone by most of our average bishops, would tend to vitalize the human feelings within them, and ward off, to some extent, fatty degeneration of the pulpit. It made Mr. Gilmore the manloving, brave, uncompromising scourge of wrong, and the sturdy apostle of right that he became. "My early contact with the poorest of the poor," he said, "excited in me a belief in the goodness of human nature and a sympathy for men as men, independent of their circumstances." That sympathy was the secret of the great power for good that he exercised.

The story of his early years in Scotland and the north of England was the record of a struggle to live, and to live down the disadvantages of a miserable youth. He became a Wesleyan Methodist preacher, burning with the true apostolic fire, and flung himself into every social movement tending to public good. The Irish tenants knew him, and the Scotch crofters blessed one who dared champion their rights against deer and land owners.

He came to Adelaide in 1889, broken in health, but with a reputation which drew to him audiences of a class often rendered indifferent to the religion of the churches. He showed that he was in earnest always, fighting for the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. And in his denunciation of land monopoly and class robbery of every kind, he did more than is given to most men to do in helping the realization of creed.

It is years since any colony has been so profoundly stirred by a man's death as South Australia was by his. In Adelaide, the day of his funeral seemed a day of public calamity. Thousands upon thousands of all classes stood uncovered in the streets, and the procession of mourners included the trade organizations, single tax men and all who sympathizing with a great life of sleepless endeavor, could show their respect for the dead in this way.

In the brief period of his Adelaide life Mr. Gilmore gave the single tax movement a great impetus.

How They Grow.

Westward Ho! the new illustrated monthly magazine, published at Minneapolis, speaks enthusiastically of the future of Minneapolis, and incidentally illustrates the truth that land values are products of community growth.

"Col. J. H. Stevens," it says, "is authority for the statement that in the spring of 1856 Minneapolis lots had an average value of five dollars each. Shortly before this date, much of the land on which Minneapolis is built was taken up at a dollar and a quarter per acre, most of it being then considered as simply farming land. The conditions existing in those old days probably did not justify a larger price for real estate. A little town on the prairie hundreds of miles from railroad communication, and in a comparatively unsettled country, was not an attractive place for real estate investment. The water power at this point was of little value while the country was still undeveloped, and it would have taxed even prophetic vision to have foreseen the conditions that would exist here in twenty or thirty years.

We can look back now and wonder why men in those by-gone days, who possessed a little money, did not invest in corner lots and keep them until they became worth a fortune. Thirty-five years from now the people then living in Minneapolis will probably look back to this time and wonder why we ourselves did not pursue this course. It is probable that they will be just as much justified in such a judgment by the changes that will have taken place between now and then, as we are by the changes that have taken place during the past thirty-five or forty years."

Cause of Increased Land Values.

Robert White, of Buffalo, asks: A piece of ground nets an annual rent of $100 when the current rate of interest is ten per cent., and its selling price is $1,000. If interest fell to five per cent., other conditions remaining the same, would not the selling price double? and if so, is not the increased value of land due to a decline in interest rather than to improvement?

In the circumstances supposed, the selling price of the land would double. The annual income would remain at $100, and if the land still sold for $1,000, an investor could receive ten per cent. from this investment, while from any other he would only receive five per cent. But this is impossible. All things considered, equal investments yield equal returns. On the face of the statement, the increased selling value of the land is not due to improvement. It is due solely to decline in the rate of interest. But the annual value has not increased at all; rent, the basis of selling value, is exactly what it was before.—The Standard.

THE best and surest subject of taxation is the thing that perforce stays in one place that is land.—N. Y. Sun, Aug 26, 1891.

BURIED IN A MINE.

Awful Loss of Life in an Indian Territory Mine Disaster.

The Deaths Estimated at Over 100—Two Hundred More Injured, One-Half Fatally — Forty-Nine Dead Bodies Found.

A FRIGHTFUL HORROR.

SOUTH MCALLISTER, I. T., Jan. 9.—The horrors of the Diamond mine disaster at Braidwood, Ill., about eight years ago, were reenacted here Thursday night and Friday except that in this instance fire instead of flood was the instrument of destruction. As has already been telegraphed, the miners were preparing to leave shaft No. 11 at Krebs, 5 miles from here, operated by the Osage Coal & Mining Company, shortly after 5 o'clock Friday evening, a terrific explosion occurred spreading death among 400 or more miners at work. It is impossible at present to obtain any accurate information as to the number of the lives lost or persons injured, but it is known that at least 100 men are entombed in the mine, and it is only possible to ascertain their number by a canvass from house to house, which is being made by a committee appointed for the purpose.

The explosion occurred about 5 p. m. Thursday, at which time there were about 400 men at work in the mine. They were the day shift, and were just preparing to ascend when the explosion took place. Six men who had already been hoisted in the cage had just stepped on the platform at the side of the shaft. The cage was blown through the roof of the tower and 50 feet into the air. Flames shot up the shaft and above the ground fully 100 feet, which were followed by a terrific report which was heard for miles around and shook all the neighboring country violently.

The news of the disaster spread quickly through the villages surrounding Krebs. Every physician at once volunteered his services and hastened to Krebs ready to do his duty of mercy. Hundreds of miners from the Braidwood and McAllister fields hurried to the scene to do what they could in assisting in the rescue of the entombed men and the recovery of the dead. The work of rescue was begun at once and has continued all through Thursday night and Friday. The work was hazardous, but the hope that some of the unfortunate men might be rescued alive spurred the rescuers on to many deeds of bravery and possibly self-sacrifice.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 11.—A telegram received from Superintendent Cameron, of the Osage mine at Krebs, says that all the bodies that have been found have been removed from the mine. There may be five or six more bodies under the heavy mass of slate which was dislodged by the explosion. The superintendent says he has six exploring parties at work.

The death list will prove a great deal smaller than first reported. The list now stands sixty-three dead and about one hundred injured.

Prostrated by Gas.

TIFFIN, O., Jan. 11.—During services in Grace Reformed church Sunday natural gas escaping from a defective flue prostrated to a greater or less extent the entire congregation. Fourteen persons fainted and were restored to consciousness by physicians with much difficulty. Many are still suffering. Dr. Hilschman, pastor of the church, is completely prostrated from the effects of the gas.

A New Trial Denied.

DENVER, Jan. 11.—Dr. Graves will not get a new trial unless the Colorado supreme court grants it. Judge Rising has refused a new trial and also denied the motion for a continuance of judgment. A motion for arrest of judgment was then filed. This will be heard to-day and if denied sentence of death will be immediately passed.

Beheaded by a Saw.

MCBAINS, Mich., Jan. 11.—While at work in the mill of J. W. Cromwell Charles Bodary slipped and fell upon a fast-running circular saw. His head was cut off cleanly just below the chin and fell upon one side of the saw, while the unfortunate man's quivering body rolled to the floor on the opposite side.

TECUMSEH HERALD.

Issued Every Thursday Morning.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JAN. 14, 1892.

THE WESTERN GOTHAM.

24 St. John's Place, Chicago, Ill.
Jan. 5, 1892.

Dear Herald.—The new year has come to us with a very chilling hateuur. Stepping out of doors has an effect that reminds us of going into the presence of a $600 per year railroad official. It makes me feel like surrounding a good warm stove for some time to get over it. The usual holiday rush is over and we have all settled back to take a few days' rest, and we need it.

The general topic of interest in the city now is the dastardly attempt at arson and murder that took place on New Year's night. Next door to the fine candy store of Gunther's, on State street, is the store of M. Alexander, a shoe dealer. Friday afternoon found nearly all the places of business closed, and the streets very quiet. A watchman discovered the door of Alexander's shoe store to be open, and going in found that something was wrong. The strong odor of coal oil that filled the store caused him to investigate, and he found in the basement a pile of oil-saturated excelsior, with a tallow candle nearly burned down to the string that held it from falling into the inflammable material prepared to receive it and start the fire that would have undoubtedly destroyed the whole block, and maybe several blocks, as a very strong gale of wind was blowing at the time. The plaster had been knocked from the lath and beams to give the fire a sure headway and it would have been so rapid that the families living in the flats above the store could have had no chance for escape. Five men have been arrested, the proprietor among the number. The general verdict is that hanging is too good for such miscreants. It is hard to imagine how, for a few thousands of insurance, human beings could deliberately lay plans to destroy not only property, but valuale lives. An insatiate greed for money will lead men to depths that are hard to fathom.

Only nine months more remain for the completion of the preparations for the Columbian Exhibition. That the time is ample will be plain to anyone who takes the pains to visit the grounds. Taking a position where one can get a good general view of the vast collection of mammoth buildings, the visitor is filled with amazement that so much could be done in the few short months that have passed since the work was begun, and dispels any fear that he may have been possessed with in regard to finishing the work.

The Non-Partisan W. C. T. Alliance have finished and opened their new Sanitarium for the Dipsocura treatment. I had the pleasure of being present at the opening reception of the Sanitarium at 300 Warren Avenue last Tuesday evening, and that I enjoyed the affair I can most certainly assure you.

For seven years prior to 1886 Dr. F. B. Hargreaves was a partner of Dr. Keeley, of Dwight drink cure fame. During that period both of the doctors prosecuted the research into the possibilities of treating intemperance as a disease. When they separated in 1886, by mutual consent, both of the men had the formula as then used, and while Keeley has been making his fame and fortune at Dwight, Dr. Hargreaves has not been idle. He has perfected the treatment and has demonstrated the fact that he is more successful than the Dwight institute.

A good percentage of the Dwight graduates have suffered from serious after effects from the Keeley treatment. Many have trouble with the eyes, others have loss of memory and brain troubles. I have heard men say that they did not want to go to Dwight for fear of these very things.

Dr. Hargreaves has treated hundreds of patients by his method and there has not been a single failure so far, and not one has experienced any inconvenience through loss of eyesight or memory. And the rapidity with which a cure is effected by the Hargreaves treatment, together with the more moderate charges, brings it nearer the masses.

The ladies of the Non-Partisan Woman's Christian Temperance Alliance have been very fortunate in securing the services of Dr. Hargreaves, and the fact that their Sanitarium is to be under his care will make it the favorite with the public. The ladies will not run their Sanitarium for the purpose of making a fortune for anyone, but to do good for all who need the treatment. All who wish to secure information as to cost and methods of treatment for the liquor or opium habit in its different forms can do so by addressing the secretary of the Sanitarium, 300 Warren Ave., Chicago, Ill.

At the Sanitarium reception I had the pleasure of meeting Dr. Hargreaves and found him a very entertaining and courteous gentleman. The Dipsocura Club attended the reception, and during the evening they gave some of their experiences before meeting Dr. Hargreaves, and then told us of the wonderful things that had been done for them by the new treatment. One board of trade man, who had been so far gone as to take on an average forty drinks of whiskey per day and thirty-five grains of morphine to keep his nerves from breaking, has been cured in less than five weeks. He said that now he could not drink whiskey and did not feel the least need of morphine. I never saw a man who looked so little like the physical wreck they said he was six weeks ago, when he was taken from his bed and carried to Dr. Hargreaves for treatment. He has renewed business at his old place and is a new man. I was a little skeptical when I consented to attend the reception, but came away a firm believer in the efficacy of the Dipsocura treatment for liquor and opiate habits. Temperance organizations throughout the country could do no better work than to use their surplus cash in sending poor drink-besodden men and opium users to the Sanitarium for a release from the disease that holds them helpless in a grasp of iron.

Mrs. M. K. Elliott has been putting in a few weeks in Oklahoma, where she has a large land interest.

Fred Spalding, formerly of Tecumseh, has moved back to Chicago, and is employed in the postoffice.

Sam McClure has been on the sick list for a few days, but will return to his work this week. Sam is a favorite with his new found friends in this city. He is a faithful and honest boy and will have no trouble in making his own way here.

Frank Swick is forging ahead and gaining recognition for his art work, as well as making a warm place for himself in the hearts of many Chicagoans.

Mr. and Mrs. George T. Ketcham passed the holiday season out of town.

The Chicago-Tecumseh colony is well as far as heard from to date.

Joseph Jefferson appears at McVickers this week, for the first time since the death of his partner, Mr. W. J. Florence. Mr. Jefferson's admirers are hoping that he will revive "Caleb Plumber" during this visit.

Last Saturday, at the Haymarket, a "Toy Matinee" was given, and many a child left the theatre with an armful of dolls and other nice playthings. A prize doll worth $125 was given to the holder of the lucky ticket. It was drawn by a little six-year-old boy. All the little girls are green with envy.

It is reported that the directors of the World's Columbian Exposition have decided to allow liquors to be sold on the grounds of the great exhibition. And they say that the newspapers have no right to publish the fact, as it might hurt the show. Don't you say anything about it, for some other paper might be so forgetful of the wishes of the most honorable directors as to say something about it and that might let the feline out of the receptacle and thus hurt the feelings of the most honorable directors as well as the show. It will be so nice to have a National beer garden, where ladies and gentlemen who might get tired of looking at the bric-a-brac and other things, could fill up with firewater and have a genteel old drunk on the National show ground. Of course no one could complain, or be so thoughtless as to murmur if they came into the midst of a hilarious party drunk on national whiskey, for the most honorable directors have said it would not be right to deprive visitors of tipple they might desire. Should a visitor have a symphony in purple and other dark colors painted around his visual apparatus by some drunken director he would not be expected to complain, for it would be so discourteous to the body of most honorable directors.

Yours faithfully,
LaVern F. Wheeler.

An Oriental Romance.

Michigan's favorite son, President Thomas W. Palmer, of the World's fair, is receiving new honors. Recently there was published in Tokio, Japan, an article on the genial ex-Senator, with a regular Japanese woodcut, unadorned with a pigtail, however. President Palmer has had the article translated, and its text, which we find in the Chicago Mail, is as follows:

"The short history of Sir Thomas W. Palmer, director general of the World's Columbian exposition.

"Hon. Sir Thomas W. Palmer was born at Detroit, Washington, June 25, 1830. He is 62 years old now, so he is young among western great men of work. Thomas Palmer, his father, was born at Wendham, Conn., 1789. When he was grown up he emigrated to Michigan, and, about 1809, he had commerce with the Indian flourishingly. His mother was borne at Rhode Island, and his father became a volunteer at the time of Bunker Hill, and it is said that he has been heir of Roger William. Thomas W. Palmer entered into St. Clair college, and afterward graduated at the Michigan University. He has got credit of President Jefferson, and was appointed a judge at the local court of Michigan. While he was on his duty he was very much acquainted with famous Judge Tecamus.

"There is nobody who knows very well old matters of Detroit except him, so his position of director general is very suitable for him. He traveled through the interior of Spain with his comrades. As soon as he came back he began trade in Wisconsin. Afterward he removed to Michigan and pursued his business there. As he resided long there, he gradually has got credit of citizens and finally entered into political society. By and by he was elected a member of the house of lords, and he satisfied very well public hope of the electors.

"He was elected president at the water-course meeting, which was held at Sault Ste. Marie, August, 1889, for investigating the effect about stretching trades with the lower course of lake Superior.

"In 1889 he was appointed plenipotentiary minister to Spain, because he knew the conditions of that country very well, and it is this reason that he was elected director general of the great exhibition, which will be held for the memory of 400 years after Columbus discovered America. It is no doubt that his bravery and patience on doing anything will get him a good effect for the exposition, and will be long mentioned in American histories."

STRONG & McNAIR,

In Memoriam.

Died, January 1st, at his home near this village, Mr. Burdick Burtch, aged 84 years, 3 months and 16 days.

Mr. Burtch was born in Duchess county, N. Y., and his youth and early manhood were spent in that State. At the age of thirty he moved to what is now Fulton county, Ohio, where he remained for thirty years. Thence he removed to Cleveland, Tennessee, where he buried the wife of his youth. Of his four children only one, Guilford P. Burtch, survives him, but ten grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren are living. His daughter, Mrs. Louisa Willetts, of Montana, died on the Monday morning preceding her father's death. February 4th, 1870, he was married to Mrs. B. J. Irwin, of Ionia, Michigan. Almost the entire period of their united lives has been spent in our community, honored and respected by the circle of their acquaintance. The funeral services were held at his late residence on Sunday afternoon, conducted by Rev. F. E. Arnold, and the burial took place Monday at his old home near Spring Hill, Ohio. Thus briefly is summed the record of a long life of faithful and well-directed industry, bringing its reward of competence and respect.

Doubtless one of the best aids to the study of Homer ever published is Autenrieth's Homeric Dictionary, translated, with corrections and additions, by Robert H. Keep, Ph. D., and published by Harper & Brothers. It has been received with such general favor and appreciation that the publishers have prepared a new and revised, edition, which is now ready for immediate issue. The present revision has been performed by Professor Isaac Flagg, of the university of California, whose name alone is a guarantee of its excellence. Almost every American Greek scholar of reputation has also aided in the work by suggesting corrections or helpful additions, and no effort has been spared to adapt the volume perfectly to the needs of American and English students. Several important changes have been made, the value of which will be readily recognized.

We are in receipt of a copy of The Exposition Graphic, a new quarterly issued by the Graphic Company of Chicago, devoted to the World's Columbian Exposition. Portraits of the principal officers of the commission and local directory, scenes of the work of construction in progress at Jackson Park, magnificent views of all the great buildings of the Exposition, engravings showing the principal buildings of Chicago and the other leading cities of the Union, fine full page portraits of President Harrison and Secretary Blaine, engraved by Lautenschlager, and an imposing triple-page bird's-eye view of the Exposition grounds and buildings from designs by the bureau of Construction, are some of the most prominent features of this truly ambitious work. If the succeeding issues shall correspond in excellence with the initial number, The Exposition Graphic will become one of the recognized features of the great international event. It is now on sale at all the principal stands of the country at 50 cents a copy.

Dr. Keeley, of Dwight, suggests a remedy for the grip which has proved almost a specific with patients of his hospital. It is asaœtida. This may be innocent and effective, but we should want to be about ready for Doc's asylum before taking the stuff.

A short letter received this morning from the boss states that he is taking in the whole show at Ann Arbor and enjoying himself immensely. SUDDEN DEATH.

Our townspeople were shocked this morning to hear of the almost instant death of our veteran harness maker and merchant, J. D. Sholes, which occurred last evening about 11 o'clock. Mr. Sholes started for the fire which broke out in Elliott's barn and was taken with pain in the region of the heart. He held his way, however, for several blocks, when he turned back, stopping at Dr. Howell's office. The sufferer was somewhat relieved by a prescription from the doctor and was talking of his trouble and a previous experience with the difficulty when he suddenly expired of neuralgia of the heart. Sickness was almost unknown to our late resident, having suffered but one similar attack which did not prove serious, a fact which makes his demise seem doubly unexpected to the family and friends.

Little is to be recorded concerning this sad and unforseen death, but the long and honorable career of the deceased as a trusted and consistent citizen will make his loss most keenly felt and awaken the deepest sympathy of all for the bereaved family.

WEDDING BELLS. Jan 13

The spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. Minor Davidson, two and a half miles east of this village, was the scene of a large and brilliant gathering last night, the occasion being the marriage of their only daughter, Eunice, to Daniel T. Hall. About 125 guests were present. At 6:30, attended by two ushers, Geo. Sanford and Romaine Hendershot, and two little girls, the latter dressed in white and carrying baskets of flowers, the contracting parties entered the parlor, the bride beautifully dressed in white Lansdown trimmed with swan's-down and cut roses, the groom in the usual black, and took their places beneath a canopy of evergreens and smilax, from which was suspended a lover's knot of smilax and cut flowers. The few appropriate words were spoken by Rev. O. J. Perrin, the vows taken, and Mr. and Mrs. Hall were introduced to the guests. After congratulations, a bounteous repast was served by young gentlemen and lady friends of the bride, and the guests departed, leaving behind them many elegant gifts and hearty good wishes. Mr. and Mrs. Hall took the early train this morning for Cincinnati, O., and Covington, Ky., and will be "at home" to their friends after Jan. 26th. The HERALD joins in the congratulations and "takes the cake."

FUNDS FOR FARMERS.

A Loan of $100,000,000 Asked for by Senator Peffer.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—Senator Peffer, the alliance senator from Kansas, introduced a bill in the senate Thursday intended to secure the loan by the national government of the sum of $100,000,000 to the people of Indiana. The preamble recites that the people of Indiana are laboring under the burden of enormous interest charges made possible by great scarcity of money, the direct result of legislation favoring the credit-owning capitalists and hostile to the wage-earner and producer, resulting in the enforced mortgaging of lands in Indiana to such an extent as to threaten their loss. The bill itself authorizes the secretary of the treasury to issue treasury notes to the amount of $100,000,000. These notes are to be loaned to the people of Indiana on mortgages upon their lands. Every one who accepts a loan of this description is to give a promissory note for the amount, and he is limited in his borrowing to one-half of the cash valuation of his land. To secure a fair rate of interest on the money loaned, the governor of the state is to collect semi-annually a tax of 1 per cent. and turn it into the national treasury. When the principal of the notes falls due, if the promissory notes are unpaid, the mortgages are to be foreclosed and the land sold. If there is no bidder for a tract the land is to be bid in for the United States, and the occupant is to be permitted to remain upon it in consideration of the payment of a rental equal to a tax of 2 per cent. A safeguard upon the issue of the treasury notes under the terms of the bill is provided in a clause limiting their amount to a total not exceeding $100 per capita for the whole population of the state of Indiana.

MUST RECIPROCATE.

An Important Notice Sent by Secretary Blaine to Foreign Countries.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—Reciprocity retaliation will take effect March 15. There never has been any doubt the provisions in the McKinley bill would be strictly enforced, but the formal notice of the president's intention to issue the proclamation will show the countries which first entered into reciprocity arrangements that good faith is to be observed by the United States.

The countries with which arrangements have been concluded up to date are Brazil, Spain for Cuba and Puerto Rico, Santa Domingo, Guatemala, Salvador, Costa Rica, the British West Indies and Germany. Negotiations with Peru, Ecuador and other South American countries except Venezuela are going forward satisfactorily. Venezuela has a considerable trade with the United States and could make some concessions, but its present administration has temporized until now formal notice has been served upon it.

Secretary Blaine has sent notes to the diplomatic representatives in this city of Austria, Hungary, Colombia, Hayti, Nicaragua, Honduras, Spain for the Philippine Islands and Venezuela, informing them that the president would issue his proclamation March 15 next, unless in the meantime some satisfactory reciprocity arrangements should be made with the countries named.

THE KANSAS TROUBLES.

A Running Fight Reported South of Springfield.

A Guard of Armed Men Meet the Slayers of Sheriff Dunn and Four of the Latter Are Said to Have Been Killed.

A FIERCE CONFLICT.

ARKALON, Kan., Jan. 8.—A courier arrived from the border of No Man's Land Wednesday who brings startling information if true, and it is believed. He says a guard of some fourteen mounted and armed men are searching for the party that killed Sheriff Dunn discovered them south of Springfield just breaking camp. The pursuit was commenced and kept up for miles, when the pursuers came within a quarter of a mile of them and counted fifteen men in two wagons. A running fight was kept up for 4 miles.

After an unusually hot fusillade four men were seen to fall from their seats, although it could not be determined whether they were killed or wounded only. The horses of the pursuing party giving out, a detour of half a mile was made to a ranch and fresh horses secured, when the pursuit commenced anew. The courier says the party was determined to follow the fugitives until arrest or death could be reported, though the latter was preferred.

A man named Estes was arrested Thursday morning at his home in Fargo and brought here and delivered to the troops for safe keeping. The county attorney has secured evidence that will implicate him in the conspiracy. He had made plans of all the roads about Judge Botkin's residence and of the canyon in which the battle was fought. These plans he had previously delivered in Springfield and Woodsdale. Thursday afternoon two more prisoners were brought in, charged with having been of the party that was engaged in the canyon battle. One, C. S. Anderson, is chairman of the board of county commissioners of Seward county, and the other, J. J. Leach, is a prominent alliance man. In fact, all five prisoners now held are alliance men.

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 8.—Gov. Humphrey has wired Gen. Murray Myers at Wichita that the situation in Seward county is assuming more serious proportions and instructing him to order the local company under arms to remain so until further orders ready to leave for the troubled districts on short notice. Gen. Myers was ordered to report at once to Adjt. Gen. Roberts at Arkalon, and after having surveyed the situation to call out the local troops if necessary.

ARKALON, Kan., Jan. 9.—Two wounded men who arrived here Friday confirmed the indefinite report received Thursday of a running fight near the Oklahoma line between a portion of the murderers of Sheriff Dunn and the party of Judge Botkin's friends. These were Ezra B. Farwell and John Naughton, two farmers living in the southern part of Haskell county. Farwell was shot in the hip and Naughton in the arm. The two men dropped out of the pursuing party Thursday night in No Man's land and made their way to Liberal, where their wounds were dressed.

Deputy Sheriff Custer has just returned from Springfield. He reports more of the plot to kill Judge Botkin than has heretofore been known. According to his story the plot was for the killing of Botkin at Hugoton one week from Tuesday next, and Mrs. S. N. Wood, the wife of the man killed by Brennan, was to do the killing, according to his statement. She has been practicing with a revolver in order to acquire a correct aim, but after the plans had been matured the conspirators could not be restrained. Custer claims to have proof of this.

The census shows a total of 5,972 families. The total number of Indians on the reservation is 20,675, of whom 9,752 are males and 10,923 females. This is 2,500 below the number drawing rations. Included in the figures given are 428 Cheyennes now at Fort Keogh.

Will Open the Sisseton Reservation.

BROWN'S VALLEY, Minn., Jan. 11.—Congressman Pickler, of South Dakota, telegraphs that President Harrison will open the Sisseton-Wahpeton reservation to settlement about April 15. This throws 400 quarter-sections open to homestead entry. Claimants are already here, and the early spring will bring an army of home-seekers.

Two Men Hang at Once.

ALBANY, Ga., Jan. 9.—Solomon Rowell and Robert Richardson, two of the men concerned in the riot at Morgan, Calhoun county, one year ago, were privately hanged in that town Friday at sunrise and from the same gallows. Richardson's neck was broken by the fall, but Rowell was strangled to death.

A Murderer Sentenced.

PONTIAC, Ill., Jan. 9.—Daniel North has been sentenced to thirty-three years in the penitentiary for killing Marshall Hodge, July 21, 1890.

WOMEN WHO DIE EARLY.

Many of our most beautiful and accomplished ladies die before they have reached the prime of life. Of those who live to middle age only one in two hundred is sound: the other one hundred and ninety-nine are sufferers. Why is it? Self neglect. The shattered health can be restored; the home made happy, and your life lengthened if you commence at once.

THE FRENCH POLICE.

Revelations of a Stranger in the Streets of Paris.

An Apocalyptic Narrative of an English Nobleman to an American Friend, Showing How His Life Was Preserved by a Secret Agent of the Police.

Many years ago, I arrived in Paris a perfect stranger, and took lodgings at Meurice's famous English hotel. Having been shown to my apartments and made some change in my toilet, I went out for a short stroll in that great and magnificent city—that heart, as it were, of the world. I had some letters of introduction, but, as I had not yet presented them, I believed myself wholly unknown to a living soul in that metropolis, except, it might be, to the officers who read my passport at the gates and the clerk who had seen me register my name, and that either should have fixed that name in their recollection was something that my modesty had not yet permitted me to take into consideration.

Judge of my surprise, therefore, when I had gone but a few steps from Meurice's, 42 Rue de Rivoli, toward the beautiful palace-garden nearly opposite, to hear myself addressed as follows:

"Will Monsieur Henry Neville have the kindness to answer me a few important questions?"

I turned to the speaker, and saw at a glance he was a total stranger to me—that I had never, to my knowledge, looked upon his face before. He was a middle-aged man, of rather prepossessing appearance, with gray hair, eyebrows and mustache, and was dressed as a plain, substantial citizen.

"I will do myself the pleasure to oblige you," I replied, in a polite and courteous tone. "Permit me first to remark, however, that you have a little the advantage of me, in that you already know my name."

"Monsieur will please know me as Eugene St. Medard."

"Did we ever meet before?"

"It is monsieur that has now become the questioner," rejoined the Frenchman, with a peculiar smile and a kind of formal bow, half dignified, half polite, as if he would have said the questions were only to come from his side.

Somehow I felt just a trifle vexed and nettled at the look and tone, and remarked, a little coldly:

"I take it for granted one has the same right to interrogate as the other."

The features of the stranger grew grave, as one who feels a little annoyed, and his reply was impressive, without being exactly stern.

"If monsieur will be kind enough to waive his right in this instance," he said, "it may save us both some time and trouble."

I scarcely knew why—perhaps something in the look, tone and manner—but the idea now suddenly occurred to me that I was speaking to a man in authority—and I said, respectfully:

"Proceed, Monsieur St. Medard."

"Thank you, monsieur. You are an Englishman?"

"I am."

"You are distantly related to the earl of Malvern?"

"So distantly that his lordship could never get near enough to know our family," I replied, pleasantly, not a little surprised that a French stranger should know so much about me, and wondering all the while to what result his questions might be tending.

"You were an only child?"

"Yes."

"Your parents are dead?"

"Yes."

"You were left a small inheritance, which you have lately converted into money and brought with you, thinking it not unlikely you might take a fancy to settle on the Continent?"

"All true, monsieur; but your knowledge of me and my private affairs astonishes me."

"Let that pass. The family of his lordship, the earl of Malvern, has been unfortunate; no near of kin remain to him."

"Two profligate sons of a deceased sister are the nearest, I believe."

"They are both dead, monsieur. One died of heart-disease in Germany, the other was stabbed to death in Rome."

"Dead!" exclaimed I, with a start, for this was news to me.

"Are you sure?"

"Certainly, monsieur."

"Both of them! This astonishes me still more! I had not heard of this."

"I know it."

"It seems to me you know everything!" said I, with a stare of wonder.

Monsieur St. Medard smiled and continued:

"You are now the heir presumptive, monsieur."

"If what you tell me is true, I am!" exclaimed I, almost startled at the thought of being so near to an earldom—for the then lord was old and feeble and might drop off at any minute.

"Do you know who is next of kin after yourself, monsieur?" inquired my strange interrogator.

"I think I have heard it is one William Byerly."

"Right. Do you know him?"

"Something by report."

"Personally?"

"No."

"Did report speak favorably of him?"

"I am sorry to say it did not."

"From what you heard, do you consider him an honest man?"

"I do not."

"As you alone now stand between him and an earldom, after the death of the present lord, would you consider your life safe in his hands?"

"Before I answer this question, will you permit me to ask some two or three?" said I.

"Proceed, monsieur."

"Are you William Byerly?"

"No."

"Are you related to him?"

"No."

"Are you a friend of his?"

"No."

"Do you intend to use my reply in a legal way?"

"No."

"Is your object in these questions friendly to me?"

"Yes."

"Then I venture to say that I should not like, under present circumstances, to trust my life in the hands of William Byerly, provided there were a single chance of his escaping detection in case of willful murder."

"Very well. May I now proceed?"

"Yes, monsieur."

"You will please answer to each statement of mine as if a question were directly put. On your way to Dover a fellow-passenger made your acquaintance?"

"Yes."

"You first saw him at Tunbridge?"

"Yes."

"You first noticed him while you were taking some refreshments at a restaurant?"

"Yes."

"He came up alongside of you, having a carpet-bag in his hand, and made some commonplace remark about the weather?"

"Yes," I continued to answer, getting more and more astonished every minute.

What could it all mean? Had every action of my life been noted, and for what purpose? My strange interrogator proceeded:

"This stranger was dressed in a black coat, with black cloth buttons, striped trousers, a parti-colored tie, a white hat and patent-leather boots?"

"Yes."

"He had reddish hair, reddish whiskers, a florid complexion, and wore a green patch over his left eye?"

"Yes."

"After some commonplace remarks, he ventured to ask you which way you were traveling?"

"Yes."

"You replied you were going to Paris?"

"Yes."

"He was delighted to hear it, because he was going there also, and it was very pleasant, in a foreign country, to have a traveling companion from one's native land?"

"Yes."

"On the whole, he made so favorable an impression upon your unsuspicious mind, that you were quite pleased to have his company?"

"Yes."

"On your way to Dover, he gave you some account of his past life—of his trials, struggles, disappointments and successes?"

"Yes."

"He was an inventor—a man of genius, who had lived to benefit mankind and himself? England owed much to him, and so did France and so, in fact, did the whole world?"

"His statements were to that effect."

"Very well, monsieur, as I have shown you that I know the nature of your conversation, it is not necessary that I weary you with detail. This man, this inventor, was going to Paris to take out a patent for a new motive power—one that was destined to revolutionize the world. He was very sorry he could not show it to you then; but until his papers should be filed in the proper department he would not trust his own father with the secret."

"All correct, monsieur."

"Now, most unfortunately, as it appeared, on reaching Dover, where you were to take the regular steamer for Calais, your new acquaintance in some way unknown to you received the startling intelligence that his father was lying at the point of death, which would require him to post to London immediately; and would you, in whom he had every confidence, do him the favor to take charge of a small box containing some important papers and on your arrival in Paris open it and deliver them to the proper addresses?"

"Yes, monsieur," said I, becoming most intensely interested.

"Curiosity, monsieur," continued the Frenchman, "is not one of your failings, I am happy to say, or you might not now be living to hear what I have to reveal."

"Good heavens!" ejaculated I, "what is coming now?"

"That same box, monsieur, is an infernal machine, intended to destroy your life the moment you open it!"

"Can it be?" I exclaimed, with a thrill of horror. "Can this be possible?"

"I will prove it. Get it, and come with me before a commissary of police!"

"Pray, monsieur, who are you?"

"A secret agent of police."

I hastened to get the box, handling it with great care, and together we proceeded to the nearest commissary, when, with my permission, it was split open, and lo! to my astonished and horrified gaze was revealed a row of small, loaded pistols, so arranged that, had I unlocked and opened the box in an ordinary way, they would have been discharged into my body.

On my subsequently asking for an explanation concerning this mysterious affair—how so much connected with myself and others had become known to the police of a foreign city—I was gravely but politely answered:

"It is not allowed us, monsieur, to reveal our sources of information. We are happy to have thwarted the plans of a villain and saved your life."

I never knew who that villain was, though I always suspected Byerly of having a hand in it. I do not know that my life was ever again attempted, but certain it is I never again permitted intimacy from an unknown stranger.

On my accession to the title and estates, which occurred the following year, I did not forget to reward Eugene St. Medard, alias Henri Pouget, secret agent of police, as I thought he deserved to be rewarded for the preservation of my life, and to this day I have not ceased to wonder over the perfection of the French system of police.

The Pathogenic Microbe,

Or poison bearing germ, exercises a most destructive influence, and is continually waging war against health. Innumerable is this mighty foe and but few escape his injury. Entering the system through the blood, this poisonous germ infects every part of the body, and spreads its deadly virus everywhere. Under ordinary conditions it multiplies rapidly and soon maintains a stronghold upon the human body. To overcome this enemy and put an end to its destruction has for a long while occupied the time and energies of scientists. Their labors have at last been rewarded with success and a most important discovery has thus been made known to the world. It has been shown that this germ can be forced from the body through the pores of the skin, and that this is the only method by which a permanent and sure cure of diseases of the blood can be effected. S. S. S. has for years been curing blood diseases and their results, and it is by this method of eliminating all impurities through the skin that it has performed its great work. All manner of complaints having their origin in an impure and disordered condition of the blood have been successfully treated by this unrivalled blood medicine. Being purely a vegetable preparation S. S. S. is entirely harmless and no bad effects result from its use.

The Episcopal ladies are anticipating quite an additional sum for the belfry fund from the sale of reserved seats Thursday night. There is only ten cents extra charge and surely it is worth that much to be able to wait until a reasonable hour and be sure of obtaining a seat.

The Lecture Course committee wish those holding tickets to understand that the lecture Saturday evening will commence at 7:30 sharp, as the lecturer is obliged to leave on the evening train. Those who heard James Whitcomb Riley last year will hardly need an invitation to be on time, as they realize that they cannot afford to lose one word of such a masterpiece as was then given. He will undoubtedly be greeted with a crowded house.

The Thousand Dollar Poem.

The editor of the Rocky Mountain Colt won the prize of one thousand dollars offered by the syndicate of Western editors for the best appeal poem to newspaper subscribers to pay up their subscriptions. This is the poem he wrote:

Lives of poor men oft remind us
Honest men won't stand a chance;
The more we work there grows behind us
Bigger patches on our pants:—
On our pants, once new and glossy,
Now are stripes of different hue,
All because subscribers linger
And won't pay us what is due.
Then let all be up and doing,
Send your mite, however small,
Or when the snows of winter strike us
We shall have no pants at all.

THE HERALD FOR 1892.

The "Old Reliable" is still on deck and prepared for the campaign of 1892. Performance is better than promise. Recognizing this fact, we have no special pledges to make for the coming twelve months. The record which the HERALD has made during the past seventeen years, under its present management, is a sufficient guarantee of its ability to maintain its position among the chief exponents of local journalism in Southern Michigan. The general policy of the paper is well known. While it will not be a political organ, in the party sense of that term, it will always be found battling for the rights and welfare of the people. Whatever tends to strike the shackels from trade and open foreign markets for farmers and manufactures; whatever tends to increase the volume of both gold, silver and paper money, without degrading its value; whatever tends to break up the monopoly in unused land and give the poor man a chance to obtain a home of his own; whatever tends to give every laborer regular employment at fair daily wages the HERALD will uphold and sustain. Our chief aim, however, will be to make the HERALD a first class local newspaper, a faithful chronicler of all local happenings within the territory of its circulation. FRANKLIN FACTS.

Remember the debate Saturday night at Hunt's.

Our thanks are due Mr. Hosmer and Mr. McNair for the loan of some valuable literature on the finances.

E. J. Whelan's family, Burt Billington, L. E. Taylor and Mart Whelan are among the latest victims of grippe.

They had a little blaze at Mrs. A. B. Wisner's Tuesday night. The "boss" flew frantically around, spilling some water in unnecessarye places. There was only one boy at home and he, with the sang froid of the rising generation, remarked that he wasn't going on the roof till he got his rubber boots on, if the house did burn up. He wasn't long getting them on, though. The blaze was extinguished and peace and order restored.

The sad tidings received Monday of the death of Mary, wife of Wm. Lamkin, came like a shock to her many friends. Last Friday she received a severe stroke of paralysis which left her unconscious to the end. Her son Frank, who was in Washington, D. C., was apprised by telegram Sunday of her dangerous illness. He started at once, arriving in Tecumseh on the night train Monday to find that his mother had passed to the eternal rest early Monday morning. The deceased never enjoyed robust health, yet so carefully was she guarded by her family that her friends thought not to lose her thus early in life;—and she was worthy of all love and devotion—her life so true, even and mild. Funeral at the house Thursday, at 11 a. m.

Miner Miller died January 4th, 1892, in his 80th year. Mr. Miller was one of the old pioneers, having lived in this vicinity nearly sixty years. He owned a threshing machine and did the farmer's threshing way back in the "forties". Built what is known as the Easlick saw-mill in the winter of '53, '54, and when the mill started May 10, '54, it brought together as big a crowd as the 4th of July, it being the only mill in the country of greater speed than the old fashioned sash mill. He was a soldier in the rebellion, where he contracted rheumatism, from which he has been a great sufferer for many years; was a pensioner at only $16 per month, while many others with less disability are receiving many times that amount. He leaves a wife and large family of children, the latter all married and gone from the old home except the the youngest son. His immediate family thank the neighbors and friends for their kindness and generosity to their wants in his last sickness, death and burial.

OBITUARY.

The following beautiful tribute to the memory of Mrs. Florence Shepard Peters is taken from the Bur Oak Acorn and was written by Rev. H. Shepard, a former pastor of the Universalist Church of Tecumseh. The deceased was a graduate of our High School. She was a young lady of rare social and musical accomplishments and was a universal favorite during the years of her residence in Tecumseh. Her death deprives a husband of a loving wife and four little children of a fond mother. The deceased had many friends in Tecumseh whose hearts will beat in unison with those of the afflicted family in this hour of bereavement.

FLORENCE SHEPARD-PETERS.

Daughter of Henry and C. E. Shepard, died at Cleveland, O., January 5, 1892, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, of acute pneumonia, aged 28 years.

So far as proper for us to speak (for others will speak through other papers) we will say: that we visited her Christmas and left her the morning before New Years. We left her with a hard cold, but none apprehended she would grow worse. But New Year's day, while visiting at Eaton Rapids, her sister Mary received a telegram that Florence had pneumonia. She could not go until next day, and as she started a telgram came that she was better, but on Tuesday a telegram came, "Come immediately." Before Mrs. Shepard's arrival she left us.

We did not know she had so many friends—laudations from social rank, from friends and neighbors, from ministers and little ones, and those she lived for and had cheered and helped. We cannot tell it. One item we will mention: besides flowers which covered her bier the firm of which her husband is an employee, and the clerks, sent $85 as a gift, to use as he chose; 17 of the clerks and one of the firm attended the services at the house, and six of those most intimate bore all that remained of her here to a beautiful lot in Riverside Cemetery, where her tired body has at last beautiful rest, while her soul flows on like the river at her side, forever, where the green pastures are and the stiller waters of life.

Of her qualities we will say only that her mind, though not forced, was intensely active and unquenchable. At seven she showed great taste for books and music; at 10 she played most difficult pieces; at 13 taught music; before the age of 14 she passed high school examination; at 18 she taught in the high school at Tecumseh, where she graduated; at 19 she taught at Grand Haven, Mich., where she remained until married, which will be remembered here; latterly she developed gifts for story writing, but most she loved little children, the tasteful and true and good in nature, in God and humanity; and so she takes up life anew. If such hopes fail, life is a mockery and a failure.

Every soul that lives has some grave, which is its Mecca, and sooner or later it is manifest that to all lovers of the high, the tender, the beautiful, the true and the good, in nature, in revelation, or humanity, that they who are one with the eternal purpose, running through all these, they mount up at once like eagles, whilst wickedness, sin and evil, which we see diminishing in this world, yea, death itself, and all pain and misery, are destined to fall out, lag behind, or be overcome and left behind like falling leaves, to perish forever. But the fruit and discipling of these, as much as that of happiness, God gathers and ripens and saves and perfects, forever and ever.

MANY CITIES WILL FIGHT TO GET THE CONVENTION.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(Special) To what city shall be given the honor of holding the National Democratic Convention?

Will it be Kansas City, St. Paul, or Milwaukee, none of which have before contested for the privilege, or will one of the old-timers, such as New York, Cincinnati, or San Francisco carry off the prize?

So far as New York is concerned she may be dismissed with a word. She will send a delegation here as she did last month, when the Republican committee met, but there are no indications that she either hopes or expects to secure the Convention. There is little doubt that if New York was in earnest in the matter and if she would set actively at work that she could get the committee to send the Convention there. There is a kindly feeling among democrats of all classes, not only for the State of New York, but particularly for her great metropolis, but the impression exists that the New York men who will come here and ask for the Convention are not in earnest: that their main purpose is to have a "good time" and to participate in the exciting scenes attendant upon the meeting of the committee and nothing more. It is for this reason that the friends of the other cities are not considering New York as a factor in the contest, but are laying their plans without regard to anything that her representatives may do or say.

CHICAGO OUT OF IT.

Chicago, which is a formidable and generally successful rival in contests of this nature, will not be a candidate this year. She put forward no claim for the Republican Convention, believing that the World's Fair, which Congress generously gave her, is sufficient honor to last her until 1896. This is the reason the republicans of the Windy City advanced for their lack of interest in the matter, and the democrats are evidently inspired by the same consideration.

The Democratic National Committee will meet in this city on Thursday, January 21. It is rather early as yet to hazard a prediction, but it looks at this time as if the contest would in the end narrow down to Milwaukee, Kansas City and Cincinnati. With New York out the race will be confined wholly to the Western and Northwestern cities. If Omaha comes forward as a claimant it is possible that the argument in favor of the trans-Mississippi country will again prevail and that San Francisco and Kansas City will combine with her in favor of one of the trio.

Kansas City will make a big bid for the Convention. She has already appointed her committee and will come East fifty strong. George Putnam, president of the Commercial Club, will head the delegation, with Major Warner as chief aid. They will have a guarantee fund of $100,000, from which they propose to erect a Convention hall to seat ten thousand persons at a cost of $50,000. They make the claim that Kansas City is the metropolis of the mid-continent. A resident of Portland, Oregon, they say, is as near to Kansas City as a resident of Portland, Me.

KANSAS CITY'S ADVANTAGES.

There are seventeen trunk lines running into Kansas City, and her railroad facilities are, it is claimed, second to none. Mr. Tarsney, the Kansas City representative, said that his city would ask the Convention upon the ground that the territory tributary to Kansas City was in a most unsettled condition politically and the influence of a great national convention upon that section must necessarily be considerable. The city contains, he said, seventy hotels, two of which are larger and better than any other hostelries between Chicago and San Francisco. They propose to make an earnest fight for the Convention and he believes that they will succeed. Milwaukee is hot on the trail of Kansas City. She has raised a guarantee fund of $200,000, claims ample hotel accommodations, a convention hall entirely adequate, and has appointed a committee of her leading citizens to come to Washington and take the Convention away with them. The proprietor of one of the great brewing companies has guaranteed $50,000, and his representative in Washington, Mr. William Dickson, who is also a member of the Democratic National Committee, has been hard at work for a week past in Milwaukee's interests. Mr. Dickson expects the special committee to arrive here next Sunday, and has engaged quarters for them at the Arlington. Mr. Dickson, like Mr. Tarsney, of Kansas City, does not regard New York and Chicago as competing for the Convention. He thinks that either of the two big cities could get the Convention if they cared enough about it to come to Washington and enter the contest in earnest. Mr. Dickson says the Milwaukee people fear Kansas City, and Mr. Tarsney regards Milwaukee as the most dangerous opponent of his town.

CINCINNATI IS TO WIN.

Cincinnati is in the fight for the Convention to win. She has appointed a committee of her leading citizens, who will come to Washington next week and open headquarters at the Arlington. The delegation will be headed by Mayor Mosely, and Senator Brice will be on hand to do everything in his power to aid the movement. Cincinnati makes the same political claim that is advanced by Milwaukee and Kansas City. While Milwaukee claims that the good work of redeeming the great Northwest from republican control should go on, and Kansas City says that the territory tributary to that town is in an unsettled condition politically, and can be brought into the democratic fold, Cincinnati asserts that the placing of the Convention there would be a great encouragement to the local democracy, and to the democracy of the neighboring States of Kentucky and West Virginia as well.

San Francisco has been a candidate so often and has failed so persistently that her competitors in the fight for the Convention are not inclined to regard her seriously. But the people from the Golden Gate are more in earnest this time than ever before. They claim that the committee of citizens appointed to come to Washington and ask that the Convention be located on the Pacific Slope is the best committee that ever went out of 'Frisco. The delegation will be headed by ex-Mayor E. B. Pond. Like the other committees 'Frisco will have headquarters at the Arlington. They will have a guarantee fund, the amount of which has not been definitely settled as yet, and will ask the location of the Convention on the Slope for the political effect it will have. They will agree to take all delegates and newspaper correspondents to San Francisco, care for them while there and send them back home at the committee's expense.

DETROIT'S CLAIM.

Eight electoral votes for the democratic nominee, with others likely to be won, is the convincing argument which Detroit presents why she should have the convention. The working politicians are rather caught with the idea of rewarding the Michigan democrats for their smartness in splitting up the vote of the State, although some of the more mugwumpish members of the committee say that it would be a discredit to the national democracy to put the stamp of its approval on the Michigan method by holding the Convention in Detroit. The workers ridicule this argument and say that if Michigan has made the election of a democratic President possible she deserves to be rewarded for it. The Detroit democrats have arranged for a guarantee of $50,000, and will have a delegation of fifty here urging that Detroit is the practical center of the country for convention purposes. They declare that they are going to make a much stronger fight than the representatives of the republican organization made to get their party convention there.

Still another of the competitors will be St. Paul. She will advance the argument that the Democratic Convention should be placed there in order to offset the influence of the holding of the Republican National Convention at Minneapolis. She will send on a committee of citizens. They will make the same claims made by her sister city of Minneapolis, when an applicant for the Republican Convention. They will assert that the two cities are practically one, although they are a good ten miles apart. St. Paul also has a guarantee fund of $100,000 for the erection of a convention hall.

The only other city that is expected to enter the contest is Omaha. The question has been agitated there, but as yet they have appointed no committee of citizens and have no guarantee fund with which to back up their claim for the Convention.

TARIFF REFORM.

A Proposed Bill For the Collection of the Revenue—Reforming the Tariff.

Congressman William J. Coombs, of Brooklyn, has prepared the following resolution concerning customs duties to be offered in the house of representatives:

Resolved, That the committee of ways and means be directed to prepare and present to this house a bill for the collection of revenue and other purposes substantially upon the basis and principle of the following propositions:

The bill shall have four schedules as follows:

Schedule A—To be composed of articles free of duty, including all raw materials necessary in the manufacture of goods.

Schedule B—To be composed of articles which by their nature should not pay a duty exceeding 10 per cent.

Schedule C—To be composed of articles, principally wine, spirits, tobacco, cigars and cigarettes, and upon which a duty must be charged sufficient at least to protect manufacturers, who pay a tax under our internal revenue laws. Also, of a few well-defined articles of luxury, which will bear a rate of at least 40 per cent ad valorem.

Schedule D—To be known as the schedule for the protection of labor, and which shall be made up from time to time in the manner herein specified.

All articles not covered by the preceding lists shall be grouped and known as "unspecified," and shall have a uniform rate of ad valorem duty as provided hereafter.

The bill shall also provide that as soon as congress shall ascertain the amount of money necessary for the conduct of the government for the current year, it shall submit a report to the same, deducting therefrom the following items:

(a) Surplus remaining over from preceding year.

(b) Estimated income from internal revenue.

(c) Estimated income from schedule B.

(d) Estimated income from schedule C.

(e) Estimated income from schedule D.

(f) Estimated income from all other sources.

Which amounts being deducted from the amount to be provided for, the expenses of the government will leave as a result the amount to be raised by import tax on all "unspecified" articles.

It shall, in its report to congress, estimate the gross value of such importations for the current year and the percentage of duty necessary to be levied on the same in order, as near as may be, to realize the amount ascertained as above.

The bill shall also provide that in case any manufacturer or manufacturers of goods or merchandise included in the class "unspecified" shall find that the item of labor cost, including the use of machinery, of his productions in this country shall exceed that paid by the manufacturers of the same class of goods made in foreign countries, he may present sworn proofs of the same to the committee, with the demand that such articles shall be entered on schedule D. If, upon examination, the committee find that the statements are correct, or if they find that any difference exists in favor of the foreign manufacturer, they shall cause the article or class of articles to be entered upon schedule D, with a specific duty equal to such difference, always provided that the article is not protected by letters patent issued by this government.

DISCOUNTS FOR EXPORT.

How Trusts Keep Up Prices Here By Selling Cheaper Abroad—Testimony of Secretary Rusk and A. B. Farquhar—Illustrations From the Ax Trust.

When the manufacturers of harvesters were holding meetings for the purpose of considering the best ways and means of consolidating their interests in the form of a "trust" J. R. Rusk, the secretary of agriculture, who is a stockholder in one of the companies which entered the "trust," said in an interview in the New York Tribune: "An investigation will show that this same combination is now selling, or offering to sell, machinery in Russia, Australia and other wheat-growing countries at a lower figure than they do in this country." That this system of selling cheaper to foreigners than to our own farmers is adopted by other manufacturers of farm implements is shown by Mr. A. B. Farquhar, of York, Pa., one of the largest manufacturers of agricultural machinery and implements in the United States. In May last Mr. Farquhar, in replying to a letter of inquiry written to him by the Home Market club of Boston, said: "In reply to your favor of the 16th inst. I have to acknowledge that our firm sells implements and machinery through Mexico, South America and Africa at prices from five to ten per cent. less than they are sold for in this country."

This system of favoritism to foreigners is characteristic of the trusts in this country. Trusts are formed by manufacturers in the same industry for two purposes. First—To limit and control productions, and second—To control prices and thus prevent competition. The ultimate aim, to accomplish which trusts are organized, is to increase profits. Whenever they fail to gauge the extent of the home demand and have on hand more of their products than the home market will take at the high and arbitrary prices they fix, the trusts resort to exportation to dispose of their surplus. In foreign markets they must meet the prices at which their competitors in other countries are willing to dispose of their productions. Since the prices which prevail here under our tariff are higher than in other countries for the same products, the trusts give what is known as special export discounts on home prices to foreign buyers. These extra discounts are in most cases a combination of two forms. In order to prevent the foreign buyers from selling their goods in this country again, the trusts pay the freight to and put the goods on board ship at the port of exportation. This of itself is equivalent in most cases to a liberal discount. In addition to this they also give a special discount on home prices varying all the way from five to twenty-five per cent.

In some cases the trusts go further and agree to lay the goods down at the wharves in the foreign port, paying all the freight. This is the system adopted by the glass trusts.

How the trusts operate to keep up prices here and to sell their surplus abroad, so that it will not interfere with their home trade, is well illustrated by the history of the American Ax and Tool Co., commonly known as the "ax trust." The first meeting of the manufacturers of axes was held in February, 1890. At a subsequent meeting in March the trust completed its organization.

As soon as the trust was organized it raised prices, as the following from the Iron Age for March 27, 1890, shows: "The general feeling among the trade is that the ax-makers have formed a very strong 'association,' and have complete control of the market, or so nearly so that the outside makers will have scarcely any appreciable effect on the prices. It is found that scarcely any orders can be placed with outside manufacturers who are not under the control of the American Ax and Tool Co. The trade will do well to note the changed condition in this line of goods as regards the higher prices now ruling, and the strong probability of their maintenance for some time to come. On first quality goods an advance is now made of $1.75 to $2.25 per dozen."

This advance has been well maintained. Before the trust was formed plain axes of the best brands were selling at $5.25 per dozen. They now sell at $7 per dozen.

So far as concerns the home market the trust has been successful in that it is able to get at least $1.75 more for a dozen axes than the manufacturers who formed it were able to get before. It has been able to do this by its complete control over production here.

And now as to the way it disposes of its surplus abroad. In its foreign trade the trust is represented by branch houses in Few York. Thus the branch which exports its products to the Spanish countries of South America is under the charge of G. P. Maleza.

The makes of axes known to the trade as the "Ohio," "Yankee" and "Kentucky," which the trust sells in this country for $7 per dozen, are offered by Maleza for export for $6 per dozen, delivered on board ship. Other brands and shapes are sold at similarly low prices.

By putting their products on board ship, and getting the bill of lading, the trust is able to prevent home buyers from taking advantage of its low prices to foreigners.

What is true of the manufacturers of all classes of agricultural implements, and the ax trust, is true of other trusts depending on the tariff for their existence, and using the protection thus given them to swell their profits by high prices at home.

Doubtless the great apostle of high protectionism, ex-Congressman R. G. Hoar, who is employed by the New York Tribune to tell the farmers how good a thing the McKinley tariff is for them, will say of this as he did of the letter of Mr. Farquhar that it is an "abominable free trade falsehood."

Some time ago a sunstroke so affected my nerves that at times they were beyond control; eyes were dull and without expression, and a twitching of the muscles of the face and almost continual movement of the hands and arms, especially the left side. There was impediment of speech, and at times would be so overcome with dizziness as to be unable to stand. SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

GEORGE'S DEBUT IN GOTHAM.

How "Progress and Poverty" Was Introduced to the Public.

It is about ten years since Henry George arrived in New York. The future-great apostle of a single tax based on the value of land was but a lonely stranger in Gotham, and the ghost of an idea that he would ever run for mayor of that town, if it had glimmered before his mental vision, would not have been worth even a laugh. He soon chanced to run across Bill McCabe, an old friend from San Francisco, which made him feel more at home. McCabe, since chairman of the celebrated Typographical Union, No. 6, of New York, and otherwise prominent in the cause of labor vs. capital, was an interesting character. His father, on dit, was an adventurous Scotchman, and his mother a New Zealand princess. McCabe was never anything, but proud of his royal Maori lineage. He, it is said, was also distinguished as the youngest Union soldier in the civil war from California. McCabe, always interested in economic and social questions, became acquainted with Henry George in San Francisco and readily adopted and indorsed his theories.

When George ran across McCabe in New York, the latter was foreman of the composing room of the original daily newspaper called Truth. Its principal owner was Josh Hart, the ex-theatrical manager, and proprietor also of the Dramatic News, a publication whose devotion to the personal interests of the professional wearers of sock and buskin was not always heartily welcomed by those condemned to be pilloried in its columns. The editor of both Truth and the Dramatic News was Charles A. Byrne, then a critic and lately a librettist.

A member of the editorial staff and a part owner of Truth was Louis F. Post, a good-natured, able, easy-going young lawyer, who liked to write, and was willing to sacrifice personal success to benefit his fellowmen. McCabe talked up George and his views to Post, who succeeded in interesting Hart in them. McCabe then brought George around and introduced him and the result of the evolution his arguments superinduced in the minds of the men who made Truth, was the publication by that journal of Henry George's now world-renowned "Progress and Poverty," by chapters, in the Sunday issue. The paper soon after stood sponsor for and advocated George's proposition to lighten the financial burden of the people by putting it on the value of the land, which value the people's proximity creates.

Thus is described Henry George's introduction to New York city and the East. McCabe is to-day the manager of the mechanical department of the Standard, the organ of the George branch of the single tax army, and Post is editor of the paper. Both men, throughout, have remained Henry George's nearest counsellors, and have attained local prominence and note among the adherents of the single tax theory everywhere. Henry George alone has made money with the combined assistance of his writing, lecturing and the movement generally. The unfrocked priest, McGlynn, and the ex-preacher, Hugh O. Pentecost, have parted from Henry George, and started single tax schools of their own, but the two first friends of the man who has troubled the landed aristocracy of this and other countries, and worried the Pope, are still working with him shoulder to shoulder, and when George is in New York if you look for one of the three you will find him with the other two.—St. Louis Chronicle.

The Single Tax Looms Up in Rhode Island.

Under the leadership of State Senator Lucius F. C. Garvin, the single tax men of Rhode Island are concentrating their efforts upon the town of Cumberland for a thorough single tax campaign. It is proposed, if possible, to secure a petition of a majority of the voters of Cumberland to the legislature asking for power to exempt both personal property and land improvements in that town from all taxation. As local option is customary in Rhode Island, it is believed that the power will be granted if a majority of the voters in the town ask for it. Senator Garvin is positive that if the question should be submitted, not to the "ta.-payers," so-called, but to the whole electorate, a majority vote would be cast in Cumberland for the single tax. His confidence is well founded, as the following from the Providence Sunday Journal of Dec. 6 shows:

The single tax has to all appearances got complete hold of Cumberland, and from Valley Falls to Cumberland Hill it is the sole topic of conversation, and from present appearances the town would vote affirmatively on the subject if the legislature will only give them a chance.

The Pawtucket Evening Times of December 3 gives expression to the same local feeling. It says:

Petitions are now in circulation from one end of the town (Cumberland) to the other, in which the state legislature is requested to permit the town of Cumberland to adopt the single tax system in place of the method of taxation now in use. These petitions are receiving a host of signatures, and there is some reason to believe that Dr. Darvin and his friends will succeed in their purpose.

This is to procure the majority of the signatures of the voters of the town to the petition, then to present the case to the legislature, stating that the majority of the voters are in favor of the change. This, it is believed, will be done, for every one in the town is talking single tax, and many of those who do not claim to know anything about the question are willing to admit that they should like to see the system given a fair trial.

Such sentiments as these show the trend of popular opinion, and as one prominent professional man in town said yesterday, if the interest in the question continues as strong as it is to-day, and the subject is left to the vote of the people in the town, they will be sure to pass it.

It may, therefore, be regarded as within the bounds of possibility that the town of Cumberland will be the first to make the trial of the single tax system.

Senator Garvin, William Barker, Levi H. Turner, of Boston; T. J. Smith, M. D.; William A. McLeod, Esq., of Boston; J. S. Wild and others are speaking and working to promote the success of the undertaking. A general meeting of the single tax men of the state, for the purpose of obtaining advice, assistance and funds, is in contemplation, and help from other states is solicited.

Senator Garvin, writing on the subject from Lonsdale, says:

Perhaps in no part of the United States is the single tax so live an issue as in the town of Cumberland, where I reside. To-night (December 11) the sixth of a series of public meetings is to be held to consider the advisability of this town's exempting from taxation personal property and improvements. Twenty-five petitions are in circulation asking the general assembly, which meets in January, to permit the electors of the town to vote this spring for and against the single tax. Since local option is exercised on many questions in this state, it is believed that if a large proportion of the voters sign these petitions their request will be granted. The signatures already run into the hundreds, and represent all parties and all classes. The total vote of the town last April for state senator was 1,080, the number of qualified electors being about 1,400.

The present taxation is nine dollars on each $1,000 of ratable estate. To derive the same revenue by a tax upon land values the rate would need to be increased to thirty-five dollars per $1,000. The population of the town is employed chiefly in cotton factories and a folling mill. The single tax has been under discussion here for several years. About two-thirds of the land, reckoned according to its value, is owned by non-residents. For these reasons there is no doubt that, if the question be submitted to a vote of the whole electorate, a majority will favor the single tax.

Justice Is the Aim.

A. M. Rich, of Sebago Lake, Me., writes that he is not as enthusiastic for the single tax as he would be if he could see all in it that is claimed for it, viz., the abolition of poverty; and he asks if it could hinder a Barnum from getting together the greatest show on earth and becoming a millionaire, or an A. T. Stewart from accumulating a fortune, or prevent the physician from realizing as much from a day's services as many of his neighbors realize from a month's toil.

The single tax movement does not solicit Mr. Rich's enthusiasm on his terms. It does not aim to deprive any man of the full value of his services to those who deal with him, a value that can be best determined by what they willingly pay him; it aims to remove the legalized obstructions that enable some men to compel others to pay more than they are willing to—in other words, laws that arbitrarily make trades unequal.

The single tax would not hinder a Barnum from getting together the greatest show on earth; it would remove all the legal barriers that are in his way. And if the result of his efforts were worth a million dollars or more to those who patronized him, they would reward him by making him a millionaire. We would interfere neither with the effort nor the reward. In free conditions, whatever a Barnum might receive, however wealthy he might grow, no one would be impoverished.

The same remarks apply to men like Stewart, and to physicians. Their individual earnings, however great, the single tax would leave to them. It is only the wealth that comes by means of special privileges, conferring power to take the wealth of others without equivalent, that the single tax would assail.

So long as Mr. Rich hopes to equalize possessions, regardless of the value of service, he can not be a single tax man. When he concludes that justice is the thing most to be desired, he will see that the single tax offers the only practicable method of realizing his hopes.—The Standard.

Mayor Pingree for Governor.

Howard M. Holmes, of Detroit, reports that Mayor Hazen S. Pingree is a candidate for the republican nomination for governor of Michigan. He says:

"There are obstacles in the way of his nomination, but it is to be hoped that they are not insurmountable. He is an available candidate for the republican party, because of his wealth and his popularity in Detroit, a democratic city. If elected governor, he would use his great influence towards the enactment of a single tax law. I have no doubt that Michigan would be the first in the Union to make a trial of single tax principles. The people are well educated in those principles, and are ready for a change. All we need for success is a motive power, such as a friendly governor could give. That would lead to organization and the concentration of our strength.

"Although as ardent a free trader as any of The Standard's readers, I could conscientiously work for Pingree's election, even on the republican ticket: and I believe that all of the single tax men of Michigan would rally to his support."

Single Tax in British Columbia.

Recent transaction in British Columbia, in which large tracts of land have been sold at a great advance over the original cost, stirs up the Daily News Advertiser, of Vancouver, to support the independent party, which proposes that the tax on wild land shall be so increased as to be a penalty on those who withhold land from profitable use. It evidently sees further than this, for it intimates that a tax on land values, exclusive of improvements, is also a necessity.

A BROKEN RAIL.

The Andrews Opera Company in a Railway Wreck.

The Smash-Up Occurs in Minnesota—Two Women Burned to Death—Many Other Persons Receive Severe Injuries.

MAIMED AND BURNED.

BRAINARD, Minn., Jan. 16.—A frightful railroad accident occurred on the Northern Pacific road 7 miles east of Brainard at 4 o'clock a. m. Friday. The second section of No. 9, with the Andrews opera company on board, left West Superior at midnight for Grand Forks. Near Jonesville the train struck a broken rail, the engine and baggage car passing over in safety, but the sleeping car was derailed and ran some 300 feet on the ties when it toppled over, breaking loose from the train, and went down an embankment some five feet high, lying on its side.

In a minute all was confusion. The sleeping inmates realized their peril. The Pullman conductor, Herbert C. Scott, was one of the first to get outside, and when he did so no fire was visible, but as soon as windows were broken to liberate those inside flames shot out, and in very short order the car was enveloped.

Willing hands of trainmen soon liberated those who were unable to extricate themselves, but none were able to save their clothes and the night being the coldest of the season, the thermometer reaching 46 below, the suffering of the injured was terrible.

At this time it was discovered that Mrs. Ed Andrews and Lillie Was were missing, but no human effort could render them assistance, as the car was a mass of flames. The injured were placed in a baggage-car and brought to Brainard and quartered at the Earlington hotel. A list of the dead and injured, so far as obtained, is as follows:

Mrs. Ed Andrews (known as Miss Nannie Wilkinson), burned to death; Mrs. L. Wallace, of Minneapolis, burned to death; Florence Joy, severely burned on back and head, will probably die; May Douglas, burned on head and arms, will probably recover; Miss Letitia Fritch, burned on hands and arms; Mrs. L. F. Barker, shoulder dislocated; Miss Marie Roe, slightly burned and bruised; George Andrews, burned on arms; Miss Ella Harris, burned on neck and arms; J. C. Taylor, cut and bruised; H. Allen, burned on neck; Fred Allen, bruised; Miss Jo Shearer slightly burned; L. F. Barker, burned on hands and face; W. A. Wirth, chorus, slightly injured; Bert Lincoln, chorus, arm fractured; G. F. Moody, leader of orchestra, slightly burned; Mrs. Al Wakefield, wife of advance agent, feet frozen; C. W. Andrews, business manager, badly burned and cut; Miss Grace Hale, chorus, slightly burned; Willie Rhys, orchestra, hands slightly burned; Etna Hurning, chorus, feet frozen; Mrs. Enheare, badly burned; C. A. Parker, comedian, back injured; J. L. Watson feet frozen.

Miss Douglas, when she was brought from the car, was literally enveloped in flames, her hair being on fire. The women were nearly nude, but were wrapped up as they were taken out. The bodies of the two women burned to death were charred beyond all recognition, the heads, legs and arms being entirely gone. Mr. Ed Andrews rescued their little baby, and supposed his wife was safe until a count was made. He is wild with grief. The members of the company lost all they possessed, except stage clothes, including musical instruments, watches and money.

SMOKED ON THE SCAFFOLD.

M. V. Harben Hanged at Poplar Bluff, Mo., for the Murder of His Creditor.

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., Jan. 16.—M. V. Harben was hanged here on Friday. When placed on the scaffold Harben was smoking a cigar. He was asked if he desired to say anything and replied: "No, gentlemen, I can only say I am innocent." The crime for which Harben suffered the death penalty was the murder of an old man named Smith on July 4, 1888. Smith sold a farm to Harben and held his note as part payment. It was proved that Harben murdered him to secure possession of the notes.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—In the burning of Van Tassel's grain elevator, at Bank street and Third avenue, two men are supposed to have lost their lives; a number of others were injured. A stable and warehouse were also consumed. Total loss about $200,000.

Horses Burned.

FREMONT, Neb., Jan. 18.—The livery and boarding barn of E. C. Smith burned Saturday morning and with it nineteen head of valuable horses, several of which were trotters with records below 2:20. A large stock of buggies and carriages was destroyed. Loss, $30,000; insured.

The Michigan Quill Drivers in Convention.

The Twenty-Fourth Annual Meeting of the State Press Association, Held At Ann Arbor, Last Week.

UNIVERSITY HALL.

THE FIRST DAY.

The editor of a local newspaper deserves an outing occasionally, the same as other folks. To my mind this is an axiom that needs no demonstration, and acting thereon, I determined to make one of the visiting brethren at the Annual Press Association at Ann Arbor last week.

Leaving home on Tuesday morning via the Mackinaw road, accompanied by sister Loana, whom I took along to act as interpreter in emergencies, I arrived at Dundee in due time and after an hour's wait, took the Toledo and Ann Arbor train, arriving at the latter city about noon. At Tecumseh we found Editor Kempton and wife of the Courier on the train and at Milan Editor Smith and wife of the Leader joined the party. Upon arriving at Ann Arbor we found a committee of the local press club in waiting and we were all conveyed to the Cook House for dinner.

COURT HOUSE.

The business sessions of the convention were held at the Court House. At two o'clock the knights of the quill began to assemble and by three o'clock a goodly number had gathered in the Circuit Court room. Most of those in attendance were accompanied by their wives or some family friend and they were all assigned to private houses for entertainment. Each editor received a blue slip, in five coupons, containing these words: "Carriage—Good on every hack line." Whenever one wished to go about the city, all he had to do was to hail the nearest hack and a blue coupon paid his fare. In fact, it was impossible for any member of the Association to pay a cent for any purpose unless he insisted upon it. And this style of open handed hospitality prevailed from the first session to the close. The afternoon meeting lasted about three hours during which time, the members registered their names, received their badges, programs etc. and were sent to their places of entertainment. S. W. Beakes, President of the Ann Arbor Press Club, welcomed the members in a neat little speech and President W. P. Nisbett, of the Association responded. An invitation was extended to the members to take a trip to Ypsilanti at anytime they might wish over the new electric motor line.

The first public program was presented on Tuesday evening at the University Hall. This is one of the largest auditoriums in the state and will seat comfortably over three thousand people. The students and citizens turned out en masse, and the room was packed, from the platform to the rear row in the gallery. Following is the program as presented:

Music—Chequamegons—Under the direction of L. H. Clement.
Address of Welcome on behalf of the city—Wm. G Doty, Mayor.
Song—University Glee Club.
President's Adress—Wm. P. Nisbett, President State Press Association, Big Rapids Herald.
Music—Chequamegons.
Address—"How to read a Newspaper," F. N. Scott, University of Michigan.
Address—What Journalism offers to University Graduates"—E. N. Dingley, editor Kalamazoo Telegraph.
Song—University Glee Club.
Address—"The College-Bred Newspaper Man." Charles S. Hampton, editor Petoskey Democrat.
Music—Chequamegons
Address of Welcome on behalf of the University—President James B. Angell.
Song—University Glee Club.
Reception by University Senate in library building.

The program throughout was one of superior merit. Mayor Doty's address of welcome was a graceful, dignified and scholarly effort and was warmly applauded at its close. President Nisbett's response was equally praiseworthy. He paid a handsome tribute to the city and the University and presented a large array of facts and figures showing the growth of journalism in the state. The addresses by Mr. Scott and Mr. Dingley were both excellent. Editor Hampton made the big hit of the evening. His address was extempore, but it was replete with witty points and sound sense and he was frequently cheered to the echo by the vast audience. President Angell's welcome was brief, but exceedingly appropriate, as all his public addresses are. The orchestra music was excellent and the members of the Glee Club were at their best. They were encored after every chorus and were brought out the second time. The students two or three times gave the famous Univerity yell, which fairly shook the roof of the building. They were especially demonstrative during Charley Hampton's remarks, and the brilliant editor of the Petoskey Democrat deserved all he got too. At the close of the meeting the members of the Association adjourned to the new Library Building and were escorted through that building by President Angell and other professors.

HIGH SCHOOL.

We took supper and spent the night with Mrs. W. D. Holmes, an old acquaintance and friend of our family since away back in the forties, and had a very pleasant visit there.

Thus ended the first day.

THE SECOND DAY.

Wednesday morning at nine o'clock the clans began to gather at the Court House. The additional arrivals on the previous evening and that morning had swollen the number in attendance to good proportions and an excellent business program was presented which consumed the entire forenoon. The following papers were presented, each of which was followed by a lively discussion:

The Printer—Editor vs. Collegiate-Editor—Which is the most successfulas a country publisher, J. E. Beal, of Ann Arbor Courier.
The Amateur—Does he affect the work and business of the legitimate publisher? the man who has served his time?—E. A. Blackman, Hillsdale Democrat.
Subscriptions Strictly Cash in Advance—What does it mean; how is it done?—James Slocum, Holly Advertiser.
Practical Work of Women in Michigan Journalism—Mrs. Belle M. Perry, Charlotte Tribune.

The discussion following these papers elicited a variety of opinions. Mr. Beal took the position that the best results on country papers might be expected from the man who was both a college graduate and a practical printer. The trouble is that those two requirements are not often found in one man. Mr. Blackman paid his respects to the unprofessional publisher, the lawyer politician with an axe to grind, the patent medicine man with a desire for cheap advertising and the rich man's son with plenty of money and a literary ambition. These classes injured the legitimate business very materially in some localities. Mr. Slocum advocated a strict cash system. A hot talk followed and many arguments were advanced on both sides of the question. The prevailing sentiment seemed to be that in large cities the advance plan could and should be adopted, but that in small cities and villages where the publisher knew personally a large majority of his subscribers that plan was not a feasible one. Mrs. Perry's paper was a lengthy and very able essay on the topic chosen, and was one of the finest literary efforts during the entire three days session. At its conclusion President Nisbett appointed the following standing committees:

LIBRARY.

On new business—Theo E Quinby, Detroit Free Press; J T. Colby, Schoolcraft Express; A. E. Smith, Belleville Enterprise.
On Resolutions—Perry F. Powers, Cadillac News and Express; L. E. Slussar, Mancelona Herald; W. H. Brearley Detroit Journal; H. R Pattengill, Michigan School Moderator
On place of next meeting—J R. Fisher, Detroit News Lew F. Cutcheon, Portland Observer; D. C. Henderson, Alpena Journal
On delegates to National Convention—L. M Sellers, Cedar Springs Clipper; A. J. Kempton, Addison Courier; James Slocum, Holly Advertiser.

Wednesday afternoon was given up wholly to sight-seeing, and the time was well spent and thoroughly enjoyed At two o'clock p. m. the members assembled at University Chapel and, under the guidance of President Angell and other officials, visited several of the buildings on the campus. The museum was first visited. The collection has been greatly enlarged during the past ten years and it is now one of the most extensive in the west. The Chinese collection is the finest in this country without any exception. It is the exhibit which was shown at the New Orleans Exposition in 1885 and was afterwards presented to the University by the Chinese government. The dental department came next in order and then the chemical and engineering laboratories, all of which were great curiosities to those who had never visited them before. The building for the electrical laboratory has just been completed, and the machinery and fixtures are now being placed therein. This will be a very important addition to the special departments of the University when fully finished.

MUSEUM.

The business session Wednesday evening was brief, owing to the reception tendered the association at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Junius E. Beal. The only papers read were the following: "Soliciting Business," Lew F. Cutcheon, Portland Observer; "Cutting off Delinquents," A. C. Martin, Paw Paw True Northerner; "Collections," L. E. Slussar, Mancelona Herald. At the conclusion of the papers, all adjourned to the reception. Over the front porch of the residence of Mr. Beal were the letters "M. P. A.." in colored incandescent lights. The interior was beautifully decorated with palm flowers. Mr. Beal, assisted by his charming wife, gracefully received the guests and made them feel entirely at home during the evening. Refreshments were served and the evening was greatly enjoyed by all present.

We were very handsomely entertained on Wednesday at Judge Noah W. Cheever's. Many of our old residents will remember the Judge when he used to be a school boy here in Tecumseh and will be glad to learn that he is prospering. He has a fine residence on Madison Avenue, only two blocks from the campus in one of the finest sections of the city. He is now engaged on the third edition of his Probate Practice, the last two hundred pages of which are now going through the press. This edition has been thoroughly revised and greatly enlarged. Since his retirement from the Probate Judgeship he has had quite a lucrative probate practice.

THE THIRD DAY.

The business session at the Court House consumed the entire forenoon.

The meeting was called to order by Vice President Slocum, owing to the absence of President Nisbett, who was confined to his bed with the grip. The following papers were read: "Office books," E. S. Andrews, Williamston Enterprise: Honorable competition," L. A. Sherman, Port Huron Times, read by the secretary; "Foreign advertisers," C. H. Chapman, Sault Ste. Marie Tribune. The committee on next place of meeting reported in favor of Detroit, which was adopted. The committee on memorial was granted further time in which to complete its report. The committee on delegates to the national convention made the following report which was adopted:

Fred S. Brown, Washtenaw Daily Times; H. R. Pattingill, Lansing School Moderator; C. G. Swensberg, Grand Rrapids Herald; Frank Sutton, Marine City Reporter; E. A. Blackman, Hillsdale Democrat; E. N. Dingley, Kalamazoo Democrat

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President—Junius E. Beal, Ann Arbor.
Vice President—T. E. Quimby, Detroit.
Secretary—James Slocum, Detroit.
Treasurer—L. M. Sellers.

At two o'clock in the afternoon the members again assembled at the University Chapel, and took a tour of the hospitals. They first visited the Homœopathic hospital and witnessed the clinics there. The operation performed was the removing of a patient's knee pan. Ernest Gamble was there and acted as one of the assistants during the operation. Proceeding to the new Allopathic hospital, they witnessed further clinics by Prof. Carrow. At four p. m. the local Press Club appeared with several large sleighs and gave the members a sleigh ride about the city, which was greatly enjoyed by all. At eight o'clock p. m over two hundred guests assembled at Light Guard Hall, and partook of a bountiful banquet provided by the citizens of Ann Arbor. The Armory presented a beautiful sight with four long tables heavily laden with substantials and decorated with rows of potted plants and flowers. President Angell presided as toast master, and did not injure his reputation as a presiding officer in the least. He was in a most happy and felicitous mood, and carried his audience with him. He kept them in laughter, as he introduced the speakers, each of whom made telling responses, many of them bright and witty. The toasts and responses were as follows:

NEWBERRY HALL.

1. Our Guests—Recent Chas. R. Whitman.
2. Ann Arbor—Michigan's Athens—Perry Powers, Cadillac.
3. The Yellowstone Raid—J. J. Stupson, Ypsilanti.
4. The Learning How and the Knowing How—The Difference—W. C. Sprague, Detroit.
5. Early days—E. B. Ford, Ann Arbor.
6. The Peripatetic Editor—H. R. Pattengill.

Thus closed one of the most successful meetings in the history of the Association. Too much praise cannot be awarded to the local Press Club and the citizens generally for their unbounded hospitality and untiring efforts to promote the pleasure of their guests. The visit to the University was a revelation to those who had never visited the institution before and a surprise to those who knew it years ago and had not been there during the last decade. The growth of the University during the past ten years has been wonderful. Graduates of twenty years ago can hardly realize that it is the same institution which they called their Alma Mater then. Michigan has reason to be proud of her noble University. It has had a marvelous growth in the past and is destined to witness a similar ratio of progress in future years. Its present standing is due in no small degree to the ripe scholarship and splendid executive abilities of President James B. Angell.

We spent a portion of the day Thursday in calling upon some old acquaintances. Sid Clarkson is cashier of the First National Bank and is evidently prospering. Mrs. Henry S. Cheever still lives in the cosy house on Washington street, which has been her home for many years. Mrs. Judge Granger also occupies the old homestead on West Huron street. We took dinner and spent the night at Judge Thos. M. Cooley's on State street. We were agreeably surprised at finding him in better health than we anticipated. Since he resigned his place on the Inter-State Commerce Commission and gave up all work he has recuperated rapidly and his health will doubtless be fully restored with a few months' rest. Our visit there was one of the most enjoyable features of the entire trip.

Leaving Ann Arbor at seven a. m. Friday morning, over the T. & A. A. road, we arrived in Toledo at ten o'clock, there joined the main party of excursionists and proceeded South for a visit to the Mammoth Cave. Next week we will give our readers some of our experience in "Old Kentucky."

FARMERS' SOCIAL CLUB

The Club met at B. J. Rector's Jan. 5th. So many of the Club being sick the attendance was small and the program incompletely carried out, but substitutes by the school children and others made it a pleasant and profitable meeting. It is most earnestly hoped that the grippe will have entirely loosed its grip and that there will be a full attendance at the next meeting of the Club, which will be at Mr. Kehoe's Tuesday evening, Feb. 2nd, when the following program will be presented:

Singing—School children.
Declamation—Charlie Schreder.
Reading—B. F. DePuy.
Duette—Misses Kehoe.
Sel. reading—Mrs. John Hendershot.
Paper—I. H. Schreder.
Question Box.
Question—"What is the cheapest feed for farmers to feed their stock for market?" Opened by R. B. Gillespie.

Our regular Wednesday fire occurred yesterday morning at 6:30. This time it was the Lilley House chimney which was burned entirely out, suffering a total loss of contents, the fire leaving only the bare walls standing. Landlord Patterson at once refitted the chimney with smoke, however, and as we go to press it is in full running order. The fire originated in a stove used for heating purposes.

James Morrison met with a very painful though not dangerous accident last Wednesday afternoon. He was baling hay on the Stewart farm at Holloway, when a part of the baler adjustments gave way striking him on the right leg with such force as to fracture the bone about midway between the ankle and knee. Dr. Begel reduced the fracture and the injured young man was conveyed home. He is progressing fairly, but will leave no footprints in the snow of this winter.

Co. C., last evening in a special meeting called for the purpose, volunteered their services to the State and general government in case of trouble with Chile. There seems to be a question among those best informed on military matters, whether or not the United States, or the Governors of States, have any power to order the militia outside the several states. To decide this question, as far as Co. C. is concerned, and to express their willingness to go where needed, the boys unanimously voted their readiness to be among the first to go in case of trouble.

The young ladies of Tecumseh did themselves proud in their most successful Leap Year party Monday night. The program consisted of a jolly sleigh-ride, which was enjoyed despite the snow and frost till 9:30 when a bounteous supper was served in armory hall, followed by a hop until some time Tuesday morning. The ladies exhibited the most chivalric gallantry throughout and proved their ability to keep a secret as the sleigh ride was a genuine surprise to all the gentlemen.

Orange Blossoms.

Cupid continues his conquests, notwithstanding the cold weather. The latest victims are Mr. Fred Ives and Miss Minnie Westcott, who set sail on matrimony's sea on Thursday evening of last week. A company of over one hundred guests assembled at the residence of the bride's father, H. H. Wescott's, on Pottawatamie street to witness the nuptials and extend their congratulations. The knot was skillfully tied by Rev. Frank Arnold, and the usual good words, attending such festivities, were bestowed upon the happy couple. An elegant wedding supper was served, to which all did ample justice. Many bridal gifts, both useful and ornamental in character, evinced the esteem of their numerous friends. Their bridal trip consisted of a journey from the bride's father's to the groom's home in West Raisin where the married pair began at once the realities of housekeeping. Both bride and groom have always lived in Tecumseh and vicinity and enjoy an extended circle of friends who will wish them a happy journey through life. The HERALD begs leave to join the number with its heartiest good wishes.

James D. Sholes.

A faithful Brother to our beloved order of the Royal Templars of Temperance, No. 9, Tecumseh, Michigan.

Two assessments for January 1892, and twenty-two homes darkened by the shadows of the Great Reaper, twenty-two homes will be made brighter in the knowledge of the fact, that the warm hearts of a fraternity will respond to meet the obligation. Our membership is just twenty-two, and we in true devotion to our fallen brother,

RESOLVE: With uncovered and bowed heads, in solemn silence, we cherish the memory of the departed, and with fortitude accept the inevitable. After answering the last alarm call on earth, our beloved brother was summoned to serve in a grander and nobler field of action. A loyal husband, a loving father, a true friend, has crossed the river in advance to a position from whence there is no retreat, but to which we must soon follow.

He has joined the majority, and friend after friend in rapid succession will follow, year by year; as the time rolls on there will be more vacant draped chairs, as we are called upon successively to mourn the loss of other loved ones. Then let us here rightly resolve, that while life lasts we will, with fraternal devotion ever cherish in grateful memory the record of him we now lose from our number. Let us make common cause with all loyal citizens of a grateful fraternity free and disinthralled, in rendering a proper tribute to the dead. To the families and immediate friends of the deceased we tender our heartfelt sympathy, and to the departed farewell, and in response to the summons of the same grim messenger, we shall go down through the dark valley of the shadow of death to meet our loved ones.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—Many petitions in favor of the loan of $5,000,000 to the world's fair on condition of its being closed on Sunday were presented to the senate yesterday. A bill was introduced to appropriate $10,000,000 to provide for fortification and other seacoast defenses, $10,000,000 to be available the first year and $9,000,000 a year for ten years.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Bills were introduced in the senate yesterday to prevent the adulteration and misbranding of food and drugs; for an amendment to the constitution to regulate marriages and divorces in the several states, and several public building bills.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—In the senate yesterday bills were introduced appropriating $11,000,000 for the improvement of the Mississippi river from its mouth to the mouth of the Ohio; to promote the safety of employes and travelers on railways by the use of automatic couplers and continuous brakes. A bill was passed to aid the state of Colorado to support a school of mines. Adjourned to the 18th.

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—In the house yesterday bills were introduced increasing the pension of those soldiers who have lost the use of eyes or limbs, and for the development and encouragement of silk culture in the United States under the direction of the secretary of agriculture. A bill fixing the time for holding terms of the circuit and district courts in the northern district of Iowa was passed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—In the house yesterday bills were introduced to repeal the law creating a sinking fund; for the classification of clerks in first and second class post offices; declaring Stockton, Sacramento and Marysville, Cal., ports of delivery.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—In the house yesterday the time was occupied in discussing the resolution of Mr. Holman against subsidies, but no action was taken.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—In the house yesterday Mr. Holman's anti-subsidy bill was passed after long debdte. Bills were introduced to test the method of spelling in schools and appropriating $100,000 to establish a spelling school at the world's fair; placing salt, lumber, nails, cotton ties, binding twine and agricultural implements on the free list; for the admission of Arizona as a state, and to prevent gambling in grain. This gambling, according to the bill, is defined to be a contract to sell for future delivery corn, wheat, oats, rye, barley and other grain, the contractor or seller not being the owner or agent of the owner at the time of the making of the contract. The bill excludes from the mails any letters, postal cards or circulars concerning gambling in agricultural products, and checks, drafts, bills, money, postal notes or money orders for use for such purposes. It also excludes from the mails newspapers, circulars, pamphlets or publications of any kind containing advertisements, telegraphic reports or other articles giving quotations of any market relating to gambling in agricultural products. Adjourned to the 18th.

REVOLT CRUSHED OUT.

Ascension Rebels Surrender to the Troops —Leaders Will Be Shot.

DISPATCH, N. M., Jan. 16.—The revolt at Ascension has been suppressed and civil law is once more in force. This information has reached here by the arrival of a courier, who says that the stone mill occupied by the rebels was surrounded by troops on Tuesday and that they surrendered after some parleying. The captives number over 100, but Sais, the leader, escaped. The men will be tried and no doubt the principals will be shot. No further trouble is expected and business has once more been resumed. More troops are now on their way to Ascension, and the town will then have a garrison of 400 men.

Illinois Republicans.

CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—At a meeting of the republican state central committee on Thursday it was decided to hold the next Republican convention at Springfield Wednesday, May 4. The basis of representation agreed upon was one delegate for every 500 votes cast for Harrison in 1888 and one for every fraction of 150 and over. Upon this basis the next convention will be composed of 1,235 delegates and will be one-fourth larger than the preceding state convention.

Death of the Oldest Mason.

Masons from all parts of the country will attend the funeral.

A Terrible Fate.

IRONWOOD, Mich., Jan. 16.—Friday C. G. Baker caught his foot in a carrier used to convey fuel to a sawmill furnace and being unable to extricate himself was burned alive.

DEADLOCK BROKEN.

J. W. Cliff Elected Secretary of the Iowa State Senate.

DES MOINES, Ia., Jan. 15.—At the opening of the senate session Lieut. Gov. Poyner made an explanation of his position, saying he was clearly convinced that only a majority of a quorum was necessary to elect permanent officers. This was contrary to what was understood previously, that it took a majority of all members elected to the senate to choose such officers. The roll was called on election of secretary of the senate, and the democrats as usual refused to vote. The republicans voted for Cliff and Engle for Kennedy. Senator Finn moved that the names of the senators present and not voting be recorded; the motion was ruled out of order; but the chair, on his own responsibility, ordered the names of the democratic senators—Bolter, Cleveland, Dodge, Groneweg, Kelly, Matton, Olson, Perry, Schmidt, Terry and Yeoman—to be called. Lieut. Gov. Poyner then announced as the result of roll-call that J. W. Cliff was elected secretary of the senate, and the deadlock was broken. The democrats were much astounded at the result, but were helpless. Senator Shields (dem.) filed a protest, and said Ex-Speaker Reed himself would not have so ruled. The remaining permanent officers of the senate were elected in the same manner.

The house did nothing, adjourning at 11 a. m.

WAR ON THE PENSIONERS.

The Society of Loyal Volunteers Would Reduce the Government's Expenditures.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—An attack is to be made on the pension system in this congress by an organization of ex-soldiers known under the name of the Society of Loyal Volunteers. This organization expects to be able to reduce the annual expenditures for pensions from $138,000,000 to $88,000,000, or $50,000,000 at most. The object of the society is to prevent pensions being paid to any except disabled soldiers. It is claimed that there are thousands of soldiers who are physically able to support large families who are getting pensions. The society would pay pensions only to soldiers who are incapable, from physical disability incurred by the war, to support themselves. The organization had its inception in Washington, but has extended already to several states.

PROHIBITION CONVENTION.

The Call for the Meeting Formally Issued —The Basis of Representation.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Notice is given by order of the national committee of the prohibition party that the national convention of that party to nominate candidates for president and vice president of the United States and to transact such other business as may properly come before it will assemble in Music hall, St. Louis, Mo., June 29. The basis of representation has been fixed as follows:

1. Each state is entitled to four delegates at large.
2. Each state is also entitled to twice as many delegates as the number of congressmen which the state is entitled to elect in 1892 (this is the new apportionment).
3. Each state may send one additional delegate for every 100 votes, or major fraction thereof, cast for Fisk and Brooks in 1888.
4. Each territory is entitled to two delegates. The district of Columbia is entitled to two delegates.

World's Fair Statistics.

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—According to Auditor William K. Ackerman's figures the total receipts of the Columbian exposition to January 1 were $3,523,518, and the expenditure $2,647,400. Of the latter amount $2,101,911 was paid out by the construction department. THE LAST CALL.

Chili Must Make Peace with Uncle Sam at Once.

President Harrison About Ready to Ask Congress for Power to Bring Our Saucy Neighbor to Terms—The Situation.

EGAN'S LAST MESSAGE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Deeds, not words. This is the position of the United States towards Chili. Minister Egan has delivered his last message but one to the government of President Montt. The remaining one will be his demand for his passport as minister, whenever congress acts. This is the exact situation as it was developed at the cabinet meeting Friday.

No satisfactory answer has been given to his communication early in the week, when on behalf of the United States he asked for formal disavowal of the Matta insult and for some indication that the Chilian government intended to make reparation for the Baltimore outrage. Evasive professions of friendliness have been tendered and that is all. Secretary Blaine has kept the path of diplomacy open, and the minister remains at Santiago to receive any communication which the Montt administration may have to make. But this is all. The initiative in anything conciliatory that follows must come from the Chilian authorities.

Meanwhile officials in Washington are not unaware of what is going on in Chili. They know that ordering Whitehead torpedoes is not the safest way of coming to a friendly understanding, but that is what the South American country has been doing. They are also informed of other preparations which fully justify everything that this government has been doing toward getting its navy in fighting shape.

It was the understanding at the cabinet meeting Friday that the correspondence would go into congress not later than Wednesday of next week and possibly earlier. The government's investigation into the attack upon the Baltimore's sailors, conducted by Judge Advocate General Remy at San Francisco, having come to an end there is no reason why the facts thus elicited, which would seem to greatly strengthen the government's case, should not be incorporated in the documents sent to congress.

The president will, it is understood, take the ground that the outrages were premeditated and participated in by the Chilian police. He will show that the attack was made simultaneously in widely-separated localities wherever an American seaman could be found, one point of attack being separated from the others by 2 miles. The message will be accompanied by a number of photographs showing the character of the location where the assault occurred, and it will be seen that while some of the seamen were attacked in a disreputable quarter of the town others were set upon in the best residence quarters. It is regarded as highly improbable that these widely separated groups of seamen should all have been drunk and should have brought the attack upon themselves. The correspondence will be accompanied by a statement from the president outlining its leading features. What specific recommendations President Harrison may have to make will depend on the developments of the next few days.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—Sunday brought no ebb in the war talk toward Chili. The possibilities of trouble continue as imminent as ever, but there were no strictly new developments in the situation. A dispatch from Valparaiso, supposed to be from Minister Egan, arrived during the day and was delivered at the house of Secretary Blaine. Its contents, however, could not be learned.

The repeated statement in Valparaiso dispatches that Minister Montt has been instructed by President Montt to withdraw the offensive circular note of Senor Matta finds no credence here. The persistence of this statement is supposed here to be caused by the Chilian government for the purpose of influencing public opinion in this country. It is to be presumed that if Senor Montt had received any such instructions he would not delay but would rather hasten to make them known to Secretary Blaine and the president. Certainly this government has no official knowledge of any intention on the part of Chili to retreat from its insulting attitude, to say nothing of granting the apology and indemnity which have been demanded.

Senor Montt, the Chilian minister, became excited enough Saturday by the warlike tone of American newspapers to give out an interview which at this critical stage is regarded as indiscreet to say the least. Mr. Montt regarded as absurd the possibilities of a moment's question of veracity between an American sailor and a Chilian judge, and he adds rather shrewdly that no one would hesitate a moment in deciding such a question between a Chilian sailor and an American judge. In other words Mr. Montt takes the ground that testimony of the Baltimore sailors is deliberately untrue wherever it differs as given at Vallejo from the testimony alleged to have been given at Valparaiso in the report of the procurator fiscal. Mr. Montt intimates that anti-Chilian feeling in this country, which he professes to deplore, is cultivated by designing politicians.

Those who are nearest President Harrison say that the president's message will contain strong language in behalf of maintaining American dignity, but it will have no advice, reference or inference to war. As suggested in these dipatches some days ago, the president is keeping close watch on the local affairs of Chili, which give indication that the situation may be materially changed any day by another revolution.

"NOT IN VAIN."

She pinned some creamy fluffy thing
About her throat, and added there
A half-blown rose; and lingering
Awhile to make herself more fair,
I queried of her, half in jest,
The name of her expected guest.

"We dine alone to-night," said she.
"I linger at my toilet
Not for the eyes of company,
But for a dearer object yet—
Now for a husband's eyes attired,
The self of old my love admired.

"It would have grieved my heart of yore
Not to be comely in his eyes;
And now how infinitely more
Of moment to retain the prize!
And so I have a rosebud there
To brighten in my silvering hair.

"Not for my sister-woman's grace,
To rouse her envy; not for this,
But for the sake of those sweet days
To save the honeymoon of kisses
From ever waning, succoring so
From waste the paradise below.

"'Twere not enough to win him mine,
Nor yet enough so to be won,
But the sweet right of love divine
To keep the Eden so begun,
And when another decade dies
To still be lovesome in his eyes."

Oh, beautiful philosophy!
The key to riches manifold;
Its secret sovereign alchemy
Changing the dullest day to gold,
Leashing two hearts in love's sweet thrall,
A love that never wanes at all.

A holy lesson, sweet to con,
And sweet in daily life applied;
Youth's blithest idyl still lisped on,
The matron gentle as the bride,
The winning long ago was done,
But every day she keeps him won.

WON HIS HEART.

How a Little Child Fulfilled Its Mission of Love.

"Drat it!" said Boggs.

Boggs was a withered-up, little, old Yankee, who had made his fortune and was living in a little house on a little side street in a little village in New England. Boggs was something of a recluse—almost a hermit. His housekeeper was a crusty old woman of uncertain age, who furnished him his only companionship. He sought no other. For old Boggs had soured on the world, to use a somewhat slangy phrase.

To go back a matter of five years or so: The time had been when the old man had less of acerbity in his nature—when he was not so much of a recluse as he now was.

His wife was living then—his daughter, too, was at home. And Boggs thought much of the one, but more of the other. His heart was bound up in the girl, with her laughing blue eyes, golden hair and sunny face. He had planned a great future for her, for the old man cared more, if possible, for his daughter than he did for his dollars, and he determined that regardless of all expense his girl should become a lady, dress like a lady and marry like a lady should. Boggs, of humble parentage himself—himself a hard-toiling man all his life—determined that his daughter should become an aristocrat. And so he did not hesitate to pay over large sums to Mme. Emilie, of New York, to whose fashionable boarding-school Miss Lucy was sent to acquire a "first-class education," as the old man proudly referred to it.

So that it can readily be seen that when Miss Lucy returned from the school with a diploma, which duly set forth all her requirements, it was a sore blow to the old man that she should immediately fall in love with a penniless young artist, who had strayed over from Gotham to sketch some of the glorious scenery about Dudleyboro. But she did. And, what is more to the point, she married him, too, in spite of her father's stern demands and her mother's tearful protests. It was a secret marriage, and when the young couple appeared before the old man it was with the full expectation of his relenting and bestowing upon them his full forgiveness. But no such thing occurred.

"You have disobeyed my commands," he said; "now shift for yourself, girl. I never want to see or hear from you again. Begone!" And there was something like a curse on his lips as he turned from the young bride and her husband.

It was very dreadful, of course. Lucy had read of such things before in stories, which seemed very improbable, but it never occurred to her that her father would treat her, Lucy Boggs—or, rather, now Mrs. Lucy Boggs Chanler—in any such manner. But right there she was mistaken.

And so Mr. and Mrs. Chanler returned to Gotham and art and a rather precarious existence. Her letters to her father were unanswered; after awhile they were returned to her, unopened. The old man evidently meant what he said. The death of Mrs. Boggs a year or so later didn't tend to soften his heart; if possible, it became flintier than before.

This was the situation that frosty December evening when Boggs ejaculated: "Drat it!"

"Read that," he said, as he tossed a letter over to the old housekeeper. The old man's tones were a trifle softer than usual, for all he tried to appear stern and hard-hearted about it. The news was a terrible blow, but the old man determined not to betray the fact.

"Mussy on us!" ejaculated the old woman. "Lucy and her husband both dead and their two-year-old child an orphing? And we've got to take it or it'll be sent to the asylum. Well, well!"

"Yes," said old Boggs, "and I suppose we'll have to take the young 'un, although how we can take care of it in this house is more than I know."

"Might get a nuss-gal?" suggested the old woman.

"Well, I don't know about that," returned old Boggs. "Mebbe so, mebbe so; we'll see." He was wondering whether this two-year-old baby looked anything like Lucy did when she was that age.

The child came, a pretty, fair-haired thing, for all the world a small pocket edition of its mother, and with the little one a young girl, who had been sent along to take care of the diminutive traveler on the journey from New York. This young woman seemed bursting with some secret, which could, it appeared, be repressed only by the most prodigious effort. But in the main she proved satisfactory, and her valuable services were retained for the stipend of one dollar a week and found, which was a source of some jealousy on the part of the old housekeeper, whose income was but a trifle more.

It was a very speedy conquest—that of the baby over old Boggs. At first he affected not to notice it, but he soon got over that. Gradually the child crept into his old heart, much after the little ones had been in the house a month he would rather have parted with his life than with Lucy's child. He watched over it with all the tenderness of a mother. In fact, old Boggs was a changed man—he began to take some interest in life. The little one fretted at first—cried for its "paps" and "mamma" and asked in its infantile way to be be taken back to them.

"Poor child!" said the old man. "It don't realize what's befallen it. Perhaps it's just as well—just as well. It'll the sooner forget."

One day Boggs was returning from one of his long, lonely walks.

The old housekeeper met him at the gate, face blanched, eyes staring like a maniac's hair dishevaled—the picture of abject terror.

"What's the matter?" the old man asked, greatly puzzled by her strange conduct.

"Lucy—ghost—your daughter—in there!" the housekeeper gasped. She could say no more.

Old Boggs was not at all superstitious, and he quickly made his way into the house. In the front room there sat, with the child in her arms, Lucy, but not a ghost. Far from it—very much in the flesh; there could be no doubt about that.

Old Boggs stared at her in amazement. He was unwilling to trust his own eyes.

"You—you—I thought you were dead!" he finally managed to say.

"So I have been to you, father, for the last five years. And so I sent the child to see——"

"Yes, I understand—I understand," interupted the old man, hastily. "Husband dead, I suppose? You a penniless widow? Want to come home to live with your old father now you have got nowhere else to go?" The old man was growing a trifle bitter.

"No, father," said the girl. "Will is not dead, and we are not penniless. He has succeeded, and we are becoming rich. But I want your love, your forgiveness. And so I sent the child as a sort of ambassadress. If she hasn't succeeded, we'll go back—the child and I."

The old man paused for full three minutes.

"I guess—she—has," he finally said, slowly. "You needn't go, leastwise till you've made us a good, long visit. And I dunno but I might go back to New York to live with ye. It's pretty lonely out here, and I've got kind o' fond o' the child."

"Do, father," replied the daughter; "nothing would please us more—Will and I. We will——"

"But it was a mighty mean trick," interrupted the old man.—Chicago News.

BRAVE MOUNTAINEERS.

Butterflies That Mount On Airy Wing to High Altitudes.

Bees, the common go-betweens of the loves of the plain, cease to range about a thousand or fifteen hundred feet below snow-level. And why? Because it's too cold for them? Oh, dear, no; on sunny days in early English spring, when the thermometer doesn't rise above freezing in the shade, you will see both the honey bees and the great black bumble as busy as their conventional character demands of them among the golden cups of the first timid crocuses. Give the bee sunshine, indeed, with a temperature just above freezing-point, and he'll flit about joyously on his communistic errand. But bees, one must remember, have heavy bodies and relatively small wings; in the rarefied air of mountain heights they can't manage to support themselves in the most literal sense. Hence their place in these high stations of the world is taken by the gay and airy butterflies, which have lighter bodies and a much bigger expanse of wing-area to buoy them up. In the valleys and plains the bee competes at an advantage with the butterflies for all the sweets of life, but in this broad subglacial belt on the mountain-sides, the butterflies in turn have things all their own way. They flit about like monarchs of all they survey, without a rival in the world to dispute their supremacy.—Popular Science Monthly.

A Pie Exposition.

The greatest pie display of which history tells us took place in 1509 at a dinner given after the funeral of Albrecht IV., king of Bavaria, at the royal palace in Munich. There were seven great pies upon the table, representing the seven ages of the world. The first pie was made of apples. It represented Adam and Eve, the tree of knowledge, the snake and the apple. The pictures were made upon the crust with confections of sugar and almonds. Another pie was made of doves, and bore a wonderful representation of Noah's ark in its center, while round the edge were placed figures of every created thing. A key went with this pie in order that it might be determined what these figures were intended to represent. Upon the crust of these wonderful pastries appeared the tableaux of Abraham sacrificing Isaac, David slaying Goliath, the ravens feeding Elijah, Samson tearing open the jaws of the lion, and the last and most wonderful of all the pies, when opened, was found to contain four living birds, which all began to sing. In his cookbook, entitled "Epulario," is a recipe headed: "How to make pies that the birds may be alive in them, and fly out singing when it is cut up." Possibly this is the origin of the old rhyme:

"When the pie was opened the birds began to sing."

The Pathogenic Microbe,

Or poison bearing germ, exercises a most destructive influence, and is continually waging war against health. Innumerable is this mighty foe and but few escape his injury. Entering the system through the blood, this poisonous germ infects every part of the body, and spreads its deadly virus everywhere. Under ordinary conditions it multiplies rapidly and soon maintains a stronghold upon the human body. To overcome this enemy and put an end to its destruction has for a long while occupied the time and energies of scientists. Their labors have at last been rewarded with success and a most important discovery has thus been made known to the world. It has been shown that this germ can be forced from the body through the pores of the skin, and that this is the only method by which a permanent and sure cure of diseases of the blood can be effected. S. S. S. has for years been curing blood diseases and their results, and it is by this method of eliminating all impurities through the skin that it has performed its great work. All manner of complaints having their origin in an impure and disordered condition of the blood have been successfully treated by this unrivalled blood medicine. Being purely a vegetable preparation S. S. S. is entirely harmless and no bad effects result from its use.

Clinton Column.

CLINTON, MICH., - - JAN. 21, 1892.

Henry Fox was in town Sunday.

Mrs. Laura Tuttle visited at E. G. Cook's in Tecumseh Monday and Tuesday.

A very pleasant Leap Year party was given by Claude Hause Monday evening.

Albert Kishpaugh went to Toledo Monday.

Fred Rosacrans and wife were in town Sunday.

O. P. Safford and wife, of Flint, are guests of Dr. Tuttle and wife.

Mrs. A. W. Stalker has been quite sick this week but is gaining at present.

Mrs. Emanuel Glimpse, who has been very sick for a couple of weeks, is gaining slowly.

Rev. J. M. Kerridge, of Adrian, gave an address at the temperance meeting Monday evening.

The fourth entertainment on the course will be a lecture by Charles F. Townsend Feb'y 12.

Mrs. R. F. Thompson, who has been sick for several months, has been very much worse this week.

A special meeting of Clinton Lodge No. 175, F. and A. M., is called for Saturday evening, Jan. 23d.

Mrs. S. R. Spencer died at Manchester Sunday night. J. B. Hause attended the funeral Wednesday.

Mrs. Ella Rose and daughters Blanche and Marjorie came from Detroit Wednesday for a few days' visit.

The Congregational social held at the residence of Charles Greene Wednesday was very largely attended.

Mrs. James Wadsworth and daughter, of Flint, are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Prentiss.

Rev. Reeves and wife are both recovering rapidly from their illness, though neither is able to be out yet.

Mrs. Rachel VanGieson died Wednesday morning at her home in Bridgewater. She was seriously ill but a few days.

Bainbridge & Hause were called to Wampler's Lake, Franklin Center and Manchester Monday. They have had five funerals to attend since Tuesday.

Patrick Murphy has been very sick for the last week with la grippe, but the attending physician, Dr. White, thinks that he is now on the fair road to recovery.

George Conger, Sr., died at his home last Friday morning, after a short illness. He was 83 years of age. The funeral services were held at the house Sunday at 2 p. m., Rev. Williams officiating. He leaves a wife but no children.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Calhoun was the scene of a very pleasant gathering of friends and relatives on Wednesday to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the marriage of Mrs. Calhoun's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Randall.

The Clinton Local published last week a list of those within a radius of four miles whose ages were above eighty years. There were twenty-five and the average age was 84.6 years. Since then two have died, Mrs. Rachel VanGieson and Mr. George Cooper.

We were misinformed as to the marriage of Miss Jeannette Wier and Martin Spencer, which we announced as taking place two or three weeks ago. The ceremony was performed Wednesday evening, Jan. 13, by Rev. A. W. Stalker. They intend to remain here until spring when they will leave for their home in Dakota.

The ladies of St. John's church cleared about $50 from the "Victim of Circumstances" last week. Each part was excellently sustained and considering the disadvantage that the players labored under in not being able to obtain the hall for rehearsal but one evening, it was a very creditable performance. Everyone seemed pleased with the entertainment and the ladies are more than satisfied with the financial part of it.

James Riley, of Tecumseh, and a young lady of this place were out riding Sunday and when about half a mile north of town, in attempting to turn around, the cutter was overturned, throwing the occupants out. The horse ran between the fence and some trees, thus freeing itself from the cutter, and ran until it reached James Kehoe's, east of town, where it was caught. The cutter was badly demoralized but fortunately no one was hurt.

The lecture given by Samuel Phelps Leland last Saturday evening was listened to by a large audience. His subject was "A Factor of Life," and though admirably treated it was not received with the enthusiasm that greeted his lecture here last year on "World Making." However he spoke many truths that were good for people to hear, whether they were exactly palatable or not, and in a manner to which the most sensitive could not object.

Died, in Bridgewater, on Monday, January 18th, 1892, Ezra Glimpse, aged 72 years. Mr. Glimpse was seriously ill at the time of his brother's death, just a week before, but it was little thought that his sickness would terminate in death in so short a time. He commenced growing worse last Saturday and Sunday morning Dr. Howell, of Tecumseh, was called for council with Dr. Tuttle. He failed rapidly from that time until Monday morning, when he died. The funeral was held Tuesday at 2 o'clock, at the house.

THE HERALD FOR 1892.

The "Old Reliable" is still on deck and prepared for the campaign of 1892. Performance is better than promise. Recognizing this fact, we have no special pledges to make for the coming twelve months. The record which the HERALD has made during the past seventeen years, under its present management, is a sufficient guarantee of its ability to maintain its position among the chief exponents of local journalism in Southern Michigan. The general policy of the paper is well known. While it will not be a political organ, in the party sense of that term, it will always be found battling for the rights and welfare of the people. Whatever tends to strike the shackels from trade and open foreign markets for farmers and manufactures; whatever tends to increase the volume of both gold, silver and paper money, without degrading its value; whatever tends to break up the monopoly in unused land and give the poor man a chance to obtain a home of his own; whatever tends to give every laborer regular employment at fair daily wages the HERALD will uphold and sustain. Our chief aim, however, will be to make the HERALD a first class local newspaper, a faithful chronicler of all local happenings within the territory of its circulation. In this regard it will continue to lead all competitors.

Our premium offers for the coming year are more favorable than ever before and the club list is the best one ever issued from this office. Examine them carefully and make your selections early.

The Farmers' Union will be held at the home of B. F. DePuy, on Friday evening of this week.

Rev. Mrs. E. A. Smith preached John DuBois' funeral sermon, at Britton, Thursday of last week.

Major Henry C. Dane, fifth on the Tecumseh lecture course, will be at the Opera House in Tecumseh, Feb. 5th.

The meetings closed on Sunday evening, Rev. Mrs. Smith going to Tecumseh to assist Rev. O. J. Perrin this week.

George and Charles Palmer, of Wausipi, Mich., were called here by the death of their uncle, W. H. Arner, Tuesday.

A. R. Arner has so far recovered from his sickness, as to be able to relieve a passenger brakeman on the C. J. & M., this week.

Robert and Harry Bailey left Wednesday evening for Richmond, Va., to canvass for the Chautauqua combination blackboard and writing desk.

Prof. Martin Palmer, of Wyandotte, and A. E. Palmer, of Hillsdale, were called here Friday, by the sickness of their mother, Mrs. J. C. Palmer.

Aunt Nancy Palmer, who has been in poor health for several months, and for the past two weeks had been failing very rapidly, died at five o'clock this morning. Funeral Saturday at 10:30.

After a sickness of 18 months and 7 days, W. H. Arner, passed away a little after two o'clock Sunday morning, without so much as a quiver of a mussle, at the age of 64 years, 1 month, and 7 days. His last sickness was pneumonia.

The funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at the church, under Masonic order. Rev. J. O. Perrin, of Tecumseh, officiating.

The casket was covered with black broadcloth and had extension handles; a vine of smilax ran around the casket at the base of the top, forming a drapery. On the foot was placed a bunch of calla lillies; at the head of the casket rested a beautiful floral piece—the masonic emblems—a gift from the fraternity; at the foot a pillow of flowers, with a musical emblem—a gift from the choir. The remains were laid to rest in the family lot in the village cemetery. W. H. Arner was born at Mt. Morris, N. Y., Dec. 17th, 1827, being the youngest of 13 children. He came to Michigan in the winter of 1857, and was married to Miss Cryscilda Schreder Nov. 22d, 1860; served as Justice of the Peace twenty years, filling the position with honor and credit, and was a through and through Democrat. He took an active part and expressed a deep interest in the Masonic fraternity. As a mechanic it can be said that he was a master, carriage and wagon making being his trade. Some very fine pieces of workmanship tell of his skill. The village has been his home ever since he came to Michigan. He leaves a widow, three sisters, and a large circle of relatives and friends, who mourn their loss, but rejoice to know that he left behind the evidence that he has gone to receive the mansion prepared for him in Heaven.

CARD OF THANKS.

Words fail to express the gratitude I feel towards the neighbors, friends, and Masonic fraternity, for their kindness and willing assistance to me and my husband during his long sickness, and at his death and funeral. Also for the beautiful floral gifts of respect and friendship. MRS. W. H. ARNER.

18 POUNDS OF BLOOD

Is about the quantity nature allows to an adult person. It is of the utmost importance that the blood should be kept as pure as possible. By its remarkable cures of scrofula, salt rheum, etc., Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven its claim to be the best blood purifier.

The Brick school has been closed for two weeks, the teacher, Philo Mills, being sick. Miss Lillie Vedder, teacher in the Waldron Dist., Tecumseh, was also home last week, sick. We learn, too, that the attendance at several schools has of late been slim. Cause: Sick with the grip.

The Union Literary and Lyceum met at A. D. Hunt's Saturday evening and discussed the free coinage question. Visitors were there from Clinton, Springville and Raisin Valley. Party spirit grew pretty warm and Sunday, only, put an end to the discussion. The debate will be continued at the next meeting at N. C. Witherell's, in two weeks. Come out and hear it.

There was no preaching at the Reformed church last Sunday. Rev. Gulick has gone with the great majority into the hands of the grippe.

We wish to correct an error in last week's items. We did not mean that B. S. Scudder was in full blast, with a new man at the helm, but his "cigar shop."

Ambrose Arner, of Ridgeway, was here Sunday breaking the news to friends of the death of William H. Arner, of Ridgeway, Sunday morning at 2 o'clock.

Several went from here to take advantage of the bankrupt sale of clothing in Detroit last week. But a little inquiry convinced them that they were not as near bankrupt as reported.

Dr. Morden has had about as much good of the sleighing as any one, for he has used it night and day for the past two weeks. It is grippe here and grippe there. Not that at Dewitt Martin's, however.

Farmers, a Word with You!

Do you know that the National Stockman and Farmer, of Pittsburgh, Pa., is the largest and best agricultural, live stock and family journal of its class published? It is the largest because it has twenty-four pages (ninety-six columns) every week the year round—no supplements. It is the best because it is the most practical, comprehensive and ably edited. It is, as its name implies, a magazine for the farmer and stockman. As such it covers the whole field. Each of its departments is ably edited; its matter is practical and to the point. All its correspondents are farmers and stockmen who keep up to the times in their various branches, and it combines more fully than any other journal of its kind all of the branches of husbandry. Each of its twenty-four different departments is represented in each issue, consisting of Agriculture, Horticulture, Live Stock, Veterinary, Dairy, Apiary, Markets, Poultry, Household, Young Folks, etc., etc.

Its market reports have a national reputation of being the most reliable, comprehensive and freshest of any of its competitors. Their new press enables the publishers to mail their entire edition within twenty-four hours from the time it goes to press, thus enhancing the value of its market reports and other departments.

It accepts no fraudulent advertisements. Its organization page is one of its most valuable features. League, Grange and Alliance matters are intelligently and honestly discussed. It aims in this department to bring about a more equitable and harmonious state of affairs than now exists. It gives a table of contents with each issue and a complete index every six months, enabling one to find at once any article desired. It enters into political matters only so far as it is of interest to the farmer and his welfare.

The regular subscription price is $1.50 per year, but in clubs of five it is offered at $1.00 each. Send for a sample copy free. It gave away to its agents $3,000 in cash prizes the past year. Send for terms and supplies. Address

Grip's Greeting.

I am La Grippe!
Grip, for short.
But I get there just the same!
And the way
I get there
Knocks the stuffing
Out of the annals of pathology!
I am no respecter of persons.
And silk, or satin, or broadcloth
Has no more influence with me
Than a width of Brown muslin has!
I lay for the woman
Who runs around bare headed
Or thin shod:
And the way I swipe a man
Without an overcoat
Is perfectly astonishing.
The air is full of me;
And as a microbe incubator
I may say, without fear
Of successful contradiction,
That I am beyond competition!
I've got a corner on the Human system at present.
And I'm working it
For all it's worth!
I and the doctors
Are having a picnic,
With the doctors
Getting all the gate money!
However, I'm not in it
For boodle,
And I don't care a cuss
What I'm here for,
People find out when they take me,
And there's no telling
How many have found out
In the past few weeks.
It's a cold day
When I get left,
And we are not having
Many cold days this winter,
Hence—
But why multiply words?
You know me,
And if you don't you can learn
All you want to know
By reference to the families
Which, and in which,
I have worked!
Mighty few of them
Don't recognize me socially,
And curse me
For all the crimes in the calendar!
But I ain't saying a word,
I simply
Let her go Gallagher,
And she goes
Like Sheol!

My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles; it has cured me, and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottles free at J. J. Orr's drug store. Large size 50c. and $1.00.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Secretary Blaine's Third Attack of his old Complaint—Fixing the time and place of the Democratic Convention

There was some little excitement about the White House during the Cabinet meeting yesterday by reason of the sudden illness of Secretary Blaine. He went to the White House about 11:45 o'clock and seemed to be in good health, but he had not been there more than half an hour when he complained of nausea, and said he felt weak and faint. He suggested that he had better go home, and Secretary Elkins accompanied him. They drove first to the office of Dr. Hyatt, Mr. Blaine's physician, and a brief examination showed that there was no occasion for any alarm. As a matter of prudence, however, Mr. Blaine did not return to the Cabinet meeting, but returned to his home, for the purpose of securing quiet and rest. Secretary Elkins reported to the Cabinet that Mr. Blaine's illness was caused by dyspepsia, and was not of a character to justify an adjournment of the meeting. The result was that the session continued until 3 o'clock. A gentleman who saw Mr Blaine placed in the carriage says he seemed to be suffering from an attack of vertigo. Mr. Elkins says, however, that the attack was simply dyspepsia. On account of his indisposition and the prevailing snowstorm the Secretary could not attend the Cabinet dinner last night. The sudden departure of Secretary Blaine from the Cabinet meeting gave rise to the rumor that it was the result of a difference of opinion which arose between the President and himself. The rumor further says that the Secretary's absence from the State dinner was for the same reason. Mr. Blaine was in consultation during the afternoon and evening with personal friends.

Secretary Elkins in an interview said the Chilian situation was very serious, and that war must come unless Chili made ample reparation. The whole matter, he said, was in the hands of the President and Secretaries Blaine and Tracy. The Cabinet was in full accord with them, and whatever they decided upon would meet with the approval of the other members of the Cabinet.

The decision of the Democratic National Committee is that the next National Convention of the party shall be held at Chicago on the 21st of June. That time is, so far as the conduct of the campaign goes, judicious. The notion that the convention should have been called for a date earlier than that of the Republicans had an air of courage about it, but only an air. The work of the Republican Convention would have been the same, practically, in any circumstances, and the platform of the party, as well as its candidates, would not have been changed by anything the Democrats can do. The place selected is also a good one. Chicago has as nearly perfect accommodations as any city can have for such a gathering; it is easily and conveniently accessible from all parts of the country; its Democrats are pretty sure to treat the convention not only hospitably—that goes without saying—but impartially. There is nothing gained or lost for any candidate by the selection.

The new House rules are substantially the rules of the Fiftieth Congress, with three changes. One change is a return to the rule in vogue prior to the Forty-ninth Congress, under which legislation on appropriation bills was permitted when in the interest of retrenchment in the expenditures. Another change limits the time for the call of States for the introduction of bills on "suspension Mondays" to one hour, the object being to check filibustering by consuming suspension day in the introduction of bills. The third change gives to a report from the committee on rules, fixing the time for consideration and voting on any measure, the parliamentary status now accorded to a motion to suspend the rules, viz: That only one motion to adjourn can be made before the question is put on the motion to adopt the report and pass the bill. The purpose of this amendment is to check dilatory motions. A short report will accompany the presentation of the rules to the House.

The minority will content itself with urging upon the House, during the debate, the advisability of adopting the rules of the Fifty-first Congress, with some unimportant modifications.

DISCOUNTS FOR EXPORTS.

How the "Saw Trust" Charges Home Consumers High Prices and Sells its Surplus Abroad at Low Prices.

For many years the leading saw manufacturer in the United States has been the firm of Henry Disston & Sons, whose offices were located in Philadelphia and factories across the Delaware in New Jersey. This company has now absolute control of all the saw works in the United States but two. These are the works of the Montague Woodrough Saw Co., of Chicago, and C. E. Jennings & Co. The Disstons first secured control of the Richardson Saw Co.—their strongest competitor—of, Newark, N. J., and afterwards the works of the Harry W. Pease Co., of Brooklyn, N. Y. About the same time the National Saw Co. was formed by the consolidation of the following concerns: The Wheeler, Madden & Clemson Manufacturing Co., the Montague Steel Co., both located at Middletown, N. Y.; the Woodrough & McPartlin Co., of Cincinnati, and the Woodrough & Climson Co., of Boston. For a time the National Saw Co., though it made fast agreements with the Disstons on prices and territory, was independent. The Disstons, however, rapidly absorbed the independent factories, and when this was done, proceeded to get possession of the National Saw Co. also. This was accomplished a short time ago and now their control of the manufacture of all kinds of saws is absolutely complete. The "saw trust," therefore, is the most complete trust in existence. It is even stronger than the steel rail or the steel beam trust, in that all the factories have been brought under the control of a single company.

The names of the old concerns have been retained; they issue price lists, solicit orders and ship goods as though perfectly independent. In this respect wisdom is shown, for by so doing the trust fails to attract attention as such.

All this was accomplished in 1890. Having gained absolute control, the trust proceeded at once to raise prices. Hand saws were advanced 10 to 40 per cent. and circular saws 4 to 8 cents per foot. The duties on all kinds of saws have long been prohibitive, and the trust was powerful enough with McKinley to keep them so in his tariff bill.

The duties levied by the McKinley tariff and the imports of saws in 1890 are as follows:

	Duty.	Imports.
Circular saws	30 per cent.	$ 898
Crosscut	8 cents per foot	1,016
Hand and buck saws	40 per cent.	2,019
Mill, pit and drag saws	10 cents per foot	....
Total imports		$33,471

This shows that the saw trust has absolute control of the home market.

The saw trust employs the same method as that adopted by the ax trust, the glass, lead, cartridge and other trusts to keep up prices here. It presents catalogues and price lists in Spanish, Portuguese and other foreign languages, which are distributed abroad. In these lists it offers to sell saws at prices ranging from 10 to 25 per cent. below the price which it charges the carpenters, lumbermen and farmers of the United States.

A comparison of these prices with those charged American consumers will show the extent to which foreigners are favored. The following are the prices on circular saws:

Sizes.	Home price each	Export price each
10-inch	$ 1.2	$ .92
14-inch	2.3	1.80
18-inch	3.68	2.80
20-inch	4.46	3.40
30-inch	9.47	7.20
40-inch	17.38	14.00
50-inch	42.00	32.00
60 inch	76.32	88.00
70-inch	130.8	92.00

The trust sells circular saws for export at more than 23 per cent. below the home price.

On crosscut saws a greater discrimination is made, as the following shows:

Thin back, champion crosscut saws, home price, per foot, 26 and 28 cents. Export price, per foot, 20 cents.

Extra thin back champion crosscut saws, home price, per foot, 29 and 31 cents. Foreigners get these saws 25 to 26 per cent. cheaper than they cost American buyers.

Hand saws are offered for export at still better prices than circular and crosscut saws.

This can be shown by the prices charged for the saw made at the factories in Middletown, N. Y. The prices per dozen for the various saws are as follows. The saw is what is known as No. 28, of spring steel and carved apple handle:

Length.	Home price per dozen	Export price per dozen
12 inches	$15 30	$11 50
22 "	17.95	1 .5
24 "	21 28	16. 0
28 "	25 27	19.00

This saw is sold for export at over 25 per cent. below the price charged the American consumer. These are facts and can be verified by any one who will take the trouble to compare the discount sheets and price lists sent out by the saw trust. How should the farmers and workingmen look upon such a policy of high protection whose chief effect is to create trusts and monopolies to rob the people at the same time that they favor foreign buyers?

—One of the leading spirits in the pocket knife trust is Thomas W. Bradley, of the New York Knife Co., Walden, N. Y. In a letter to the New York trade journal, Hardware, he writes in a merry way about the good things that the McKinley law is doing for the pocket knife monopoly. He says: "American manufacturers of pocket cutlery have, under the McKinley tariff, an opportunity to sell their product in an American market such as they have not had in years. * * * American makers are extending their works, increasing their output, and getting slightly better prices. * * * Life is a sight more worth living since Maj. McKinley and his colleagues framed a protective tariff to protect."

Mercantilism and McKinleyism Compared —An Example That America Might Profit By.

E. Benjamin Andrews, president of Brown university, defines mercantilism in his excellent book, "Institutes of Economics," as follows: "This (the mercantile system) neglecting agriculture magnified other businesses, and commerce in particular, yet, regarding money as the real form of wealth, insisted that in order to profit by trading a nation must have a "balance of trade" in its favor, work mines, tax imports, subsidize exportation, and conduct its whole policy with the view of amassing the greatest possible hoard of the precious metals. To this and ubiquitous governmental regulation of industries was necessary, with privileges and monopolies to all inland business deemed important, also encouragement to domestic shipping, discouragement to foreign. These notions, while more explicit in France, were common to all Europe, and determined the character of economic and international politics for centuries."

Were one asked to write a definition of McKinleyism one could not do better than to substitute for mercantilism the word McKinleyism in the above definition.

It was not until about 1775 that the statesmen of England saw where the blind worship of mercantilism was leading them. Adam Smith did more to open their eyes than any other person. At the dawn of the present century England began those reforms of her fiscal system which have made her the greatest manufacturing and commercial nation in the world. The abolition of her absurd and narrow navigation laws was the first step, the second being the free importation of raw materials for her manufacturers. The last great measure of reform was the removal of such import duties as favored the few to the detriment of the many.

On the other hand, the French carried mercantilism to its logical conclusion, and refused to discard it when its disastrous effects were becoming apparent. The result was the French revolution. The masses in France had been so robbed and plundered on all sides that they rose in their power and swept the royalty and aristocracy out of existence.

With these examples before the people of the United States, will they longer tolerate McKinleyism—the chief results of which are tariff-protected monopolies and trusts, which, unless checked, will bring about the same results.

INCREASING PRICES.

What Enabled the Tin Plate Men to Increase Prices.

Those who strenuously advocated the increase in the duty on tin plate from one cent to two and two-tenth cents per pound, had two objects in view:

First—To make tin and terne plate so high that the consumers of these articles for roofing and other purposes would be forced into the use of galvanized and other sheet iron and steel instead, and

Second—To compel the large consumers of tin plate to establish terneing plants and become the customers of the sheet iron and steel manufacturers. Every one conversant with the iron interest knows that this is true. The Iron Age admits it, and Senators Aldrich and Allison in their report on the senate substitute for the Mills bill, in which they fixed the duty on tin plate at an average of 2 2-10 cents per pound, declared: "The free admission of iron or steel sheets of all thicknesses, coated with tin or lead, would cause a substitution of imported tin plates or sheets in wood cases for roofing and other building purposes, and for domestic uses where galvanized or other sheet iron or steel is now used."

The duty was increased at the demands of the galvanized sheet iron manufacturers. As a consequence the prices of tin and terne plate went up. This is just what they wanted, for it has enabled them to raise the price of galvanized sheet iron. The combination at its last meeting adopted a new price list, making considerable increases, as the following shows:

Gauge No.	Weight per sq. ft. ozs	Old price per 100 lbs.	New price per 100 lbs.
17 to 20	28 to 38	$ 3.95	$ 4.29
23 to 24	17 to 19	4.29	4.62
25 to 26	13 to 16	4.62	4.95
27	14	4.95	5.28
28	11	5.28	5.61

The combination of the manufacturers of galvanized sheet iron never intended to engage in tin plate production. Their only object was to prevent tin plate from interfering with their markets for galvanized iron.

—The manufacture of rope, cordage and binding twine is controlled in this country by "The National Cordage Co.," a monopoly trust corporation which embraces a score or more of separate corporations, and includes all in this line of business except two or three. A late telegram says that it now seems as if the National Cordage Co. would virtually control the sale of binding twine in the northwest. The principal object of the combine is to shut out all alliance dealers who buy in large quantities and sell to their members at cost. In commenting the St. Louis Republic remarks: "Under a tariff which excludes outside competition, these corporations have combined and cornered the market. The way to break their corner is to stop imposing tariff fines on those who try to buy outside and bring in competing goods."

—In a speech in the house of representatives when a member of that body Hon. John G. Carlisle said: "Every restriction on trade has, to a greater or less extent, a tendency to diminish the distribution of the comforts and necessaries of life among the people. We are all agreed, however, that a certain amount of revenue necessary for the support of the government must be raised by the imposition of duties upon imports, and so far as such duties may have a tendency to interfere with free exchange of products the consequences are unavoidable. But the interference should not exceed beyond the actual necessities of the case."

The February Arena.

A fine portrait of Herbert Spencer forms a frontispiece to the February Arena. Accompanying that picture is a brilliant biographical sketch of Mr. Spencer's life and work by William H. Hudson, for many years the private secretary of the great philosopher. Robert S. Taylor, a prominent Republican of Indiana, contributes a very thoughtful paper on the Electoral College, under the title, "Danger Ahead." It is treated in a broad, non-partisan spirit, and will richly repay careful perusing. Ex-Gov. Lionel A. Sheldon writes of the railroad problem in a statesmanlike manner, evincing a full appreciation of the important difficulties of the problem. His paper is a valuable contribution to the series of political papers now appearing in The Arena. Henry Wood appears in a paper of great ability and profound thought entitled, "The Solidarity of the Race." Mr. Wood is the most brilliant philosopher of the modern metaphysical school of the day. The editor of The Arena writes on Hypnotism and its Relation to Psychical Research. The paper is a valuable contribution to psychical literature. Mr. Flower cites many wonderful experiments in Hypnotism performed by leading scientists, which illustrate not only the power of mind over mind, but, what is still more astonishing, the potential power of mind over matter. P. Cameron, B. C. L., of Trinity College, Toronto, discusses Inspiration and Heresy, one of the most thoughtful discussions of this timely topic that has yet appeared in Europe or America. C. C. Post, the well-known author of "Driven from Sea to Sea," writes on "The Sub-Treasury Plan" as advocated by the Farmers' Alliance—a clear, interesting exposition of this much ridiculed scheme. It is a paper which all persons should read, as it is a clear, concise presentation of the subject. Rev. Burt Estes Howard, D. D., writes on the Atonement as understood by a Presbyterian clergyman of the liberal wing. Mr. Howard's paper will doubtless create wide-spread interest and comment. A very interesting, popular and timely paper is from the pen of James Realf, Jr., on "The Last American Monarch," being a charming sketch of Dom Pedro, with his personal impressions. The second part of Hamlin Garland's powerful picture of western life and conditions, entitled "A Spoil of Office," fills twenty-five pages of this issue. It is a story of absorbing interest, and without question the best picture of western life which has yet been written. The Arena, as the great liberal and progressive review, is without a peer.

Purify your blood

The importance of keeping the blood in a pure condition is universally known, and yet there are very few people who have perfectly pure blood. The taint of scrofula, salt rheum, or other foul humor is heredited and transmitted for generations, causing untold suffering, and we also accumulate poison and germs of disease from the air we breathe, the food we eat, or the water we drink. There is nothing more conclusively proven than the positive power of Hood's Sarsaparilla over all diseases of the blood. This medicine, when fairly tried, does expel every trace of scrofula or salt rheum, removes the taint which causes catarrh, neutralizes the acidity and cures rheumatism, drives out the germs of malaria, blood poisoning, etc. It also vitalizes and enriches the blood, thus overcoming that tired feeling, and building up the whole system. Thousands testify to the superiority of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a blood purifier. Full information and statements of cures sent free.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

THE SINGLE TAX.

Q. A. Lothrop, of Neponset, Says It Is the Only Remedy for Poverty.

Under the auspices of the single tax league in Reform club hall, 566 Main street, last evening, Q. A. Lothrop, of Neponset, lectured before a small audience. T. J. Hastings presided, and in a short introductory address said he hoped the single tax would find more open advocates in Worcester than it has at present. He said New Haven, Minneapolis and other cities had elected single tax mayors and in other respects the single tax men had made greater progress than they have in Worcester.

This was the first meeting since May and election of officers was in order, but a motion to defer the election until the next meeting was passed without dissent. Mr. Hastings said he had recently seen William Lloyd Garrison, an earnest single tax orator, and he expected it would be possible to have Mr. Garrison in Worcester at the next meeting.

In beginning his lecture Mr. Lothrop expressed his pleasure being present, and said the question of the "unemployed and the single tax" was one which dwarfed all others of the country, including the slave question. Single tax advocates," said he, "are grumblers, but we are not alone; there are many kinds of grumblers, and men are becoming more and more dissatisfied with the present condition of affairs. The unequaled distribution of wealth is attracting widespread comment and criticism. Many remedies have been proposed, but the single tax remedy is by far the best, since it goes at once to the bottom of the whole matter. All other remedies are merely artificial.

"A French writer has said that in the stone age it was very difficult for the human race to gain a subsistence. In our own day, in spite of all the inventions and improvements which have been made, while a few have been carried to the top and have become immensely rich, the great mass of mankind are still in the stone age, and subsistence is barely possible."

Mr. Lothrop called attention to some of the improvements of the century. A hundred years ago a plow required one man to hold, one to sit on the beam, one to clear the way, and from four to eight yoke of oxen; and even then not more than one acre could be plowed a day. Now, one man with a team of horses can plow two acres and a half a day, and, with a steam plow, it is possible to plow five acres. The speaker referred also to the improvement in reapers, corn shellers, printing, etc., all showing the increasing power being gained by mind over matter. "Despite these achievements," said he, "the majority of men are poor, and poverty is steadily increasing." Mr. Lothrop then quoted a long passage from Henry George's "Progress and Poverty," bearing on this matter.

"There are some," he continued, "who deny that poverty is increasing. One argument against it is the 'average' argument. Men point to our great production and say it can not be possible that we are poor." The lecturer contended that this argument is fallacious and quoted the labor bureau as saying in 1885 that the condition of the working people could not possibly be worse. New York papers were quoted from, including the Press, to show the misery, degradation and squalor that exist within one-eighth of a mile from city hall. Talmage and Helen Campbell were also quoted, the former saying that if you would see how Latimer looked in the fire look in the faces of the working girls in our great cities. Such slavery as this was called worse by far than chattel slavery, when the master was responsible for the bodily comfort of his slaves.

The speaker commented upon the enormous increase in population, by immigration and otherwise, and said this would inconvenience no one if natural opportunities were free.

He discussed the wage question at some length, contending that wages could not help rising if land were not monopolized by speculators, and that they must go down under present circumstances. "Could men work twenty-four hours a day and live on one biscuit a day, they would still work all the time for their one biscuit."

The speaker then told how the western lands were held by landlords, in this country and in Europe, and gave figures to show to what an enormous extent the land had been monopolized. "An American landlord is no better than an English landlord," said Mr. Lothrop, who claimed that robbery is involved in the private ownership of land and that the tariff is a tax.

As a remedy he proposed that land value be taxed so high that it would be no object for any one to hold more than he could use. This, he said, would kill speculation and make vacant land free. He would abolish all other taxes, direct or indirect.

"If something is not done," he said, "something terrible must follow. Up to now there has been a West, where those who were too badly pressed could flee for freedom. Now there is no more west; no more public land that is not taken up, and yet millions of acres are hardly scratched. If another planet could be brought to earth, the man whose land it touched, would claim it for his own. All we want is a clear field and no favors."—Worcester (Mass.) Daily Telegram.

Fruits of Enterprise.

The Kansas City Star reports this interesting instance, illustrating the well-known fact that wealth is plentiful in this country for those who are enterprising enough to go for it:

Miss Maggie Smith, a stenographer at Guthrie, Okla., discovered that Keokuk, chief of the Iowa Indians, was living on land that had not been allotted to him. She at once entered the line at the land office and having filed on the land, went to take possession of it. The chief will be ejected. This claim has a brick house and fine barns on it, and is worth over $4,000.

The True Remedy.

Some time ago I came across a little paper containing an article called "Liquor's War on Labor." After advocating the closing of dram-shops as the cure for the conflict between labor and capital it asks, "What Does Labor Want?" And replies, "summed up in a few words it is:

"First. The right to do good work for bread." "Second. The right to get good bread for work." I presume that bread in the above quotation stands in the writer's mind, for all useful products of labor, for otherwise it would have very little sense in it since "man can not live by bread alone" now any more than formerly. This interpreted it is good as far as it goes, but who is to determine how, when, and where the laborer shall work and how much he shall receive for his labor and what are the good and useful things he should get or buy with what he gets for his toil?

The article then says that "the liquor traffic is in unmitigated hostility to these essential rights of the people," and goes on to show that less labor is employed in proportion to the capital used in the liquor traffic than in other kinds of business and argues from this that labor is thus defrauded. But is it labor that we want or its products, and would it be a bad thing if by using the stored up results of labor (capital) to assist production we could get the products of labor without expending so much labor? Every labor-saving invention tends in exactly that direction, but according to the author of the above mentioned article they are all bad, as tending to reduce the labor necessary to produce a given result.

I wonder if he ever inquired what is the reason that "the right to do good work for bread" and "the right to get good bread for work" can not be exercised? Every man comes into the world with a body to be fed and clothed and sheltered and with two hands with which to provide food clothing and shelter for it, and all around him lies the land from which all supplies for his body must and can be drawn. Why does he not apply his labor to these natural opportunities and supply his wants? Why must he wait until some fellow-being with no better right to life than he has, graciously permits him to go to work? Is it not simply because by our iniquitous land system we allow a few to monopolize what justly belongs to all?

Let us sweep away these restrictions by requiring all who control land to pay into the common treasury its full annual value, thus rendering it unprofitable to hold land without using it. Then all men can find plenty of work without begging for it and it will cease to be regarded as a boon. Thus involuntary poverty will cease because each will be secured in the possession of all he produces whether he works for himself or for another. Then intemperance born of poverty and undue wealth will cease because the cause is removed.

But what would happen to-day leaving our land system untouched, if through prohibition or any other means we could entirely destroy intemperance? We should simply have increased the number of sober and industrious people competing for a chance to work, and wages would thus be crowded still lower. All that could be saved, which had been formerly spent for liquor would be relinquished to secure a chance to earn anything.

I would not have anyone suppose for one moment that I am defending intemperance. Far from it. I would gladly take any just means to destroy the terrible evil. But prohibition not only is unjust, it is an ineffective means, and tends besides to draw attention away from the true remedy, the destruction of involuntary poverty by the freeing of natural opportunities through the single tax on land values.—E. D. B., in "Justice."

Destruction of Land Values.

Philip G. Boulton, of Brooklyn, wants to know if the exchange value of unimproved land would entirely disappear under the single tax, and gives this example to illustrate his meaning: Would a piece of unimproved land that to-day has a market value of $50,000 have any market value if the single tax were in operation.

If the single tax were in perfect ideal operation, no land would not have any capitalized value. It would still have an annual value, but the annual tax payment required would be to a penny equal to the value of the annual advantage. Therefore, there would be nothing to capitalize. Ideal perfection, however, can not be expected, and it is probable that valuable land in use would always be worth somewhat more than the value of its improvements. Land held out of use would not be, however, for the tax, though far short of ideal perfection, would be high enough to make it unprofitable long to hold the land out of use. It would soon be put to use if exceptionally desirable, or thrown into common if not.—The Standard.

A Powerful Book.

Henry George's reply to the pope's encyclical on the labor question is meeting with an enormous sale both in this country and abroad. It is considered by many as the most important contribution to the literature called out by the papal disquisition on socialism and private property in land, and it is commanding the respectful attention of clergymen of all denominations. In this work Mr. George, in that charmingly lucid style which is quite his own, restates his philosophy in the simplest and plainest possible language, meeting every objection which his critics have raised, and leaving the question of land ownership illuminated in the glow of a high morality. The book is couched in the most deferential terms, and even those who will not accept his conclusions must admire the skill and finesse of his arguments, the eloquence of his appeal, and the force and vigor of thought which mark every page. It can scarcely fail to have a wide reading and exercise a considerable influence on the economic thought of the world.—Yankee Blade, Boston, Mass.

ROASTED TO DEATH.

The National Surgical Institute at Indianapolis Burned.

At Least a Score of Helpless Patients Perished in the Flames, While as Many More Received Severe Injuries.

AN AWFUL SCENE.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 23.—In the surgical institute which burned Thursday night at midnight, a score of helpless, crippled children, inmates of the institution, lost their lives, and as many more persons were injured, some of them badly; most of them slightly. Two hundred and forty-six patients and thirty nurses, sleeping in the two four-story buildings at the corner of Illinois and Georgia streets, in which the institute is located, were in imminent danger of their lives.

Their rescue, the fight with the flames, and the final discovery of the charred remains of the poor, dead children wrapped in each others' withered arms, make a story rarely paralleled in the annals of modern cities. It was almost on the stroke of 12 when Janitor Gill gave the alarm, instantly followed by the second and third. The telephone had conveyed to the chief the news that the building of all others where fire was dreaded was in flames. This meant no ordinary danger. It proved to be a holocaust.

Some were killed by jumping, but the others were suffocated or burned to death. The list of identified dead is:

Kate Strong, Salem, Ore.; Mrs. Lazarus, of Chicago, jumped from the second story of the rear building; William Ramstack, Milwaukee; Miss Kate Burns, Newport, Minn.; Frank Burns, Newport, Minn; Minnie Arnold, Lancaster, Mo.; Irma Payne, Dexter, Minn.; Stella Spees, Macomb, O.; Minnie McDonald, Negaunee, O.; George Ellis, California, Ky.; Mrs. Earb and daughter, Shelby, O.; Frank Breeden, Memphis, Tenn.; Mortie Deckko, died at 305 North Mississippi street; Frederick Dockendorf, Stillwater, Minn.; Hannah Brook, Taylorsville, Ill.; C. H. Gorman, McDonald, Mich.; Arthur Bayless.

Injured: Minnie Lazurus, aged 7, leg broken; Mrs. H. H. Edena and son, both severely injured; Mrs. Thomas, 184 Massachusetts avenue, burned about the face and body, in terrible agony; Fannie Breeden, Memphis, Tenn., burned in a dozen places; Mrs. J. R. Guild, Medaryville, Ind., internally injured by a fall from the ladder, probably fatal; Mary Stearns, Warren, Ia., terribly burned about the feet while running into the burning hallway; Clara Morris, hurt in back; Grant Van Hoesen, Athens, N. Y., hand and ear burned; Clarence Mead, Athens, N. Y., leg slightly hurt; William H. Albach, Dunkirk, N. Y., slightly burned; Leora Knowles, Independence, Ind., back hurt by jumping out of third-story window; M. W. Wydner, Troy, O., internally injured by falling out of a window while trying to escape; William Mansfield, Otsego, N. Y., foot hurt while jumping; Mrs. John S. Stokes, Danville, Ill., sprained ankle; Nellie Mason, of Walworth county, Wis., jumped out of third-story window and will die from her injuries; Mrs. C. J. Simpson and little girl, carried out by firemen, seriously burned; R. Connor, fell from the second to the first floor, serious if not fatal internal injuries; W. M. Widener, Miami county, O., terribly crushed and fatally injured; Roy Harris, New Orleans, not seriously hurt.

Five bodies were taken out Friday morning. Kregelo & Whitsett took four of them to their morgue and one was taken in charge by Powers & Blackwell. They were roasted alive, the skin having peeled off from the bodies. In a few instances their faces were burned off.

The fire started just before midnight, and the first alarm was quickly followed by second, third and fourth calls. From all that can be ascertained it is probable that the fire originated in the room where the printing matter, circulars, etc., were kept. This is on the ground floor in the rear of the main building. Mrs. Copeland, one of the rescued attendants, said that an hour before the alarm of fire was turned in the night watchman came to her room and asked her if she was burning paper. She told him that she was not and in a few minutes he again asked her. This proves that the fire had been smoldering for some time.

There was a total insurance of $51,500 on the surgical institute buildings, furniture and surgical supplies. The exact loss cannot be estimated but it will aggregate at least $40,000.

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.

THE MICHIGAN EDITORS TAKE TWO TRIPS THROUGH THE BIG CAVERN.

A Few Notes Gathered From a Day's Visit At This Famous Resort and Great Natural Curiosity.

The three days' session of the Michigan Press Association at Ann Arbor culminated in a grand banquet on Thursday evening, January 14th. On the following day those members who had been booked for the Southern trip gathered at Toledo, and at eleven o'clock a. m. started in two extra coaches over the C. H. & D. line, for Cincinnati. About two p. m. Lima was reached where we halted for dinner, and at seven in the evening we arrived in Cincinnati. The weather was stormy and snowy all the way, but it was a very pleasant day's ride. This line is well managed and D. B. Tracy, the special agent at Detroit, was on board giving his personal attention and supervision to the welfare of the Wolverine editors and their wives. Mr. Tracy, by the way, is an old hand at this business. He has served as special agent of the C. H. & D. line, with headquarters at Detroit, for twenty years, and has managed a good many excursions during that time. All the little details to promote the pleasure of his guests were carefully attended to and he made many new friends, both for himself and the old reliable Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton on that day's trip.

Upon arriving at Cincinnati, the party scattered, the wise and prudent ones however going to the Palace Hotel, where we had a splendid supper, a good lodging and a dandy breakfast the next morning. The Palace is an admirably conducted house, first-class in every particular and the charges are very moderate for the service and accommodations. It reminds one of the old Michigan Exchange in Detroit in its palmy days. At eight o'clock Saturday morning the party gathered at the Louisville & Nashville depot and took possession of two Pullman coaches, which were to be their abiding place for the round trip. The Mammoth Cave guests were domiciled in one car and the Florida party in the other. Our car was named the Calumet. The route between Cincinnati and Louisville runs through a very hilly section, and we passed through several tunnels on the road. Arriving at Louisville about two o'clock in the afternoon we halted for dinner at the Union station. This is an elegant edifice, said to be one of the finest railroad depots in the entire South. The dinner itself was in harmony with the surroundings, and an elaborate menu was served with special printed bills of fare for the occasion. The halt for dinner consumed an hour and a half. Our journey Southward was then resumed and we arrived at the Mammoth Cave Hotel between seven and eight o'clock, as hungry as a lot of young cubs. A good substantial supper was in waiting, which was disposed of without undue ceremony, and at nine o'clock we started out for the "short route" through the cave. The short route, by the way, is only eight miles in length, and we returned to our berths in the Calumet at two o'clock the next morning.

The location is a romantic and charming resort, especially in the summer season, although it is kept open for guests the year around. The estate itself comprises about 2000 acres. The hotel and perhaps 300 acres of tillable ground rest on an elevated table land, while back of the hotel, stretching for half a mile down to the Green River, the landscape is dotted with lofty hills and deep ravines, which form a hunter's paradise and afford delightful drives. The grounds have been elegantly laid out, both ornamental shrubbery and ancient oaks covering a well kept lawn. The hotel itself is a curiosity. The original cabin built by the miners in 1812 still stands and is used as a wash house. Next came a more stylish log house. As visitors multiplied the cabins multiplied. These cabins were finely connected together in a long row. Then a spacious three story building was erected in front, containing offices, parlors, ball room etc. Then wide verandahs were added. The hostelry thus evolved is shaped like a letter L. It has over 600 feet of covered portico and a more delightful place cannot be found in the Sunny South. The hotel is admirably managed, the cuisine plain and substantial. The meals are what any well-to-do Michigan farmer would enjoy in his own home, healthful, wholesome and well served, and the charges are very modest for a resort of that character. Mr. H. C. Ganter, the agent of the estate and the active manager of the house is a model landlord. His geniality and good nature seem to pervade the entire establishment. His eagle eye watches every detail, and his corps of assistants are all thoroughly trained in their special duties. Here the old style Southern hospitality finds a congenial soil, and the guests feel "at home" as soon as they step across the threshold of the old mansion. The hotel register shows an aggregate of about 6000 guests a year. Many of these come from the north and from Europe, but a majority of them hail from the chief cities of the Sunny South and represent the best types of Southern society.

The entrance to the Cave is reached by a rough path leading down a wild ravine, and is about 300 yards from the hotel on the bluff. It is 118 fee below the summit of the bluff and 194 feet above the level of Green river. The Cave was discovered in 1809 and during the war of 1812 certain portions of it were used for the manufacture of saltpetre, an important ingredient of gunpowder. The income derived from these saltpetre works amounted to $30,000 in the year 1814. After the war the Cave was no longer employed for that purpose, but in time became a popular resort for tourists. The cavern does not consist of one great room, but a series of chambers, avenues, defiles and crooked paths, rivers and lakes, on five different levels. The entrance is on the second level. It contains 223 separate paths or streets, 150 miles of which have been explored; 47 domes, one of them 300 feet high; 23 pits, one 175 feet deep; 8 cataracts, 3 rivers and 3 lakes. The average width and height of the avenues is 21 feet and the space worked out of the limestone rock to make these avenues is estimated at 12,000,000 cubic yards. Spring, summer, autumn and winter are unknown here. One uniform temperature—54 degrees—prevails throughout the year. Not a single ray of sunlight has ever penetrated the cavern and eternal darkness holds sway within. The atmosphere highly charged with oxygen, makes the air cool and bracing hence one can tramp for hours through the winding paths and over the rocks, without feeling the least fatigue.

Whatever route one takes, he must travel for a certain distance what is called the Main Cave. This may be compared to a great trunk from which the avenues seem to branch. The mouth of the Cave itself is 70 feet wide and 50 feet deep. A small rippling stream, issuing from a crevice above, drops upon the rocks below. You descend 96 flagstone steps and traverse a smooth, wide pathway for about twenty rods to the Iron Gate—the real cave entrance. The current of air through this gate is so strong as frequently to blow out the lights. Beyond the iron gate for about twenty rods are the Narrows, when suddenly the roof lifts, the walls expand, and you are in the Rotunda. This is located, as nearly as surveys can estimate it, directly under the dining room of the hotel. The "Short Route," so called, is eight miles in length and traverses those avenues lying nearest to and connecting with the Rotunda. The different domes, pits and avenues have names affixed to them, which are explained by the guide who pilots the tourist through the Cave. If the visiting party numbers several persons a second guide goes along, one leading the party and the other bringing up the rear. Each person is provided with a small tin lamp hung in a light wire frame, and filled with lard oil. Some of the names given to the special points of interest on the short route are: The Methodist Church, Grand Arch, Giant's Coffin, Proctor's Arcade, Fairy Grotto, Lovers' Leap, Napoleon's Dome, Wooden Bowl room, Black Snake Avenue, Bottomless Pit, Scylla and Charibdis, The Corkscrew, and many others. Over seventy names have been affixed to special localities in the entire cavern. The guide explains these different places as you proceed, frequently relating anecdotes connected with them, and burning magnesium and colored lights in all the larger domes and pits.

The "long route" branches off from the main cave a few rods beyond the Rotunda and proceeds in an entirely different direction. Among the special curiosities on this route may be mentioned: The River Styx and Echo River, the Great Walk, Scotchman's Trap, Martha's Vineyard, Lucy's Dome, Ole Bull's Concert Hall, Black Hole of Calcutta, Cleveland's Cabinet, Paradise, Zoe's Grotto, Snow Ball room and others. Our party took the long route on Sunday, taking a luncheon about noon inside the cave. The above will afford a very faint and superficial idea of what the great cavern is, and but few tourists ever see more than one-fifth of its grand curiosities.

We had supper on Sunday at the Cave hotel, and at eight p. m. were rolling home again towards Louisville. The weary party gladly took to their berths as soon as the train started and we arrived at Cincinnati at seven o'clock Monday morning. Here we surrendered our Pullman coach and bade good-bye to the L. & N. road. In this connection we consider it our duty to compliment the Louisville and Nashville road for their excellent accommodations and the courtesy shown to tourists. Their road is one of the best equipped systems in the South. The original line from Louisville to Nashville has grown until it controls a line to Cincinnati, one to St. Louis, Mo., one to New Orleans through Alabama, and one along the Gulf into Florida, besides numerous branches and feeders in Kentucky, Tennessee and Alabama. Assistant Passenger Agent Morse met the party at Cincinnati, accompanied them to the Cave, and returned with them to Louisville. He was the central figure of the party on that portion of the trip. His rotund physique and genial manners made him a universal favorite, and he placed us all under special obligations for continued favors and assistance. In being favored with his company and acquaintance we had a great advantage over ordinary tourists to the Cave, an advantage which we were not slow in appreciating.

We took breakfast at the Palace Hotel, a day's ride on the C. H. & D., supper at Toledo, and the night Lake Shore train delivered us safely at home again. We enjoyed our outing immensely and have already registered a vow to visit the big cavern at some time in the summer season. The little we saw was simply an aggravation and only whetted our appetite for more.

ANN ARBOR LETTER.

EDITOR OF HERALD:—It may interest some of the readers of the HERALD, especially its Presbyterian friends to know that, on Monday evening, January 11th, McMillian Hall of the Presbyterian Club House of Ann Arbor, was formally opened for the use of the students and the public generally.

Dr. Wallace Radcliffe delivered the first of a series of lectures upon "Some Religious Leaders of America" to be given on Monday evenings this semester; his subject this time being Francis Makemie. Before beginning which, in the name of "The Tappan Presbyterian Association," of which he is President, he gave all students of the University, as well as citizens of Ann Arbor, a hearty welcome within the halls of the building so generously donated by Senator McMillan with the express request "Don't make it too plus for the boys." The lecture gave ear, interesting and somewhat detailed account of the life of Makemie, the pioneer of Presbyterianism in America and the church as established by him in Maryland in the latter part of the seventh century. After the lecture and singing by the male quartette a social was held under the auspices of the Young People's Association and a pleasant time was apparently enjoyed by all. The new hall is built of brick and conveniently located on the corner of Huron and State streets, adjoining the old Sackett, building given to the Tappan Association sometime ago. The Assembly room, in which lectures are held, is spacious and below are large reception rooms on either side of the entrance hall. Back of the south one is the Library, a room containing at present about four thousand volums of valuable reading matter, church history and theological works, as well as some secular lore. In the basement is the Gymnasium, not yet completed, in which is a long fine bowling alley. Truly the U. of M. may well be proud of such a building and it is to be hoped that the scheme to furnish training in Presbyterian doctrine, history and methods, which will fit students for practical service in their home church or professional study in the theological seminary, may soon be realized. B.

United in Death.

Leverette A. Chapman was born at East Haddam, Conn., in October, 1835. His wife, Mary L., was born at Covey Hill, Lower Canada, in the year 1834. But little is known of their early life. They both obtained a good common school education in their youth, met each other in New York State, and united in marriage thirty-six years ago this spring. Three years thereafter they came to Tecumseh and settled here for a permanent home. "Lon," as he was familiarly called, was a well-known character in this community for many years. He was a rugged, industrious man, faithful to his family duties, of the strictest honesty and integrity, and an upright citizen. His wife was one of those quiet, unassuming bodies, of home-loving habits, whose daily life was faithfully devoted to the welfare of husband and children. Their domestic life was an exceedingly happy one. Their nearest neighbors and those who knew them best were their warmest friends. Mrs. Chapman was a charter member of the Universalist Church of Tecumseh and was a zealous worker in church circles during her residence here.

Two years ago they moved to Grand Rapids that they might pass their declining years with their sons, both of whom had gone to that city. Early in January Mrs. Chapman was taken with the prevailing epidemic and on Thursday, the 7th, she passed over to the other shore. The remains were brought to Tecumseh by her husband and on Saturday, Jan. 9th, a brief service was held at Mrs. A. McNeil's residence, conducted by Rev. J. Phelps. Mr. Chapman was so prostrated with grief and excitement that he was taken with a violent attack of pneumonia the same morning, at Mrs. McNeil's, and was unable to attend the burial. He grew rapidly worse with each succeeding day and on Thursday, the 14th, just one week after his own Mary's death, his spirit followed hers to the better land. His lifeless body was taken to the home of L. B. Ayers, their nearest neighbor in Tecumseh, where funeral obsequies were held on Friday afternoon, conducted by Rev. O. J. Perrin. Many neighbors and friends of the family were present to share with the one solitary mourner, his son Vincent, their sorrow and sympathy in his awful affliction. Verily the ways of Providence are mysterious and past finding out. The husband and wife have been released from the trials of this world and now sleep side by side in our evergreen cemetery. United on earth, in death they shall not be divided.

OBITUARY.

The following obituary notice of the late Lansing Quackenbush is taken from a recent number of the Universalist.

Another of our pioneer Universalists has gone to his reward. Lansing Quackenbush was born in Montgomery Co., N. Y., Oct 22, 1825. He married Mary E. Beeman Sept. 23, 1844; removed to Michigan in 1862, and for the past nine years has resided at Tecumseh, Mich. His wife passed to the higher life seven years ago. His youngest daughter then kept house for him until she became the faithful wife of Rev. J. B. Getchell, pastor of our church at Marshall, Mich. Last fall Br. Quackenbush expressed a desire to spend the winter with his daughter at Marshall, where he could also attend the Universalist church. It is needless to say how gladly everything was made ready for his happiness and comfort. But after a brief sickness he passed to the higher life from the home of Rev. J. B. Getchell, Marshall, Dec. 28, 1891.

A brief service was held at Marshall, where Rev. Dr. VanAntwerp, of the Episcopal church, paid a very high tribute to the memory of our brother. Being of the same nationality Dr. VanAntwerp had spent many hours with our brother at his home, and was present when he passed away. The Rector said he never witnessed a more peaceful and triumphant death. It seemed more like a tired child dropping into a peaceful sleep than a strong man dying.

After prayer offered by Rev. F. McAlpine the remains were taken to Tecumseh, where appropriate services were held in Br. Quackenbush's home, conducted by Br. McAlpine, on Dec. 31, 1891.

Thus closes the earthly life of one who was a Universalist in head and heart and life, who many, many times has walked miles to hear our elder brother, Rev. D. Skinner, preach, and who was always faithful to his church.

Br. Quackenbush was the father of eleven children. Seven boys and three girls still live and were present at the father's funeral, as they were also at the mother's seven years ago. The children are all married, and are all noble specimens of manhood and womanhood. The father's life and religious principles reappear in his children.

Thus closes the earthly life of one who was an honor to his race, one of Nature's noblemen.

Elizabeth Wilson, wife of Samuel Wilson, of Franklin, Lenawee Co., died January 19, 1892. Mrs. Wilson was the daughter of Oliver and Roxanna King, and was born April 17, 1822, at Bergen, Orleans county, N. Y. Her parents and two little brothers came to Michigan in 1834. The next year her father died. April 12th, 1840, she married Mr. Samuel Wilson, and settled on the farm where she lived and died.

In that early day this county was one vast wilderness, with no roads, and only paths and marked trees to guide you, but she lived to see the forest cleared away, beautiful highways laid out, with trees planted to shade them, and the county where she lived the banner county of the world.

Her amiable disposition, and her zeal in the cause of truth and right gathered around her many warm friends. During the rebellion she had the welfare of the soldier at heart, and her earnest endeavor in the work soon found her at the head of the soldiers' aid society, and many a poor, sick, or wounded soldier has been made more comfortable because she lived.

The grip attacked her on the 6th inst., and although the best medical aid was called, and all done that willing hands and loving hearts could do, she had not the strength to rally, and gradually grew worse until death came to her relief.

She leaves a husband, three sons and one daughter to mourn her loss. All of them were with her as the last spark of life went out. That husband loses a noble wife, and those four children one of the best mothers that ever lived. With tear-stained faces we followed her remains to the last resting place. "Ashes to ashes, dust to dust." With sorrowful hearts we turned away, knowing that to the grave had been consigned as noble a heart as ever throbbed within a mother's breast.

A notable issue is the Magazine of American History for February. Its frontispiece is a copy of the famous historic painting of the United States Electoral Commission of 1877, the portraits of the distinguished persons represented in it being in every instance from life sittings. The key to this remarkable picture appears in the open paper of the number, and one need only glance over the names to appreciate the value of the artist's work. Judge Charles Cowley contributes the "Minority Report" of that Commission, a state document of historic value, and adds a brief sketch of Judge Abbott who prepared the report, which was never until now published.

M. P. Brown, the well known Tecumseh photographer, has sold his counterfeiting establishment and a brick building he owned in the village, taking in exchange for the latter, a farm near Watertown, Dakota. Married, at the home of the bride's uncle, John Linton, of Macon, by the Rev. J. I. Gulick, pastor of the Reform Church, of Macon, Mr. Charles H. Orr, of Tecumseh, to Miss Martha Linton, of Macon. A very pleasant party assembled to join in their congratulations and best wishes, for the continued happiness of the contracting parties. After a bountiful supper was served the young couple started for their own home already prepared in Tecumseh, followed by the best wishes of their many friends.

In our issue of January 14th we published a reading notice of a Detroit house on Jefferson Ave., offering great bargains in clothing. The notice came from Geo. M. Savage, a responsible advertising agent in Detroit, from whom we receive a large amount of advertising yearly, and hence we had every reason to suppose it to be O. K. We have since learned that it was a bad fake and we owe our readers an apology for misleading them. Several persons from Raisin, Franklin and other towns went to Detroit purposely to trade there, only to find themselves badly sold. All of which goes to show that the most careful newspapers are sometimes imposed upon, and that advertising is more generally read than some people suppose.

Rev. Josiah Phelps is seriously ill.

"From first to last he holds his audience with marked attention."—New York Tribune.

The funeral of Mrs. Chase, of Raisin, mother of D. Chase of Tecumseh, was held yesterday.

"The scenes were brought up with an interesting vividness and intensity."—Boston Herald.

The regular meeting of Beers' Post will be held next Monday evening and a full attendance is desired.

Miss Cora Reynolds, of Ashburnham, Mass., was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Hall Monday and Tuesday.

The boys are smoking at Frank Snedicor's expense to-day. Its a nine pound boy and arrived last night.

"Major Dane is a fluent speaker, and describes with dramatic effect the scenes upon the wave during the late war."—Boston Post.

"He held his audience spell-bound. He is very graphic in his description, and very dramatic in his 'delivery."—San Francisco Evening Bulletin.

The President of St. Peter's Guild has appointed a meeting of the guild to be held at Mrs. M. E. Corey's house at three o'clock, Saturday afternoon. A full attendance is desired.

Mrs. Sarah Edwards, after a lingering illness of weeks, died at her home in this village yesterday, at half past ten o'clock. The funeral will be held at the residence Friday at half past one in the afternoon.

In the case of Dewey vs. Taylor, before Justice Davidson, the jury decided a question of some interest to business people. The jury thought that a contract for sale under $50 worth of goods was binding though no money be paid down by vendee. Six cents damages were awarded plaintiff.

"Major Dane is a gentleman who sees, hears, and notices everything, and he has the happy faculty of describing things as they are. His wonderful eloquence, his graphic descriptions, his vivid portraiture of things, persons, and places, are simply matchless."—Evening Post. San Francisco.

About one-half of Britton was in Tecumseh Tuesday trying to prove and refute the charge of drunkeness in the case of the People vs. Larrabee. The defendant was discharged by the court. So varied and different are the feelings and experiences of different persons under the influence of the fardent that it has seldom happened in the history of jurisprudence that two witnesses will agree as to just what a "drunk" is.

"Major Henry C. Dane, of Boston, on the subject, 'Up the Rhine and over the Alps with a Knapsack,' drew an immense audience to Hammond's Opera House, on Monday evening. Major Dane is a man of many parts and powers. The bills truthfully call the lecturer 'the renowned traveler and incomparable orator,' and it may be said of him also that he is a superior actor, commanding the unwavering attention of the ordinary careless listener. A superior man has never appeared on the Cambridge lecture platform, in our knowledge and judgment."—Evening Times, Cambridge, Ohio.

"His theme was handled with all the eloquence and dramatic fire that have characterized his previous efforts. To attempt a report of his vivid illustration of the battle of the next day would be fruitless indeed. The fact that a participant and survivor of that battle (Mobile Bay) stood before the audience added much to the zest of interest that showed in every face. Major Dane belonged to the army proper, the signal service. His description of the battle of Mobile Bay was the climax of eloquence and vivid portrayal."—The Times Star, Cincinnati, O.

The February number of the Forum contains two notable articles on the methods of choosing members of the electoral college, apropos of the recent action of the Legislature of Michigan. This subject, especially since the President give so much space to it in his message, is coming forward for even more earnest discussion than hitherto. Ex-Senator Edmunds finds a peril to our liberties in such a change from the ordinary method of choosing electors, whereas Mr. Phelps, late minister to England, sees advantages in it. Mr. Edmunds and Mr. Phelps are perhaps the ablest constitutional lawyers, one a Republican and the other a Democrat, now living, and this subject has not before, we believe, been taken up in so pointed a way by men of such general reputation for learning.

Card of Thanks.

To the many friends, who so kindly befriended me in my recent terrible affliction, I tender my heardfelt thanks. May the Good Father bless you all.
VINCENT CHAPMAN.

Charles Dudley Warner, in the Editor's Drawer of Harper's Magazine for February, will propose a novel plan by which life may be inverted, and most of the ills which now afflict mankind may be avoided. "This plan," he says, "has more to recommend it than most others for removing poverty and equalizing conditions. We should all start rich, and the dying off of those who would never attain youth would amply provide fortunes for those born old. Crime would be less also; for while there would doubtless, be some old sinners, the criminal class, which is very largely under thirty, would be much smaller than it is now. Juvenile depravity would proportionally disappear, as not more people would reach non age than now reach over-age. And the great advantage of the scheme, one that would indeed transform the world, is that women would always be growing younger."

Parlez-Vous Francias? If you don't, there certainly have been times when you wished that you could; and if you are anxious to learn to read and speak French, you should have the splendid article "French Without a Master" by Prof. A. de Rougemont of Chautauqua University, published in Demorest, Family Magazine for February. With the definite and practical instructions given in it one cannot fail to acquire knowledge of French in an astonishingly short time. As usual, there is something in this number for everybody, and everything is of the best; and this number is only a sample of what is furnished twelve times a year, for $2. Published by W. Jennings Demorest, 15 E. 14th St., New York City.

JUSTICE BRADLEY.

The Venerable Jurist Passes Away at His Home in Washington.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Joseph P. Bradley, associate justice of the supreme court of the United States, died yesterday morning at his residence in this city of general debility. Justice Bradley was in the 79th year of his age and had been ill for several months. He leaves a wife, two daughters and a son.

[Joseph P. Bradley was born at Berne, N. Y., March 14, 1813. His grandfather was one of the heroes of 1812. The eldest of eleven children, Joseph was early inured to work, secured largely his own schooling, and graduated with honors at Rutgers and won reputation as a writer. He was admitted to the bar in 1840, and in 1870 he was appointed to the supreme bench, being assigned to the Fifth circuit, in the south, where he rendered many important decisions. Since then he has been attached to the Third circuit. As a jurist he won distinction in cases involving maritime law, constitutional construction and patent cases. At the outbreak of the civil war he took an active part with voice and pen in defending the union cause. He inclined but little toward politics. In early life he was a whig, later a republican. He accepted a congressional nomination in 1862, but in a district where the opposing party could not be deposed. In 1868 he headed the state electoral ticket for Grant. He cast the deciding vote in the electoral commission of 1877, the report of which settled the Hayes-Tilden presidential contest.]

WAR IN THE AIR.

Uncle Sam Presents His Ultimatum to Chili.

Failure to Comply Will Result in the Transmissal of the President's Message to Congress and a Probable Declaration of War.

MUST REPLY AT ONCE.

SANTIAGO, Jan. 25.—The ultimatum of the United States government has just been made public here. The terms are:

Immediate withdrawal of Matta's note.

Indemnity and apology.

Failing in this Minister Egan is to be recalled at once and diplomatic relations severed.

VALPARAISO, Jan. 25.—The ultimatum of the government of the United States that Chili must immediately and without reservation withdraw the offensive note of Senor Matta, ex-minister of foreign affairs, apologize for the assault upon the sailors of the cruiser Baltimore and pay indemnity for the injuries inflicted upon American citizens has been handed the Chilian government by Minister Egan.

This is the reply sent by the United States to the demand of the Chilian government for the recall of Mr. Egan. The prompt sending of this ultimatum, instead of an order to Mr. Egan that he must return home, has surprised the Chilian government, and it is rumored that President Montt, who is resting at a bathing resort, has been asked to return at once to Santiago and consult with his cabinet and council of state in regard to the matter.

Interviews were had with Eduardo Motte and Judge Alfonso, both of whom are members of the council of state. When informed of the nature of the ultimatum sent by Secretary Blaine they expressed considerable surprise at its terms, and, without formally committing themselves, both agreed that it would be a supine act to now withdraw Matta's letter. They expressed the hope that at the meeting of the council of state in conjunction with the cabinet to-day a peaceful solution of the difficulty might be arranged.

It has been definitely ascertained that Senor Pereira, the Chilian minister of foreign affairs, has sent to United States Minister Egan a formal notification that the Chilian government will reply to-day to the ultimatum of the United States government.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—Every preparation has been made for sending the message on the Chilian affair to congress to-day noon. It is certain to go in at that time unless Chili makes a reparation by cable within the few hours left to her. No limit of time was given within which Chili was expected to reply, yet she was made aware of the fact that if she did not act before to-day the president would not await her pleasure longer, but would lay the subject before congress.

It has been definitely decided that Minister Egan is not to be recalled.

President Harrison does not seem to be at all doubtful as to the action congress will take, and under his direction Secretary Tracy is going right along preparing for an active and protracted campaign in Chilian waters. By far the most significant and warlike step yet taken by the navy department was the chartering on Friday of the Americanli ne steamship Ohio for conversion into a floating repair shop.

WANT TO BE STATES.

Five Territories Will Apply for Admission Into the Union.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Five territories, viz: Indian, New Mexico, Utah, Oklahoma and Arizona, are making strenuous efforts for admission into the sisterhood of states and their claims will be presented to this congress; but it is not probable that any of them will be admitted this year, the near approach of the presidential election, and the unfavorable condition of most of the proposed states being obstacles. The Mormon incubus in Utah will have to be effaced and the Indian territory will have to assimilate its less civilized population to the standard of the rest of the country before statehood can be assumed. Oklahoma being small in area, it is not clear whether when it is admitted it will come in by itself or with contiguous Indian territory or a portion of it as forming one state.

Pig Iron Products.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—The total production of pig iron in the United States in 1891 was 8,279,870 gross tons, against 9,202,703 gross tons in 1890. The total production of Bessemer steel rails was 1,218,874 gross tons, a decrease of 577,615 tons from the production in 1890.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 8.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent;
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only Gold, Silver and Bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory.

EGO AND ECHO.

I asked of Echo, t'other day,
Whose words are few and often funny,
What to a question she would say
Of courtship, love and matrimony.
Quoth Echo, plainly: "Matter o' money."

Whom should I marry? Should it be
A dashing damsel gay and pert,
A pattern of consistency,
Or selfish, mercenary flirt?
Quoth Echo, sharply: "Very flirt."

What if, a-weary of the strife
That long has lured the gay deceiver,
She promised to amend her life
And sin no more—can I believe her?
Quoth Echo, with decision: "Leave her."

But if some maiden with a heart
On me should venture to bestow it,
Pray, should I act the wiser part
To take the treasure or forego it?
Quoth Echo, very coolly: "Let her."

But what, if seemingly afraid
To bind her fate in Hymen's fetter,
She vows she means to die a maid,
In answer to my loving letter?
Quoth Echo, very coolly: "Let her."

What if, in spite of her disdain,
I find my heart entwined about
With Cupid's dear, delicious chain,
So closely that I can't get out?
Quoth Echo, laughingly: "Get out."

But if some maid with beauty blest,
As pure and fair as Heaven can make her,
Will share my labor and my rest
Till envious death shall overtake her?
Quoth Echo (aside here): "Take her."

PONDEROUS SAFES.

Massive Receptacles for the Keeping of Precious Jewels.

Solid Walls of Steel That the Most Skillful Burglar Could Not Penetrate in a Shorter Time Than Twelve Hours.

Here are 200 feet of showcases, half of them on one side of a long room, and back of them are as many feet of upright cases stood against the wall. In the rear of the room are more cases, and wherever there is room for them are costly music boxes, bronze statuettes, and other valuable articles of European and American make. All the showcases are full of jewelry and other articles made of gold and silver. For twenty feet near the front the cases hold nothing but real diamonds and other precious stones, for the place is a big jeweler's salesroom up town, where no imitation articles are sold—nothing but real gold and silver and real stones.

"What a beautiful field for a burglar!" was the idea that flashed through the mind of a Sun reporter who entered the place a few days ago. Not that he contemplated operating in that field; but on looking about the room he could see no sign of a safe or any other strong receptacle—not even such a little iron box as Mr. Russell Sage was recently expected to produce $1,200,000 from.

"What do you do with your goods at night?" the reporter asked the proprietor.

"You'll find it easier to get them in the daytime," Mr. Jeweler smilingly responded.

"But you have some system of securing them. Tell me what it is for the information of the public—if it is not a secret."

"There is no secret about it," the jeweler replied. "Do you see those three cabinets, those black walnut cabinets, against the east wall? We put everything in those at night."

"You trust to a black walnut cupboard all these cases of gold and diamonds, do you, valued at—at about how much?"

"If you take the entire lot," Mr. Jeweller laughed, "you can have it for $350,000. But come behind the counter with me and let me show you the cabinets."

The jeweler led the way to the middle of the east side of the room, between cases full of diamonds and costly stones on the one hand and upright cases full of silver teapots and trays and sugar bowls on the other hand.

"Here," he said, when the cabinets were reached, "is where we keep everything at night, except such large articles as would not go in. In our business it is not the big things, but the little ones that are valuable."

They were ordinary looking walnut cabinets, each perhaps seven feet high and five feet wide, and each with folding doors, an upper and a lower panel in each door. A boy might break them all open with a hammer in one minute.

But Mr. Jeweler threw open one of the pairs of folding doors and disclosed inside an immense safe that seemed to say: "Come on, now, if you're a burglar; let's see what you can do!" It was one of the polished steel sort, with tremendous resistance written all over it.

"These are called burglar-proof safes," said the jeweler; "but I need not tell you that no safe is burglar proof. Nothing has been or can be made that cannot be broken, and an expert burglar can open any safe in the world. However, I think these are as nearly burglar proof as any safe in New York. It is merely a question of time with a burglar, and these safes are warranted to resist any attack, except with explosives, for twelve hours. There is not much danger from gunpowder or dynamite in such an exposed place, and to operate with tools successfully requires twelve hours."

As he spoke he opened the safe doors. Three-fourths of the interior was divided into shelves, all of the same height and breadth. The other fourth was taken up by another safe, apparently complete in itself.

"There is where we keep our most valuable goods, the diamonds and other very costly articles," the jeweler continued, tapping the small inner safe. "There is one of these inside of each of the large safes, and each small safe is separate and complete in itself, with its own separate combination. If a burglar manages to reach the inside of one of the large safes he still has another safe to open before he can get the most valuable goods."

"But what an immense labor it must be to put all these goods in the safes every night and take them out again every morning," the reporter suggested.

"Not as much as you might think," Mr. Jeweler replied. "I will show you how it is done. Look at this showcase. You see the articles do not lie on the bottom of the case, but on little shallow velvet-lined trays. Those trays are made to fit the showcase, three of them being just the width of the case. The compartments in the safes are made to accommodate the trays, each compartment holding two tiers of six trays each. So before closing we have only to slide the trays into the safes, and everything is secured."

"That is very convenient," the reporter acknowledged, "and it seems to be very secure."

"Ah, but that is only the first step toward security!" the jeweler exclaimed. "We do not put all our money on one card. You have seen that the safes are as strong as they can be made. That is all that steel can do for us. Now we call in electricity to stand guard. Each safe is connected by separate wires with the Burglar Alarm Company. If an explosion or any other jar should move one of them a sixteenth of an inch out of its place, a bell would ring in the headquarters of that company, and within ninety seconds two policemen would be here. If anybody should turn the combination knob a hair's breadth that would have the same effect. I used to have the wires run into my sleeping-room, but I found that two or three times a year there would be some trouble with crossing wires, and I would be called out in a hurry in the middle of the night, and it gave me too much worry. So I had the wires connected with the Burglar Alarm Company, and now when I go home I do not give the goods another thought."

Mr. Jeweler here closed the safe doors and turned the little knob that locks them.

"We can lock or unlock them a hundred times a day," he continued, "but when we once lock them for the night they are not opened again till next morning. When I set the combination for the night, just before going home, I give an electric signal to the burglar alarm people, and that instant the alarm is set. If I should forget anything, and should open the safe myself after giving the signal, there would be two policemen here in a minute and a half, exactly the same as though a burglar were at work. Now do you suppose I can go home with an easy mind?"

"Perfectly," the reporter assented; "your goods are certainly safe."

"But that is only the second step toward security," Mr. Jeweler said. "Let me show you the third."

He closed the folding doors of the walnut cabinet.

"Tap one of those panels with your fingers, please," he said.

The sound that followed was muffled and heavy, entirely unlike the sound made by tapping a thin wooden panel.

"These slight cabinets are not as defenseless as they look," the jeweler continued. "Those panels are made of pasteboard, and other parts of the cabinets, although of wood on the outside, have pasteboard within."

"And why pasteboard?" the reporter asked.

"Because pasteboard is a better nonconductor than wood. The panel you tapped is made of three thicknesses of pasteboard and two thicknesses of tin foil. First there is the outer pasteboard panel, which is stained and grained to imitate walnut; then a layer of tin foil; then a second sheet of pasteboard; then a second layer of tin foil; and finally a third sheet of pasteboard, which forms the back of the panel. The first sheet of tin foil is connected with the positive pole of an electric battery; the second sheet of tin foil is connected with the negative pole of a battery. With the sheet of pasteboard between them the metallic sheet do not touch, and there is no circuit. But let a burglar begin to operate upon the cabinet, and run a knife or a gimlet or anything else through the panel, and the metallic tool, touching both sheets of tin foil, instantly completes the circuit, a bell rings in the burglar alarm office, and two policemen come, as before."

"Is that all?" the reporter asked.

"No, not quite," Mr. Jeweler smilingly replied. "Besides these little appliances we have a faithful watchman in the store all night. Part of his work is to press a little electric button every half hour from the time we lock the front door at night till we open it in the morning. Thereby he tells the burglar alarm people that he is awake and on duty. If he lets sixty seconds beyond the half hour pass without pressing the button, the two policemen come to see what is the matter, just as if somebody had tampered with the safes."

There were no more precautions, and the jeweler and the reporter emerged from the inner regions of gold and precious stones.

"Thank you very much," said the reporter.

"Good day," said the jeweler. "Come again; but always come in the daytime."—N. Y. Sun.

They were on their way to early mass and met a party of the opposing faction in the long-standing Polish church fight. Words led to blows and they killed a man. They confessed their guilt and were taken to Detroit.

The Pathogenic Microbe,

Or poison bearing germ, exercises a most destructive influence, and is continually waging war against health. Innumerable is this mighty foe and but few escape his injury. Entering the system through the blood, this poisonous germ infects every part of the body, and spreads its deadly virus everywhere. Under ordinary conditions it multiplies rapidly and soon maintains a stronghold upon the human body. To overcome this enemy and put an end to its destruction has for a long while occupied the time and energies of scientists. Their labors have at last been rewarded with success and a most important discovery has thus been made known to the world. It has been shown that this germ can be forced from the body through the pores of the skin, and that this is the only method by which a permanent and sure cure of diseases of the blood can be effected. S. S. S. has for years been curing blood diseases and their results, and it is by this method of eliminating all impurities through the skin that it has performed its great work. All manner of complaints having their origin in an impure and disordered condition of the blood have been successfully treated by this unrivalled blood medicine. Being purely a vegetable preparation S. S. S. is entirely harmless and no bad effects result from its use.

FOUR BOY MURDERERS.

They Fatally Injure Their School Mistress and Kill Her Small Brother.

LIMA, O., Jan. 28.—Frank McLaughlin, a 12-year-old boy, was murdered by his companions in a country schoolhouse at Philbrick, in Hardin county, 12 miles from Kenton, Friday. Young McLaughlin's sister was the teacher and she was correcting four scholars, Bert Smith, Charles Sparlock, John Stephenson and William Sparlock, when they turned on her and were beating her when her little brother ran to assist her. The quartette then turned on him and beat him into insensibility. The boy never rallied and died in a short time after being taken home. Miss McLaughlin's injuries are also of a very critical nature and her death would not be a surprise. The young murderers made an effort to get away, but were overtaken and are now lodged in jail at Kenton to await the action of the grand jury. A mob threatens to hang them and the jail is being guarded. Miss McLaughlin's injuries are on her head. In the struggle several slates were thrown, one striking Miss McLaughlin on top of the head and cutting a horrible gash. It is supposed that her skull is fractured or her brain injured by concussion.

SCHAEFER WINS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—A large crowd was in attendance at the Lenox lyceum Friday night to witness the match at balk-line billiards between Jacob Schaefer and George Slosson. The stakes were $1,000 aside and the battle was for the balk-line championship. Pincus Levy, of Philadelphia, was the referee, and Budd Schofield was the marker. The game began at 8:20, Schaefer winning the lead. It was not ended until after midnight, lasting three hours and forty-four minutes. Thirty-four innings were played. Schaefer won by 208 points, the score standing: Schaefer, 800; Slosson, 592. Schaefer's average, 23 18-34; Slosson's average, 17 31-33. Schaefer's best runs, 155, 101; Slossson's best runs, 119, 65.

Including Friday night's match Schaefer and Slosson have met thirty-four times at all kinds of billiards. According to the record Schaefer has won seventeen times and Slosson seventeen, though Schaefer claims that the games won by Slosson at St. Louis December 5, 1885, and at St. Paul October 10, 1886, were exhibitions only. The men first met in October, 1878, at Indianapolis. Here is the summary of their games:

Champion's game	4	3
Balk-line game	6	9

OUT OF WATER.

Ice Chokes Up the Sources of Chicago's Supply for Several Hours.

CHICAGO, Jan. 22.—For the first time in its history the entire city of Chicago has been without a drop of water, the system of supply being paralyzed. The cause of this alarming condition of affairs was the fact that the three sources from which the city at present receives its supply were on Wednesday night frozen up, and not a pint of water reached the various pumping stations throughout the city at 7 o'clock yesterday morning.

Business all over the city was suspended, several fires occurred with no water to quench them, and great excitement prevailed. Tugs and fireboats, loaded with men and appliances for breaking up the ice, were plowing their ways through the waters of the lake to the various points of trouble, and at 3 o'clock in the afternoon the obstructions were removed and a full supply of water was obtained.

WORK OF A MOB.

It Takes Hapler Out of Jail at Nevada, Mo., and Hangs Him at Lamar.

NEVADA, Mo., Jan. 23.—Hapler, who was in jail here charged with an assault on a Barton county woman, was taken out of the custody of the sheriff Friday night by a mob from Lamar and carried back. The sheriff gathered a posse, composed largely of militia, and started in pursuit, but was too late. When he arrived at Lamar he found Hapler dead. He had been hanged in the courthouse yard as soon as the mob escorting him reached the place of his crime.

Says Gleason Killed Himself.

MARQUETTE, Mich., Jan. 23.—An Ishpeming paper publishes a sensational story to the effect that Paymaster John Gleason, of the Cleveland Mining Company, was not murdered on the night of January 4, but committed suicide. It is alleged that Superintendent Mills, of the company, testified before a secret session of the coroner's jury that Gleason's accounts were $1,200 short.

Two Children Burned to Death.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 25.—Jenny Stark, a colored washerwoman, left her two little girls, aged 4 and 2 years, locked in the house while she went out to work. A rug caught fire and the younger child was smothered to death, while the elder was rescued alive but afterward died.

Death of an Ex-Governor.

WILMINGTON, Del., Jan. 25.—Ex-Gov. Hall died at his home at Frederica, Del., at 6:45 o'clock Saturday evening of heart disease, aged 75 years. He was governor from 1879 to 1883, and was one of the largest land and vessel owners in the state.

Killed His Sister-in-Law.

CHICAGO, Jan. 25.—Michael Gaynor, an ex-policeman now on the police pension rolls, murdered Mrs. Mattie Gaynor, his sister-in-law, at 340 State street Saturday morning. Malice, engendered by family difficulties, was the motive of the crime.

Asphyxiated by Illuminating Gas.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 25.—Mrs. Catherine Harland and her niece, Mary Keilegher, were asphyxiated by escaping gas in their room. The gas is supposed to have come from a break outside the house.

A Practical Illustration.

Faraway (high tragedy)—Prithee, friend Walker, what mayst thou call this?

Walker (low comedy)—This? Why, this is what I call "The Actor's Own Traveler." I'll show you how it works.

"Au revoir, Faraway; there's nothing like realism."—Life.

At Last.

"Bress de Lawd! It's come; it's come."

"What's come, mammy?"

"Why, de jedgment day, yo' brack ignyramus! Didn't yo' heah dat Gabriel's trumpet? An' dere goes yo' good old fadder up at the first sound."—Life.

Unanimous.

Teacher—Ladies, I am sorry to confess it, but I would rather have five young men from the high school than one of you.

Chorus of Young Ladies—So would we.—Fliegende Blatter.

An Unexpected Lockout.

Confident Traveler—Say, dassie, jist git me suthin' to eat an' yer it quick. Fast!

(As she pulls the shutter)—"That holds thim burglars cut in thet shutter comes in right handy.

"Jamesie, I've bolted the shutter on the inside; you just run down for the constable and tell him he needn't put no chair in this feller's cell, neither."—Life.

An Objection.

Rose (on the divan)—I think I'll say yes. It is better to marry a man you respect than one you adore.

Dolly—But it's so much easier to love men than to respect them.—Life.

One day last week Ezra Sink, while assisting in Kniffin's sawmill, was nearly crazed by being hit a terrible blow on the head by one of the blocks of the ———, but at present he is quite recovered.

After a short illness of but a few days from an attack of la grippe John Dubois passed away to that home that knows no care or sorrow. Mr. Dubois was born in the year 1817, in the county of Antrim, Ireland, and came with his parents to this country in 1818, settling at Ogdensburg, N. Y. When only 18 years of age he started out in life for himself. He came to Michigan, and after working at the carpenter's trade and various employments purchased his present farm, which at that time was in the heart of the woods. He was industrious and untiring in his labor at clearing up his land, which at the present time equals any farm land in the county. Mr. Dubois has been united with the M. E. church some fifty years. He was the father of seven children and leaves a widow and six children, the eldest daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Smith, having died some years previous.

CARD OF THANKS.

To our many friends and neighbors who so kindly assisted us in our recent affliction in the loss of our dear husband and father, we tender our heartfelt thanks.

MRS. MARIA DUBOIS AND FAMILY.

ESTHER CORYELL.

The deceased was a native of Massachusetts. When a child she moved with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter, to New York State, where, having grown to mature age, she was united in marriage to Andrew Coryell. In the year 1820, with two children, they came to Michigan, settling on a farm west of what is now the city of Ypsilanti. Here two sons were added to the family, after which they moved to Monroe, where another son and a daughter were born; from thence to Jackson county, where a son and daughter were added to the number. In the spring of 1841 they came to Ridgeway and in the fall of that year a son was born. Since then they have lived in this vicinity, where the history of the deceased is well known. To be known, in her case, was to be respected and loved. Her children with one accord rise up and call her blessed. Four sons and two daughters survive her. The husband preceded her nearly two years ago, with whom she is now reunited where there will be no separation. Her children, through a mother's Christian influence, were early led to the Lord. She embraced Christianity at the age of fifteen, thus giving her rising family the enviable privilege and blessing of early religious instruction, which, under God, has borne fruit for the glory of His name, and her great joy. Thus, at the age of 90 years, 4 months and 7 days, on Friday night, January 29th, 1892, at 10 o'clock, Grandma Coryell peacefully closed her eyes in death at the home of her granddaughter, Mrs. Charles Smith. The Christian church at Britton has lost a member of whom it can be said that none loved their church home more than did sister Coryell. What a great blessing and help toward building up and extending and strengthening church work, if only the individual membership of churches loved their church home with the love that was exemplified by this devoted mother in the Israel of God! It was always cheery to meet the deceased. Her intellect, well seasoned with wit, and a mind clear as it was in youth were unimpaired by age, even down to death. What a blessing thus to be preserved in old age! The funeral services were conducted from the M. E. church of Ridgeway by her pastor, Sunday, at 2 o'clock p. m. Text—"I have kept the faith." J. W.

Died, on the night of January 25th, at half-past 12 o'clock, Mrs. Wm. Pocklington, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Zeluff, in Ridgeway township. Mrs. Pocklington came to this country from England with her husband in the year 1849 and came direct to the State of Michigan and settled in Ridgeway township, Lenawee county, where they have since lived. Thirty-one years ago they settled upon the farm in the eastern part of the township, where they lived and toiled together until the 9th day of June, 1891, when the Lord saw fit to call the husband home, thus breaking up the old home. Mother was left alone and the thought was: Who will care for mother now? But the loving hearts of the children responded to the call and it was decided that she should make it her home with her two daughters—Eliza, the wife of John Zeluff, and Mary Ann, wife of James Underwood. As they cared for their father in his last days, so they wished to care for mother. She lived alternately at the two homes, where we believe every effort was put forth for the comfort of their mother, and as we have seen them leading her about and caring for her we were led to this thought: As mother cared for her daughters in their childhood, so the daughters cared for their mother in her second childhood. But for all this there seemed to be a longing to go and be at rest beside her husband, and so she gradually failed and at last passed from labor to reward after a brief illness with inflammation of the lungs. She was 75 years and 7 months old at the time of her death. She was the mother of six children, four of whom yet remain to mourn their loss; but their loss is her gain, as she died in the triumph of the Christian faith. The mourning friends have the heartfelt sympathy of the community. The funeral services were conducted by Elder James Wright, pastor of the Christian church, at the church in Ridgeway, on January 27th, at 10:30 a. m. A. W.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, January 29, 1892.

The war crisis has passed, much to the disgust of the young naval officers and others ambitious of earning glory at the cannon's mouth, and of the men who had hope to largely increase their bank accounts by means of profitable government contracts, and the pleasure of ordinary folks. It is now conceded by those who were at first inclined to blame President Harrison for unnecessary haste in rendering an ultimatum and in sending the correspondence and his vigorous message to Congress, that he was pursuing the very best course to bring about peace. It was necessary to convince Chili that this government intended to enforce the demands it had made by force if it was needed, and in no other way could this have been done so speedily. In Congress all political differences were for the time forgotten and everybody became intensely American. The result, as might have been expected is an abject apology from Chili. It is not too late to say that active preparations for war have ceased and a peaceful solution is looked for.

The Farmer's Alliance Representatives were given their official recognition in the House by being assigned one more out of the seven days for debate on the new rules. Representative Otis, of Kansas, after stating that the Alliance party was founded on the principles of Jeffersonian doctrine, on the policy of Washington, and upon the Lincoln idea of the superiority of labor to capital, criticised the rules as conferring a dangerous power on the speaker and the committee on rules. Representative Watson, of Georgia, made the principles of the Alliance the basis of his remarks, stating that the toiling millions of the land were looking to those principles as their only means of relief. Other Alliance members also made brief remarks.

If Oklahoma does not become a state during the present Congress it will not be for any lack of effort on the part of Delegate Harvey, who looks after the interests of that bustling Territory in the House. He has already introduced a bill to that effect.

The resolution providing for an investigation as to whether the appropriations heretofore made for the World's Fair have been judiciously expended has been favorably reported to the House, and it will be passed. This does not indicate a positive feeling towards the Exposition on the contrary it is intended to furnish the managers an opportunity to show Congress how well the appropriations have been spent, as an inducement to grant each appropriation of $5,000,000 now asked for. There are those, however, who do not think the showing made will be favorable to the managers.

A bill to prohibit the sale of firearms to Indians residing on reservations has been favorably reported to the Senate.

Representative Livingston, of Georgia, this week introduced a bill for the establishment of a system of subtreasuries, in accordance with the Ocala demands of the Farmer's Alliance.

Representative Bowers, of California, is not enamoured of the new House rules. He says his people want some appropriations for their harbors, and that if he understands the rules aright he will not be "in it" unless he can get a "pull" on the River and Harbor committee.

There is a movement among the Cleveland democrats to throw their strength to Carlisle, if, as reported, Mr. Cleveland shall decline to allow his name to go before the convention. This movement is so new that its strength cannot be estimated at this time, but there are good reasons for the belief that Mr. Cleveland will not favor the nomination of Carlisle.

The Senate without a division adopted the report from the committee on Elections confirming the right of Senator Chilcot, appointed by the governor of Texas to serve out the unexpired term of Senator Reagan, to his seat.

Ever since China refused to receive ex-Senator Blair as Minister from this country there have been ugly rumors around Washington intimating that the influence of certain Americans interested in certain concessions which they hoped to get from China had more to do with it than Mr. Blair's Congressional record on the Chinese question. Whether the rumors influenced Senator Morgan I cannot say, but he this week offered a resolution, which was adopted by the Senate, requesting the President to furnish copies of all the correspondence between the two governments on the subject, if it can be done without injury to the public interests.

TIN PLATE.

Many Tin Plate Manufacturers on Paper, But Very Few in Actual Existence—"Tin Plate Liars."

Col. Ira Ayer, special agent appointed by Secretary of the Treasury Foster to collect statistics on tin plate, has begun sending out requests for information on that subject.

He has recommended to the treasury a system of reports to be made quarterly. Col. Ayer explained that this work was being done in order that the government might have information on which to act on that provision of the McKinley law which provides that on and after October 1, 1897, tin plates and terne plates lighter in weight than sixty-three pounds per 100 square feet shall be admitted free of duty, unless it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the president (who shall thereupon by proclamation, make known the fact) that the aggregate quantity of such plate, lighter than sixty-three pounds per 100 square feet produced in the United States during either of the six years next preceding June 30, 1897, has equaled one-third of the amount of such plates imported and entered for consumption during any fiscal year after the passage of this act and prior to said October 1, 1897, provided that the amount of such plates manufactured into articles exported and upon which a drawback shall be paid shall not be included in ascertaining the amount of such importations.

The statistics which Col. Ayer is after include points on which to settle all the questions which may be raised under this section. He has recommended to the department for adoption a system of reports which prescribe that the forms of invoice shall embrace the brand, number of boxes, size, number of sheets per box, total weight, quantity lighter than sixty-three pounds per 100 square feet and sixty-three pounds and over per 100 square feet. Statement from all the rolling mills showing the names of the manufacturers to whom sheet iron and steel have been sold will be asked for. The stamping companies will then be asked to make affidavits as to the amounts which have been stamped into articles and afterward tinned or ternepalted.

Mr. Ayer said lately that he had received reports from the "Tin Plate Manufacturers' association of America," which gave the names of concerns engaged in making tinned plate and those which are preparing to do so.

"Will these reports be used in making the official statement to the government?" he was asked.

"No, they will not," he said. "In making the report to the treasury nothing will be considered except the sworn statements of the parties making the goods."

The list of concerns counted by the association as engaged in the "tin plate industry" makes an imposing array—on paper. It includes twenty-three firms. An examination of this list, however, shows that the greater proportion are still doing a business in "futures." The total capacity of these plants, which are to be completed "soon" or which "propose to make tinned plates," is put down by the association at 300,000 boxes a week, which is regarded as a very comfortable figure by those whose enthusiasm on the subject has led them to earn the reputation of "tin plate liars." Closer examination of this same summary of the association shows that the statement is made that only five of the twenty-three concerns are actually making tinned or terne plates. These five, on their own showing, have a capacity of 4,150 boxes per week, which is said to be barely enough for samples for use in the trade.—St. Louis Republic.

TRUTH WILL OUT.

Why Certain Woolen Manufacturers Prefer the Duty of Forty-four Cents Per Pound and Fifty Per Cent. Ad Valorem on Woolen Cloth to Free Wool and Forty-Per Cent. on Cloth.

At the hearings before the ways and means committee, of which Maj McKinley was chairman, and which drafted and passed the tariff bill bearing his name, the woolen manufacturers who testified claimed that there were used in the making of a pound of cloth at least four pounds of grease wool. These men showed the ways and means committee to adopt the above as the basis of their specifications on goods to compensate the manufacturers for the duty of 11 cents per pound on wool. They did so, and during the debate declared over and over again that the 44 cents per pound duty on woolen cloth afforded no protection to the manufacturer, but merely offset the wool duty.

The truth cannot long be concealed. Now that the present ways and means committee are considering the introduction of a bill putting wool on the free list, and at the same time taking off the pound duty of 44 cents on cloth and reducing the ad valorem rate to 40 per cent., certain manufacturers are opposing it on the ground that such a bill would deprive them of a great deal of protection. Says a writer in the Manufacturer, the organ of the high tariff manufacturers' club of Philadelphia, who signs his article "One Who Sees Only Danger to Manufacturers in Free Wool":

"Manufacturers under the McKinley bill pay 11 cents per pound duty on wool. By importing the light-shrinkage Australian wools, which are the kinds mostly imported, a manufacturer can get out of two pounds of unwashed skirted wool one pound of scoured wool, which is nearly the equivalent of one pound of cloth.

"It is claimed that it takes nearly four pounds of unwashed wool to make a pound of cloth. This may be true of the faulty 75-per-cent. shrink wools used in Europe, but never imported; but it is not true of the light, open, shafty, skirted Australian wools that are imported. The waste on the latter averages but slightly above 50 per cent. (A good deal is imported which shrinks only 48 per cent.) This class of wool is so well skirted on the ranch as to require little or no further sorting in the mills.

"The clear shafty wool is all that is imported by American manufacturers. One pound of scoured, clear sorted wool, free from inferior bits and pieces, as already stated, is almost the equivalent of one pound of cloth. The manufacturer imports two pounds of such wool in the grease, paying 11 cents per pound, or 22 cents on the one pound scoured. As the McKinley bill gives a specific duty of 44 cents per pound—which is in no way assailed by under-valuations, as may be the case with an ad valorem duty—manufacturers have a clear margin of nearly 22 cents per pound protection on every pound of cloth made of these light, fifty per cent. shrunk, skirted, Australian fleeces.

"Assuming that 50 per cent. ad valorem duties wholly cover the difference in wages between the foreign and American mill labor for which purpose this 50 per cent. was imposed, we find that the only margin of real protection against under-valuation is the specific duty on cloth which the free wool advocates now propose to remove.

"The only real margin of surplus protection which American manufacturers now have under the McKinley bill is the margin (be it 22 cents per pound more or less) which they now get as a compensatory duty for the duty upon wool.

"The duty on cloth was fixed under the assumption that the manufacturer paid 44 cents per pound duty on the scoured wool needed to construct one finished pound of cloth. In point of fact he pays but little (if any) over 22 cents per pound on that wool, leaving him a margin of about 22 cents per pound. With free wool he loses this. Will he favor free wool and also favor being brought into closer competition with foreign manufacturers, with only an ad valorem rate on goods that can so easily be avoided by under-valuations and false invoices?"

No wonder that certain woolen manufactures who, during the last presidential campaign, paid so much to get the permisson of congress, by a tariff law, to charge a clear bounty of 22 cents per pound on cloth over and above the bounty given them by the duty of 50 per cent object to being deprived of it so soon. The manufacturer who turns out in his factories legitimate woolen goods and the wool growers, who have the prosperity of the wool and woolen industry at heart, know that free wool will benefit both. It is such wool growers who hope to get political prestige from their labors, and such manufacturers as believe in a tariff for bounty, included with whom are the users of shoddy and other bogus materials, who believe in the McKinley tariff on wool and woolen manufactures."

Binding Twine and Cotton Ties.

The New York Evening Post, noticing the resolution passed by the Illinois state grange, calling for the repeal of the duty on binding twine, says: "If the agriculturists of the north are to be relieved by free binding twine, those of the south are equally entitled to free cotton ties. Northern agriculture is now prosperous; southern agriculture is not. Cotton is selling at so low a price that it hardly repays the outlay of the planter. Yet there has been fastened upon him a tax of about seventeen cents per bale to protect a more prosperous industry than his own. This tax is in the form of a duty on the iron straps with which the cotton is baled for market. Under the tariff of 1883 the duty on this indispensable article was 35 per cent. The McKinley tariff changed the duty to a specific rate of 1 3-10 cents per pound, which is equal to 104 per cent. On 8,000,000 bales, the estimated crop of the present year, this tax is equal to $1,360,000."

This is a just, timely and kindly suggestion by our northern contemporary. Upon what principle of justice or right can free raw materials be demanded for manufacturers, if taxes are imposed upon the appliances which agriculturists have to purchase and use in the preparation of their crops for the market? A duty of 104 per cent. upon iron ties for cotton baling is virtually an internal tax upon the labor of the cotton planter, and one levied not for revenue, but for the exclusive benefit of the home manufacturer, for no foreign-made ties will be imported while they have to pay a duty equal to their price where made.

If binding twine and iron ties should be admitted free, so also should cotton bagging—an article lately controlled by a trust. This bagging is now subject to a duty of 1 8-10 cents per square yard, or about 30 per cent. of its cost in the foreign market. It adds fully 15 cents per bale to the expense of the cotton-planter, and this on a crop of 8,000,000 bales would amount to $1,500,000.

Such taxes on agricultural labor and production, under a system of taxation which in every detail aims at the protection or aggrandizement of other industries, is wrongfully invidious. We trust that all the agricultural interests of the country will unite in demanding fairer treatment.—Atlanta (Ga.) Journal.

Who Gets the Plums.

The Sheffield Telegraph, in a review of the trade of England, incidentally remarks that the McKinley tariff has put a stop to successful trading in Sheffield goods in the United States, and adds that if the American market is to be covered it will only be by offering medium-priced cutlery, and a general reduction in other articles.

This ought to be very pleasant news to those people who fancy that when we injure the people we do good to ourselves. But our American manufacturers have been increasing the prices of cutlery ever since the passage of the McKinley law; and thus the good goes entirely to our cutlery manufacturers—not the people who buy knives.

—Let the house promptly repeal the sugar bounty. If the senate refuses to accept the repeal or the president should veto, then the people would be compelled to meet the issue and decide for or against the policy of bounties. It is not difficult to say how they would decide, for the seats of Louisiana, where nearly all the sugar of the United States is produced, would declare against the bounty. The cotton raisers of that state would never consent to be taxed to pay the sugar raisers a bounty.—Vicksburg (Miss.) Commercial Herald.

MRS. LETTIE HUNTLEY,

Is the wife of Mr. W. S. Huntley of Cortland, N. Y., a well known carpenter and builder. Her frank statement below gives only the absolute truth concerning her illness and marvelous recovery by the aid of Hood's Sarsaparilla. She says:

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Dear Sir: Twelve years ago I began to have hemorrhages and four years ago became so low that the physicians told me

There Was No Hope

and I should soon die. I could not be moved from my bed. Under my face were napkins continually reddened with blood from my mouth. I could eat nothing and had no action of the bowels for a week. The doctors said the cause was ulcers in the stomach. At this time my mother said she wanted to make one more trial, and asked if I would take Hood's Sarsaparilla. I told her it would be but finding it would comfort her, I began taking it. In a few days the bloating began to subside, I seemed to feel a little stronger, but thought it only fancy. I was so weak I could only take ten drops of Sarsaparilla at first. In two weeks I was able to sit up a few minutes every day. Christian Men Who Would Help the Poor.

A Waste of Money

Rev. Charles R. Baker, in the Church of the Messiah, Again Reinforces the Single Tax Views of Henry George—Another and a Vigorous Attack on Monopolies.

In the Church of the Messiah, Greene and Clermont avennes, last evening, Rev. Charles R. Baker delivered a lecture on "The Single Tax of Henry George." He said:

In considering these remedies for poverty, which have been proposed at various times, it is a great pleasure at last to come to one proposed by a Christian man. Too often the church has taken a position of hostility to the wants of the poor. It is continually necessary to remind us that Christ's first word was "Blessed are the poor, for theirs is the kingdom of God." They, better than the rich, understand what it is to pray to God. "Give us this day our daily bread." Every great impulse that the human race has known has come from the germinal force of Christ's own mighty, large hearted love; and why should we cast away so mighty a force as this? It is a great relief to turn to a man who not only is a Christian man, but whose whole theory is permeated through and through with the ethical enthusiasm of Christianity. No one, I believe, can read the first half of Mr. George's "Progress and Poverty" without feeling the heart within him stirred. His "Reply to the Pope," given out last year, reads like a homily, like the answers of St. Bernard or some of the other great men who stood for humanity against wrong in the middle ages. It is a strong petition, a strong address from the side of a Christian man. It brings to bear all through scripture and Christly sanctions, it draws its inspiration from the scriptures. Not only is Mr. George in his whole spirit moved by Christian impulses, but he is a man of unusual ability. He is one of the most eloquent men of our day. The cardinal point in Mr. George's theory is his conception of property. There are three kinds of property: First, natural or individual; second, artificial, and third, common property. Natural property is based upon the right which a man has to himself. Man has an inalienable right to his life as well as to liberty and the pursuit of happiness. What I make with my hands is mine and nobody's else. What I invent with my brain is mine, and I have an inalienable right to the possession of both. No government and no man has any right to take away from me either one.

It may be necessary, for the support of the government, that every man should contribute a certain share of what belongs to him for the common good, but no government has any right to take a larger share from me than it takes from any other man; and it has no right to spend it except in such a way as shall be for my good and for the general good. If you carry this theory out anything like a progressive income tax is not fair or just. Artificial property is that which passes to a man's heirs or legatees in accordance with the laws of the state. Then there is common property and that is the gift of God or else made by all men together. The air is common property. It was made by God, and it is necessary for every man to breathe it to live; and there is no man who has any right to put me or you into a dark room where the air has been all exhausted and then deal it out to us at so much an hour and charge us for it. The same is true of sunshine. Sunlight is necessary to our life and health, and it belongs to God, who gave it for all his children, and no man would have any right to make us pay Him for it. In some parts of the West are large tracts of land that is sterile in summer. There are great stores of water which fall at certain seasons in the mountains, and it is marvelous to see how God has provided mountains for reservoirs very near all these great arid tracts, and how the rivers flow down these great slopes toward the east. In the summer you see these rivers supplying water where it is needed to refresh these arid wastes and turn them into gardens. No man has any right to usurp property in that water, to take it away from other men. A man may construct great works for irrigation and build great reservoirs; those are his property; but on abstract grounds of justice he has no right to appropriate these water sources. Mr. George says no individual has any right to seize a coal mine and say, "That belongs to me." God made it and God made it for all men. Perhaps it will be clearer if I ask you if you suppose God created all those coal deposits in the Wyoming valley for the Wilkesbarre coal company, or whether he created them for man.

That is the point. Of course the shafts that are sunk and the buildings and machinery that are constructed belong to the men who make them, but the idea is that no man has any right to fence in a certain place and say: "All this coal that lies under here is mine." How did he get it? Did God create our coal fields for the Wilkesbarre coal company, or the Lehigh coal company, or the Philadelphia and Reading coal company? That is the point. Mr. George asks; Did God make the land for His children, or for these great land companies, for the Union Pacific railroad and the Northern Pacific railroad? Land is just as necessary for man as the air and the sunshine and the water. You can not make any man live by suspending him above the land and keeping him there; he must not only live and move on the land, but he has to get his food out of the land. "Mr. George asks us to look at the titles by which men hold land. Look in California. A man says, "I trace my title to the Mexican government, which confiscated all the lands belonging to the Spanish crown after the revolution." Where did the Spanish crown's title come from? From the pope. What right had the pope to give away all Mexico and California to the Spanish crown? There we are stuck. What right had he to say the Spanish crown should have it and should have the right to keep away Americans and Englishmen who had been on the spot first, and to keep away everybody else? Look at the titles which we have in Brooklyn. We trace them back to Dutch forefathers. Where did they get the title to the land? By giving little trinkets to the Indians? How did the Indians get it? A branch of the Algonquin Indians got it because they were mighty warriors and killed or drove off everybody else. That is what almost all titles to land come to in the end. It is the power of physical might which has established itself over weakness. Might has made it. But might never makes right; that is the difficulty. And Mr. George holds that almost all the misery which is to be found in our modern life proceeds from the fact that men have acknowledged this right and title in certain individuals to hold land. Near Tipperary, in Ireland, land is used for pasturing, from which the users are obliged to pay $32.50 a year rent, and they have to compete in the making of butter with butter from Holland and from America. It can not be done, and the consequence is that those people live by sending their children out to beg. In another part of Ireland I saw a little tract of beautiful land in a sterile neighborhood. There were two or three acres of it—deep, rich soil. I asked how such soil came there, and the woman told me that her husband and his father and his father before him had scraped the rocks on the uplands and brought the soil down there, bit by bit, in wheelbarrows. They were supporting themselves fairly well there raising potatoes on the land, until the landlord appeared on the scene and said: "You have a fine piece of land here, which certainly is worth $30 an acre rent." And so he compelled them to pay this rent for the land which they had brought down there in a wheelbarrow, and they were then obliged to beg with children following them who could not afford to wear shoes on their feet during any portion of the year. Look at Scotland, and there you will find great tracts of land where formerly were scores of prosperous villages, where men were living and earning a good, honest income, the yeomanry of Scotland. Certain great Scotch landlords, who have gotten rich, have said: "We do not want these troublesome people here; we want this as a range for deer and sheep and cattle." And they have simply evicted scores of villages by the wholesale, where the people had lived for generations, and paid them nothing for the improvements which they had made on the land, and they turned the land into these great hunting grounds.

Charity Not Justice.

The Drexel Institute of Art, Science and Industry has been dedicated at Philadelphia. It was built and endowed by Anthony J. Drexel, head of the banking firm of Drexel & Co. Its scope and objects, as outlined by the founder, are "the extension and improvement of industrial education as a means of opening better and wider avenues of employment to young men and women." What an illustration this is of the truth, first put in words by Tolstoi, that rich men are willing to do anything for the poor except to get off from their backs. We do not mean, of course, that Mr. Drexel is literally or even metaphorically astride of any poor man's back. Nor do we question his motives in erecting the institute. But he lives where poor men are kept poor, and ignorant men ignorant, by laws that obstruct the exercise by individuals of their natural powers. He sees the effect and deplores it; but he does not see the cause, or, if he does, he ignores it. And so, with all charity, he attempts to cure the effect without removing the cause. In this sense it is that, pitying the poor, he would serve them in every way except by getting off their backs.

To open better and wider avenues of employment is the one great necessity of our time. To do that is to begin to make men free, to develop their powers, to abolish their poverty. But what Mr. Drexel proposes as a means of accomplishing this is to increase the powers of the poor without touching the conditions that make men's powers the less effective in supplying their own wants, as they become the more effective in producing wealth. In free conditions the improvement of industrial education would benefit all who worked; but in existing conditions it benefits only those who sit upon the workingman's back. To increase the efficiency of laborers, while making that without which no man can labor—the earth—a subject of absolute private property, is only to increase the value of land, and to diminish the value of labor.

Mr. Drexel might as well attempt to fatten cattle by teaching them to leap, while adding another rail to the pasture fence with every increase in the leaping efficiency of his cattle. Single tax men believe in industrial education; and if they do not seem to appreciate such charities as Mr. Drexel's, and such disinterested and public spirited motives as he appears to exhibit, it is because they wonder why it never occurs to him, if he really wants the cattle to get into the pasture, to help lift a rail or two off from the pasture fence.—The Standard.

The Drift.

I think this whole perturbation throughout the country is going to drift into the Henry George idea, that all inequalities are to be extinguished in a single tax millennium of perfect happiness and contentment. The alliance farmers do not believe in the sub-treasury and land loan schemes. These heresies are not in it. They are recognized as too absurd and extravagant by the alliance men themselves. But when these are discarded, unless the whole party falls to pieces all at once, something like Henry George's scheme will come out of it.—Senator Plumb in Topeka Capital.

DEATH OF SPURGEON.

The Famous Baptist Divine Gone to His Reward.

After Months of Patient Suffering He Passes Away at Mentone—A Sketch of His Remarkable Career.

CHARLES HADDON SPURGEON.

MENTONE, Feb. 1.—Rev. Charles Haddon Spurgeon died at 11:30 Sunday night. His end was painless and he remained in the unconscious condition to which he had dropped to the last. His wife, Dr. Fitzhenry and Mrs. Thorne were present when he died.

Mr. Spurgeon passed a very restless night and his condition Sunday morning gave cause for serious anxiety, though he was able to take a small quantity of milk as nourishment. As the day passed on his condition became critical. At 3 o'clock p. m. he was unconscious and at 6 o'clock he was still in the same condition and weaker. He did not recognize his wife and refused to take food which had to be administered by force. Mr. Spurgeon's body will be taken to England for burial. Mrs. Spurgeon is bearing her affliction bravely.

Charles Haddon Spurgeon was born at Kelvedon, Essex, June 19, 1834, was educated at Colchester, Maidstone and elsewhere, and became usher in a school at Newmarket. Having adopted Baptist views, he joined the congregation which was presided over by Robert Hall at Cambridge, and it was here, while still a school-teacher, that he preached his first sermon, which was listened to with remarkable interest by his auditors who were assembled in a tiny chapel. His services were eagerly sought after this and he became widely known as the "boy preacher." When only 17 Mr. Spurgeon accepted the pastorate of a Baptist church at Waterbeach, whence he removed to the New Park street chapel, Southwark, London.

Mr. Spurgeon first preached before a London congregation in 1853 with so much success that before two years had elapsed it became necessary to enlarge the building, pending which alteration he officiated for four months at Exeter hall. The enlargement of the chapel in Park street, however, proved insufficient, and hearers multiplied with such rapidity that it became expedient to engage the Surrey music hall, and Mr. Spurgeon's followers determined to build a suitable edifice for their services. Two years later in 1861 the Metropolitan tabernacle was opened and there Mr. Spurgeon has since preached every Sunday to congregations averaging 6,000 people.

Among other institutions connected with Mr. Spurgeon's church and established by him are the Stockwell orphanage, founded in 1867, and accommodating about 400 children a year; the Pastors' college, founded in 1856, which has educated over 900 men, of whom most are actively engaged as pastors, missionaries, evangelists, or in some department of the Lord's work; the Metropolitan Tabernacle Colporterage association, which has about seventy or eighty agents in different parts of the country, who, in addition to other services, sell pure literature; in the course of the year to the amount of $50,000. A "Book Fund," carried on in Mr. Spurgeon's house and superintended by him, has in ten years supplied indigent ministers of various denominations free of cost with over 15,000 volumes. Mr. Spurgeon also carried on a society for evangelists at home and another mission work in North Africa. His church has about thirty mission halls and schools affiliated with it. In 1870 Mr. Spurgeon received a "silver wedding testimonial" of over $30,000, and in 1884, on attaining his 50th year, another sum of $25,000 was presented to him. Mr. Spurgeon kept little of what was so generously given him: every cent he could spare went for charity.

SHOOK THE WHOLE TOWN.

Explosion of 5,000 Pounds of Dynamite Wrecks a Factory Near Cahokia, Ill.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 1.—Cahokia, a village 4 miles south of East St. Louis, was the scene of great excitement at 4 a. m. Saturday. The people were awakened by a dull, heavy sound, followed by the trembling of the earth, and without dressing themselves the residents rushed from their dwellings in great alarm. No repetition of the shock followed and the shivering residents sought their beds. At 7 a. m. it was learned that the Camile Droit dynamite factory, a mile south of Cahokia, had been blown up. The explosion is attributed to spontaneous combustion. No one was killed. Five thousand pounds of dynamite was exploded, wrecking everything in the neighborhood of the factory and digging a deep hole in the ground.

Eighteen Miles on an Ice Cake.

STURGEON BAY, Wis., Feb. 1.—The seven fishermen who drifted out on an ice-floe were rescued after being afloat for forty-eight hours. They were all right. The ice on which six of the men took refuge stuck on a sandbar and they were taken off by a rowboat. One man drifted to Cedar river, a distance of 18 miles, on a cake of ice.

Money Burned in a Bed.

MARENGO, Ill., Feb. 1.—Fire destroyed the house and barns on the farm occupied by Charles Leonhardt and owned by Prof. S. N. Williams, of Cornell college, 8 miles from here. Thirteen horses were burned and all the farm implements. In the house concealed in a bed was $1,700 in bills, which was also burned.

Severe Floods in Scotland.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—Severe floods prevail in the Scottish highlands, owing to a thaw, which has melted enormous quantities of snow and ice in the mountains. A part of the city of Perth, which lies on the right bank of the river Tay, is inundated, and in many portions of the country the railways have been flooded.

Garza Sues for Pardon.

CITY OF MEXICO, Feb. 1.—It is reported that Garza has begged for pardon from President Diaz, offering to betray his followers. It is stated that Garza will be here shortly with the intention of arranging the matter. Several of Garza's lieutenants are petitioning for pardon.

THE FARMER'S DUTY TO HIS BOY.

Paper Read at the Recent County Institute by School Commissioner Chas. F. Field.

Few themes ought to be nearer the heart of the farmer than the welfare of his sons. Among the various topics therefore, which properly engage the interest of a meeting like this, it seems to be peculiarly fitting that the education of the farmer's boy should have a place. I ask you then, to lay aside for a few moments the consideration of agricultural questions and devote your thoughts to "that boy of yours." How shall he be best fitted to discharge the duties that will soon devolve upon him as your successor on the farm?

The old generation, to whose untiring industry and undaunted courage Lenawee county owes her proud pre-eminence in agricultural wealth, is rapidly passing away. Who are to take your places, farmers of Lenawee, when you shall be called to lay down the burdens of life? Who are to receive the proud inheritance which your life-work has created? Who, indeed, but the boys whom God has entrusted to your keeping? Will they be able to carry on the task when old age calls upon you to relinquish it?

In considering these questions, which involve so serious a responsibility, let us first try to realize the requirements for successful farming which will confront the farmer in the immediate future.

The conditions for sucessful farming to-day are different from those of fifty years ago, when the pioneers of Lenawee county first entered upon their prodigious task of carving farms and homes out of the virgin wilderness; their main reliance were youth, health, courage and integrity of character. With these qualities, even though possessed of meagre education, they went bravely to work, and the comfortable homes and fertile acres which now cover this noble county are the best witnesses of their success.

But these same characteristics, admirable as they are, will not be sufficient for successful farming in the future. The farmers of the passing generation have, many of them, grown rich more by the force of circumstances than by their own unaided efforts. The immense strides made by the industrial and commercial world during the last fifty years have carried everything forward with their own advancement. The railroad, the canal, the steamship, the telegraph, have practically brought your farms into the market of the whole world and rendered your land correspondingly valuable. It has not always required the highest business ability in the past to make a good living, or even to acquire wealth in the vocation of agriculture. But what are the conditions to-day? Can farmers make any advancement in material wealth without exercising the same business ability that is essential in any other calling? Indeed, is there not danger of going backward instead of forward? Certainly, the farmer of the future cannot rely upon any material increase in the valuation of his land. There is no more government land to buy nor is there the least prospect that land will ever again appreciate in value to any material extent. Upon what then can the farmer of the next generation rely for revenue except upon his own keenness and business ability?

This conclusion leads to the consideration of a most serious question—the one which forms the burden of my argument; how shall the boy be prepared, under the changed conditions which surround him, to take his father's place and run the farm successfully?

He must have, in addition to the requisites of the past, a mind sharpened by study, broadened by knowledge, disciplined by thought. In order to meet the difficult requirements of his employment, the ability to calculate chances and arrive at correct conclusions, he ought to have a general knowledge of the economic principles which underlie the commercial world; he must have a knowledge of arithmetic and the rules which govern business transactions; he should have a sufficient knowledge of book-keeping to enable him to keep an accurate record of his business transactions and understand his financial condition at all times; he will find it useful to understand those principles of natural philosophy, botany and chemistry, which govern the growing of crops, the nature of the soil, the effects of fertilizers, etc.; he must keep himself well informed on the condition of trade and the crops of the whole world, necessitating a general knowledge, at least, of physical and political geography; in order to discharge his duties as a citizen and at the same time protect his own interests, he should be familiar with the principles of civil government; if he would appear well before the world and exert that influence which the importance of his calling demands, he must be a good reader, and a fair penman, and be able to express his thoughts clearly and grammatically. He will have to deal with a world better educated than ever before. He will consequently, find a cultivated mind of prime importance in coping with the shrewdness and intelligence that will surround him.

All these mental equipments must the farmer of the future have, and the best, if not the only way for him to acquire them, is to begin now as a boy and obtain as complete an education as possible. There will be no danger of his acquiring too much education.

This brings us down to the vital question, are you, farmers of Lenawee, giving your boys every chance in your power to gain an education? Do you send him to school, not for a couple of months in the winter when there is nothing else for him so do, but the year around. Do you supply him with the necessary books and equipments for his school work? Do you consider his schooling of such importance that you cheerfully forego the benefits of his help on the farm whenever they would interfere with his regularity in school or the preparation of his lessons?

I know farmers who could not truthfully answer these questions in the affirmative, but perhaps there are none of that kind here to-night. Instances have come under my own observation in which farmers boys were permitted to go to school only during a few weeks in the winter and then the unfortunate lads were compelled to come late to school on account of so many chores to do at home. In many cases they are kept out of school whenever there is extra work to do at home. It is work first and school afterwards. The potatoes must be dug whether the boy learns how to write his name or not. The corn must be husked even if the boy is growing up in ignorance. What short-sightedness! What injustice to the boy!

The farmer boy is naturally bright and quick-witted. He is filled with the same ambition to amount to something in life as animates his city or village contemporary. Give him a chance and he will make rapid strides in education and in business attainments. Among the best students in our high schools and colleges are farmer boys. Many of our most successful business and professional men first saw the light of day "on the farm." It is not of this class that I am speaking. Either they have been given the opportunity for mental culture, or they have made it for themselves. It is for the boys who are kept at home on the farm that I plead. Every farm boy should be given the same privileges of schooling that are accorded to the boys of the towns and cities. It is certain that he will need all the mental discipline he can acquire. The vocation of the farmer is the foundation of our national prosperity. It demands to-day, as never before, talent and education. To keep pace with this progressive age the tillers of the soil must possess brains cultivated by mental labor. Shall not the agriculture of the future be animated by intelligence. Shall not your sons and daughters be able to hold up the standard of advancement and keep pace with the rest of the material world in the march of progress? Would you not have your sons broad-minded, far-sighted, intelligent men, progressive in ideas and successful in business, capable of fulfilling the duties of domestic life with dignity and grace, influential in social and public affairs? Of course you desire such a lot for your boys, but your aspirations for their future can hardly be realized by keeping them at home and allowing them no chance for mental development. The whole history of civilization illustrates the superiority of mental capacity over brute or savage strength. The men who have ruled over the world have had the benefit of mental culture. This culture, it is true, has not always been acquired in the school room. But it has been obtained by study in some manner. Then why should the farmer boy be deprived of the privilege of developing his mind and fitting himself for his honorable calling? Why should his mind be stunted by drudgery, his longings for knowledge restrained, his ambition for self-improvement quenched by an incessant round of daily toil, without hope of ever exploring the boundless realms of knowledge which are so freely opened to other youth?

Perhaps my presentation of the farmer boy's position may seem exaggerated. But, my friends, in many cases at least it is not. The boy is treated with less consideration than the live stock on the farm. He seems to be looked upon with no other consideration than how to extract the most work out of him and incur the least expense on his training.

The complaint is often heard that the boys will not stay on the farm. There are many farms in Lenawee county which the boys have abandoned, to seek their fortunes in some fancied more congenial employment, and the old people are left alone on the farm while the boys are off in the city, engaged in business or professional life, and yet, I believe the time is near at hand when successful farming will offer a more tempting field for the exercise of intellectual talents than business or even professional life.

Do you not believe that if the old homestead were permeated with the spirit of culture and refinement, if books, music and pictures were made prominent in every room, the boys would conceive so found a love for the old farm and so high an esteem for their father's calling that they would be contented to stay on the farm?

It is time that a more liberal policy be extended to the farmer's boy. Let his education be of paramount consideration. I am not one to depreciate the importance of teaching the boy how to work. He certainly ought to be impressed with the manliness of labor. He should be taught that nothing so degrades man as idleness and that every honest employment is honorable. The man who does his best at such labor as he is adapted to perform is worthy of all honor, whether he be a philosopher or a ditch digger. It is the man who honors or dishonors the vocation. But while not deprecating the training which the boy receives behind the plow or in the harvest field, I would not have his education limited to such a course. His schooling should be made the first consideration.

The farmer who sends his boy to school nine or ten months in the year, supplying him with all needful books and papers, encouraging him to read useful books and journals, leading him to look upon life from a broad standpoint, instilling his mind with lofty ideals of right, justice and honor, will hardly fail seeing his sons develop into manly, broad-minded men, worthy to succeed their fathers and qualified to advance the standard of agriculture commensurate with its prime importance.

On the other hand the farmer who keeps his boy at work the year around, barely sending him to school three months in the year and then almost nullifying the benefits of school by keeping him at home every few days to work, neglecting to supply him with sufficient text books to enable him to get his lessons, or to furnish him with good and wholesome reading in the home circle, grinding all the boyish enthusiasm and hope out of him by hard toil, is pretty sure to be rewarded by seeing his son grow up ignorant and incompetent, lacking in influence and doomed to failure in life.

Farmers of Lenawee, which fate shall you choose for your sons?

OBITUARY.

Died, at Tecumseh, Mich., on Wednesday, January 27, 1892, Mrs. Sarah Edwards, in the 95th year of her age.

Miss Sarah Bryant, afterward Mrs. Edwards, was born in Henderson Co., N. Y., Feb. 28, 1797. At the age of six years she came with her parents to Seneca Co., N. Y. On the first day of March, 1821, she was married to Richard Edwards. Ten years afterward, on the 9th of October, 1831, Mr. and Mrs. Edwards arrived in Michigan and settled in the heart of the forest in the town of Franklin, Lenawee Co. Their first shelter was a log house, built without the aid of the sawmill, and having neither floor nor windows. In a few months, however, these were supplied. A clearing of five acres was made and this was gradually enlarged. The nearest neighbor was half a mile distant. Roads were mere wagon tracks, extending from settlement to settlement through the wilderness. Tecumseh was a little village. Of Adrian there was nothing at that time but two or three houses, a blacksmith shop and a hotel. The Chicago pike had not been surveyed. In September, 1865, thirty-four years after the first arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Edwards in Michigan, they removed to Tecumseh. Here Mr. Edwards died in 1868.

Mrs. Edwards was the mother of six children—four sons and two daughters. The only surviving one of the six is the daughter Phœbe, on whom has devolved for years the care of her invalid mother. The universal feeling in the community is that she has discharged this sacred duty with a fidelity which has seldom been excelled. Indeed it must have been largely owing to the daughter's faithful care that the mother attained to such a ripe old age.

The funeral service was attended at the family residence on Friday, the 29th, at 4:30 p. m., the Rev. W. H. Babbitt, pastor of the Presbyterian church, Tecumseh, officiating, and appropriate music being furnished by members of the choir. The interment was at Tecumseh cemetery. Between the beginning and the close of this long life the greatest changes have taken place in the world that have occurred in any single century. Michigan has risen from a sparsely settled territory to a rich and populous State. It is fitting we should make loving mention, when they pass away, of the virtuous, useful lives of the pioneers, to whom Michigan owes so much of her present prosperity.

Resolutions of Respect.

At a meeting of the ladies of the Presbyterian Missionary Society of Raisin the following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, God, in His all-wise Providence, has seen fit to remove from our midst Mrs. S. R. Rogers, our friend and co-worker in the cause of Christ, we, the ladies of the above named Society, do hereby express our deep sorrow for the loss of one who has for so long a time been engaged with us in active Christian work, and although she has for several years been unable to meet with us we have at all times had the assurance of her interest and sympathy in every labor of love.

Resolved, That her patience and cheerfulness during the years of her suffering have been the means of strengthening our faith and encouraging us in every good work.

Resolved, That in her death we have lost a faithful friend and a devoted member of our Society, and while we miss her counsel and advice we bow in submission to the will of God, realizing that our loss is her gain.

Resolved, That we extend to the family our heartfelt sympathy and recommend them to One who will not leave them comfortless.

Resolved, That these resolutions be published in the Tecumseh HERALD and also placed on the records of the Society

IN MEMORIAM.

ANDREW WILSON.

On Sunday morning, Jan. 10th, 1892, there passed to his eternal rest Mr. Andrew Wilson of this village, after an illness of some days of la grippe, resulting in heart failure. The deceased was July 13, 1822. He was the oldest of three children, whom he survived. He came to Michigan in 1833, his father taking up 160 acres of land—the deed bearing the signature of Andrew Jackson. On March 3, 1847, Mr. Wilson was married to Miss Frances A. Merritt of Franklin. They had nine children of whom five are now living, the mother having died Aug. 9, 1882. Mr. Wilson made a public profession of religion in the 34th year of his age, and united with the M. E. church in Franklin, but afterwards by letter with the Congregational church of the same place. He was known by the Pastor and members of that church as ever ready, and always among the first to aid with labor, money and prayer, in the promotion of the cause of God and humanity. A few years since he retired from the active work of farming, which he had made a good success, and took up his residence in Tecumseh. On Dec. 22, 1885, he married Mrs. Mary A. Collins of Macon, with whom he has lived most happily until he was removed hence by death. They both joined the Presbyterian church of this village and were highly esteemed in its fellowship. The funeral services were held at his late residence, and were conducted by Rev. W. H. Babbitt, assisted by a friend and former pastor of the deceased, who bore ample testimony to his character as a father, husband, citizen and Christian. The remains were then taken to Franklin, where additional services were held by the present Pastor of that church in the midst of a large and deeply interested audience of friends and neighbors of the deceased. Thus has gone from our midst another of the Lord's faithful followers, to join the happy throng of the redeemed in glory; and thus are we again reminded of our mortality, and of the importance of preparation to meet God.

DAVID SMELTZER.

David Smeltzer was born in Ireland, in 1807, and died in Tecumseh, January 28th, 1892.

Mr Smeltzer was never married. During the last thirty years of his life he had lived in Tecumseh, with his sister, Mrs. Isaac West, to whom he was much attached. During all these years there had grown up between them a fondness and devotion to each other seldom surpassed. Love makes the difference between Elim and Marah. It is love in the homes of earth that gladdens and blesses the pilgrims; it is the wells and psalms of these Elims of love which are not far to seek, that rest and refresh the weary wayfarers and give them strength to hold on their way. They shall drink of this brook on the way, and therefore "Shall they lift up the head." In infancy, Mr Smeltzer's parents consecrated him to God by holy baptism in the established church of England, and he died in the faith of his childhood. The funeral obsequies were held at Mrs. West's, on Saturday afternoon Jan. 28th, and were conducted by Rev. O. J. Perrin.

MARGARET WEST.

Margaret West was born in Ireland, Feb. 24th, 1812. She died in Tecumseh Jan. 30th, 1892. She was married to Isaac West June 21st, 1844. Mr. West, who had been a soldier in the English army, after the breaking out of the rebellion, enlisted in the 52d Ohio regiment, and subsequently died at Bowling Green, Dec. 1st, 1862. Mrs. West, during her widowhood of thirty years in Tecumseh, provided a very pleasant home for her brother David Smeltzer, who died one day before her own death. Mrs. West was a devoted member of the Episcopal church of this place. She died in the faith in which she had lived. Her last hours were full of peace and composure. By faith she was enabled to lean on the arm of Him who has destroyed the power of death, and put away all fear. Her faith shed light on the darkness of the tomb, and pointed onward to a glorious resurrection. Such faith can welcome death, for it is sleep in Jesus—the rest of Heaven. The last sad rites were performed in her own shadowed home, now made entirely vacant by her own departure to the better land. On account of the illness of her own pastor, the religious services were conducted, by request, by Rev. Mr. Perrin, of the Methodist Episcopal church. A large number of sympathizing friends were present to pay the last tribute of respect to one so highly esteemed by all who knew her. Many eyes were moistened with tears, as all that was left of this kind-hearted woman was laid in the grave beside the brother, who had but just gone on before her, where they will slumber together until reunited in that happy land where they will part no more.

Puck calls Senator David B. Hill "The Too-previous Passenger." Dalrymple's cartoon in the issue of February 3d is a good hit at the Senator, who is represented as sitting on his trunk at the railway station in Chicago, waiting for the next train to the White House, which does not start until June 21st, 1892. Look out for Puck, David; he has his eye on you!

Scribner's Magazine for February contains eight illustrated articles representing the work of Robert Blum, W. L. Metcalf, Irving R. Wiles, J. H. Twachtman, W. L. Taylor, and other skilful artists. In the group of Australian articles there is a vivid and picturesque description of pastoral life on the great sheep ranches which are peculiar to that country, fully illustrated from drawings by Birge Harrison, who has but recently returned from a long sojourn in that region. The notable group on Practical Charities is represented in this issue by "A Model Working-Girls' Club," the Polytechnic Young Women's Institute, of London, described by Dr. Albert Shaw, a close student of social and economic questions.

The following suggestion is taken from the Messenger. The Herald seconds the motion: "Farmer's County Institutes are very profitable, and interesting not only to the farmers who participate, but also to those who are engaged in other occupations. The attendance at the last institute was somewhat minified on account of so much sickness, but general satisfaction was expressed at the ability of the papers and the discussions that followed. We have an idea that the newspaper publishers of Lenawee county would find it both profitable and pleasant to follow the farmer's good example and organize the Lenawee County Press Club. We don't agree on political matters, and won't try to. But there are many matters on which there is an agreement and a decided bond of fellowship. If you can't stand a Prohib in your ranks, all right. But don't let that stand in the way of the organization of the Lenawee County Press Club. Other counties have good organizations and why not Lenawee? What do you say, boys?

"Godey's Lady's Book" for February is fully what it claims to be, a Valentine number. Not only is it that but a dainty one, too. The story by Prof. Clarence M. A strange novelty is this golden table corn, with its beautiful rich cream color. It is claimed by those who know it that it is very sweet, early and tender, and a superior corn. We notice Vick recommends it very highly. The Floral Guide, which comes to us bringing a bouquet of Carnations on the front cover, with a splendid bunch of Brilliant Poppies on the back, gives full description of this new corn, which is only 15 cents a packet. Vick's Floral Guide is worthy a place in the home of anyone who expects to make a garden the coming spring. By all means send ten cents to James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y., for the Guide, and you can deduct this Amount from your first order. It will pay you well.

Reynolds and Codey.

The Reynolds and Codey Comedy Company, which appears at the opera house to-night, comes highly recommended and claim to be one of the best shows on the road this season. It was only by chance and good luck that Manager Sutton got them to come here and he had to give them a big guarantee to get them, as they only play in the large cities. The show is first-class in every respect and will undoubtedly have a packed house to-night. The company consists of ten people, among whom are the following well known people: Miss Maude Melville, Miss Bella White, Miss Clifton, Miss Ethel Bella Codey, Mr. H. O. Reynolds, Mr. Harry Melville, Mr. Livingston De Kalb and Mr. Robert Convelle. The St. Thomas, Ont., Evening Post of the 20th ult. says. "The Reynolds and Codey Company which appeared at the opera house last night in "A Shadowed Life" was the best show we have had this season. The house was packed and to judge from the applause there was not a person in the house who did not enjoy the performance. Reynolds and Codey will always be welcome in St. Thomas if they give us such shows as they did last night. The company will appear in "A Shadowed Life," a strong comedy-drama, to-night."

Eulogies upon the life of the late Congressman Houk, of Tennessee, were delivered. A bill was introduced to authorize the government to erect post office buildings in places of more than 3,000 inhabitants, the cost of the buildings to be not less than $6,000 nor more than $50,000. In the second stories of the buildings there shall be public libraries. Schneider was also accused of assaulting the murdered girls before choking them to death. Mrs. Schneider, after her husband had assaulted and strangled the girls, helped to drag their bodies into a neighboring wood, where she stripped them of their clothing.

BOTH GIRLS INDICTED.

True Bills Found Against Alice Mitchell and Lillie Johnson at Memphis.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 1.—The grand jury reported a true bill against Alice Mitchell and Lillie Johnson, charging them with the murder of Freda Ward. The indictment of Miss Johnson is a surprise, as she did nothing more than to accompany Miss Mitchell to the courthouse in a buggy. A member of the jury says, however, that she was aware of the Mitchell girl's intention. The two culprits will be arraigned next Monday.

A SCORE LOST.

Wreck of the British Bark Ferndale on the Pacific Coast.

ABERDEEN, Wash., Feb. 1.—The British bark Ferndale, which went ashore 10 miles north of the entrance to Gray's harbor Friday, is now a total wreck about 1 mile off shore and of her crew of twenty-three men all but three sailors are drowned. A terrific gale and exceptionally high tide prevailed at the time. The sea ran higher than was ever before known. When she struck the officers and crew at once prepared to reach shore, but they had little time in which to make their preparations. It was impossible to successfully launch their boats with the tremendous sea running, and although an attempt was made the frail craft were almost immediately swamped.

Nothing was left for the crew to do but to lash themselves to the yards and broken pieces of masts. Soon after the sea broke over the stranded ship and several of the crew were washed away. The last man to leave the deck was Capt. Blair. Three of the seamen reached the shore on pieces of drift and the body of the mate was afterward picked up on the sandy beach incased in a life-preserver, but no trace of the others could be found. The Ferndale was a new vessel and was on her first trip to the coast. It was also the first visit of Capt. Blair to this coast. The vessel was worth about $90,000.

CHANCE FOR ANOTHER WAR.

A British Ship Boldly Defies the Laws of the United States.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Feb. 1.—About 3 o'clock Sunday the big three-mast schooner Glendon, of St. John, N. B., sailed into this harbor with the British jack floating from her mizzen. In direct violation of the American law, which provides that a foreign ensign must be accompanied by the stars and stripes, the fore and main masts were destitute of bunting.

As the vessel sailed up the harbor the British flag was perceived by people on the docks, and as the vessel passed the Three Bridges the abutments were black with excited men, who greeted the British flag with hisses, mingled with cries of "Haul it down," and "Shoot it." Capt. Trowbridge, of the schooner, drew a pistol and swore he would shoot the first man who laid hands on the halyards.

When the vessel finally reached her berth at Swords wharf, which is just in the rear of the Fourth regiment armory, there were over 1,000 men on the wharf. They were joined by a few armed militiamen from the armory, who attempted to tear down the flag. They were driven off at the revolver's muzzle by the crew. An American flag was then hoisted on an adjoining schooner and greatly cheered. The British flag still floats, but will be forcibly removed to-day.

HOOTED BY A MOB.

Ungracious Treatment Accorded William O'Brien by Parnellites.

DUBLIN, Feb. 1.—William O'Brien arrived at Thurles, county Tipperary, Saturday. While on his way from the railway station to the Episcopal palace, the residence of Archbishop Croke, he was recognized by a number of Parnellites, who followed him. They were joined by others, until finally Mr. O'Brien was surrounded by a menacing crowd, who kept him company to the very gates of the palace. He was hooted and jeered and all manner of epithets were hurled at him. Some of the mildest terms of reproach addressed to him were "renegade" and "murderer," and between the insults the crowd amused themselves by cheering for John E. Redmond, who defeated Michael Davitt, the McCarthyite leader, at the recent parliamentary election at Waterford, and for other prominent Parnellites.

CHILDREN CRUSHED.

Fred and Rosa Keegan, of St. Paul, Killed by an Electric Car.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 1.—Saturday morning an electric car on the Rice street and West St. Paul line ran over two children named Fred and Rosa Keegan and both were killed almost instantly. The children were running across the street and the car was coming at full speed. Before the motorman could stop the car the children were directly in front of it and in an instant were under the wheels.

More War in Kentucky.

MANCHESTER, Ky., Jan. 30.—The Hensley-Desam feud has broken out afresh. John Hensley was being tried for the murder of James Desam, and the factions were on hand. A battle followed. Marion Herd, a brother of the judge, was killed, and John Hocker, who was guarding Hensley, was fatally wounded. Several others were also wounded.

Five Men Killed.

NEWCASTLE, Pa., Jan. 29.—Engine 956 on the Frackville branch of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad exploded with terrible results at this place at 8:30 o'clock Thursday morning, killing the entire crew. The killed are: Paul Napoleon, Harry Strauts, Jacob Turney, William Winterstein and Joseph Zeigler.

Not a Good Law.

DAVENPORT, Ia., Jan. 30.—The Iowa law against alien ownership was declared unconstitutional in the district court here Thursday. A year ago Ralph Heath died, leaving heirs in Ireland. Judge Waterman ruled that the rights of these aliens were fully secured by existing treaties, and that the law was void.

The Little Republic Notified That Her Apology Is Accepted—No Demand Made for a Salute of Our Flag.

PERFECTLY SATISFACTORY.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Secretary Blaine has sent a cable message to Minister Egan, instructing him to inform the Chilian government that its proposition for settlement of the difference between the two governments made in response to the ultimatum of the 21st instant, is satisfying to the president of the United States, as indicating a good prospect that the controversy can now be adjusted on terms satisfactory to this government by the usual diplomatic methods. The telegram makes no request or suggestion of any kind whatever for a salute by Chili to the American flag. There was nothing said at Friday's cabinet meeting on this subject, and there is no reason to believe that this government will require such a salute from Chili. It is very possible, however, that Chili will on her own accord perform this graceful act at the termination of the diplomatic adjustment of all difficulties which is now in progress.

The following is the text of the cable message sent by Secretary Blaine accepting Chili's proposition for settlement of the differences between the two governments:

"DEPARTMENT OF STATE, WASHINGTON, Jan 30, 1892.—To Egan, minister, Santiago: I am directed by the president to acknowledge the receipt of Senor Pereira's dispatch of the 25th inst. It has been communicated to congress, and has given great pleasure to the people of the United States and to the executive department, as it restores the correspondence between the two republics to a basis of cordiality and makes, as he believes, a full and honorable adjustment of all unsettled matters easily attainable.

"The president notes with gratification the expressions of regret for the condemnation of the assault upon the sailors of the Baltimore, offered by Mr. Pereira, and congratulates the Chilian government upon the frank and ample withdrawal of the Matta circular and upon the spirit of justice displayed towards Minister Egan. You will assure the Chilian government that the president will be glad to meet in the most generous spirit these friendly overtures.

"Believing that the subject of reparation for assault upon the seamen of the Baltimore is now capable of adjustment between the two governments by the usual diplomatic methods the president proposes for the present any discussion of the suggestions made by Senor Pereira as to the use of other methods, not doubting that the sense of justice of Chili will enable the two governments to speedily and honorably make full end of the whole matter. BLAINE."

As to the amount to be paid to the relatives of Riggin and Turnbull, the sailors who were killed, the Chilian government may find, when it comes to investigate the matter, that in several states of the union the enlightened judgment of the people speaking through their legislatures has fixed the limit that may be recovered for damages in case of death at $5,000. In the matter of injury, however, the limit of damages lies within the province of the petit jury. Patrick Shields, the sailor on the Keweenaw, who was also a victim of Chilian violence in Valparaiso, has filed by his attorneys a claim for $50,000 damages, which the attorney asks the state department to collect.

DRANK HER OWN POISON.

A Wife Poisons the Tea and When Accused Drinks It Herself and Dies.

KINGSTON, Ont., Feb. 1.—Mrs. Blackwell, of Wolfetown, Renfrew county, poisoned the tea prepared for a meal, with the intention of taking the lives of her family. Her husband detected the fact that there was something wrong with the tea and accused his wife of having placed poison in it. She denied the accusation, and to prove that the beverage was all right drank a cupful of the tea. She was taken ill in a short time and died before a doctor who was summoned reached her side.

Two Men Killed by Gas.

CHICKASAW, O., Feb. 1.—Caspen Hein was thawing out a gas regulator Friday night when the building in which it was placed took fire. He went to turn the gas off, but turned the wrong valve, allowing it to escape into the house above the well. When he opened the door the gas overcame him and he sank to the floor dead. Henry Keiser came to the rescue and met death in the same way.

Killed Four Horsethieves.

HELENA, Mont., Feb. 1.—The depredations of horsethieves have become so extensive that a gang of citizens has been organized to hunt them down. A few days ago in an encounter four of the thieves were killed. The thieves outnumbered the citizens, and a call for reinforcements has been made. An effort is being made to raise a fund of $20,000 to aid in the campaign.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent;
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory.

A FIEND.

Once his cheeks with health were rosy
And he filled out all the clothes he Ever wore in a full and ample style;
His remarks were bright and witty
To the chappies 'bout the city,
And his friends were greeted with a cheerful smile.
But now he's dull and dreary
And he looks both weak and weary,
He seldom smiles, they miss his little jokes;
Yet this haggard, hapless creature,
With death stamped on each feature,
Six packs of cigarettes a day he smokes.

They have cost him many dollars,
Loosely set his clothes and collars,
His joints, they creak like hinges on a gate;
And his cigarettes seem bigger
Than his puny little figure—
He warned, my youthful reader, of his fate;
For he cannot stop inhaling,
'Tis a bad and fatal failing:
'Old Nic" ('tis not old Nick who dwells below I mean)
When dressed in fancy papers
Cuts some very dangerous capers
And he lands you every time, does Nic O'Tine.

DOING HIS DUTY.

What Seemed Certain Death Proved the Sailor's Salvation.

"Always do your duty, Tom, no matter how perilous or irksome it may be, and, as a general thing, you will come out all right and shipshape in the end."

Such was the parting advice of an old sailor to Thomas Brown, a boy of sixteen, who was about sailing away aboard the ship Dolphin, bound from New York to the East Indies.

Tom was deeply impressed by the words of his adviser. He bore them in mind, and, after the vessel sailed, was so prompt and cheerful in obeying orders that he became a favorite both with the foremast hands and the officers.

Sometimes the lad, set to scouring the decks, polishing the ring-bolts, or hoisting heavy casks out of the hold, would feel as if ready to drop with fatigue, but not a murmur would escape his lips. He was resolved to do his duty bravely, even though it should kill him.

Fortunately, it had a good effect upon him, enlarging his lungs and chest, making him broad in the shoulders and strong and muscular in the arms. Slender and rather delicate when he sailed, he was fast becoming "all right and shipshape," as his friend, the old sailor, had expressed it.

One day the vessel lay becalmed in the Indian ocean. The sun, partially veiled by a thin mist, looked like a red-hot copper ball. The air was stifling; the men breathed with difficulty. Suddenly the barometer began to fall with alarming rapidity. In the distance a hollow, humming noise was heard. Far away to windward was seen a long, broad patch of white water. A flock of sea birds, with unearthly screams, flew over the ship. They were frightened; they knew what was coming.

"Hands by the halyards! In with royals and to'-gallant sails! Stand by to clew up the fore and mizzen topsails and double reef the main!" screamed the captain, in a voice that made every man jump.

Ere the tars could obey, the storm, hissing, roaring and howling, driving the seas in great, white walls of foaming water and spray before it, came sweeping along with terrific velocity, not a mile to windward.

The active sailors clewed up and down as fast as they could; then aloft they went and laid out on the yards.

Scarcely were the fore and mizzen topsails rolled up, when, with tremendous fury, the gale struck the ship.

Down she went, almost on her beam-ends, tearing through the water, in which she was ingulfed to her waist. The canvas was jerked from under the men like a flash. Whipping about a moment, with the din of thunder, it was torn from the jackstays and sent whirling in shreds straight up into the black rack of the tempest.

Meanwhile ropes and sheets were slatting about all over the ship. The whistling shrouds bellied far inward; the cracking masts bent over like whalebones; the huge anchors quivered and reeled on the catheads.

Tom Brown, with another lad, was at the wheel, assisted by the second mate. The wheel was now like a living monster. It struggled to free itself from the grasp of the three sailors, who held and controlled it with difficulty.

Suddenly a snapping sound, louder than the other noises, was heard aloft. The weather main-to'-gallant sail-sheet had parted. The sail, flapping about, threatened to carry away the mast.

"Up there you go, Bill!" cried the captain to the lad next to Brown, "and cut that sail clear o' the jackstays!"

Bill turned pale and trembled, but did not move from the wheel.

"Oh, captain, nobody could go up there and live!" he gasped. "Don't make me go, sir!"

In fact, the task of cutting clear that slatting sail, with the mast reeling and jerking, threatening to give way every moment, must prove a perilous undertaking. A strong man could hardly keep himself from being thrown from the lofty spar, much less a boy.

"I tell you to go!" repeated the captain.

"I can't! I can't!" cried Bill, as white as a sheet. "Anything else I'll do, captain, but don't send me to my death!"

There was no time to lose. The skipper, glaring angrily at the speaker an instant, looked at Tom Brown.

"Go up there, Tom, and cut the sail clear!"

Tom also turned pale, but his eyes flashed and his clear, ringing voice was heard:

"Aye, aye, sir!"

Up the main shrouds he went—up higher and higher, determined to do his duty even to the death.

With difficulty he held to the shrouds. Several times his feet were jerked from under him, but he drew them back and kept bravely on.

He reached the top-gallant mast. The ship made a terrific plunge. Then she came up with a tremendous jerk.

The boy's feet again flew from under him. He was flung from the shrouds, but he just saved himself from falling by clutching the top-gallant halyards.

He threw himself back into the shrouds. He gained the top-gallant yard, and "laying" (going) out on the foot-rope, he clutched the yard with one hand and with the other seizing the sheath-knife in his belt he endeavored to cut the sail clear.

Wilder and more violently slatted the canvas every moment. Several times it struck him with tremendous force, when he only saved himself by clinging under it, with both arms, to the yard. The instant it flew back, affording him a chance to work with his knife, he was busy cutting at the strands. He almost cleared the sail from the spar when the ship plunged again, coming up the next moment with a jerk that made everything reel.

A crack like the report of a musket was heard and away went the top and top-gallant mast by the board, as the stays parted. Tom, when he felt the mast going, had thrown himself inboard, clutching two ratlines. By these he hung, falling, with the spar, into the sea. As yet uninjured, with the exception of a few slight bruises, the boy threw both arms around the spar, clinging firmly to it.

The ship, dashing on, was soon lost to his view in the dark rack, the mist and the spray of the storm. No boat could be lowered for him in such a gale. There he was, all alone, adrift on the stormy ocean.

The mad wind howled and shrieked in his ears, the sea and the spray flew around him, almost blinding and choking him. But he held to the spar until he felt his strength leaving him, when he lashed himself to the timber with some of the trailing ropes near him.

Hours passed. Night came, with the tempest still raging. Through all the darkness and the storm, the boy, now nearly senseless, was carried on, fast to the spar.

By dawn the violence of the gale had abated. The sky was clear, the tints of the rising sun were on the eastern wave.

Feebly Tom raised himself on the floating mast. Thank God! there was a sail, like a slender, white column, in the distance.

Was it his own vessel? He hoped so. Up went his kerchief, waved about his head as a signal. The craft drew nearer, when he perceived it was not the Dolphin. Soon he was seen. The ship stood toward him, a boat was lowered, he was picked up and taken aboard. The hardships he had undergone had proven too much for him. He had kept up until the boat was near him; then he had fallen prone upon the mast, insensible. When he opened his eyes, he found himself in a snug berth, with an old man sitting near, by his side a lovely girl of thirteen.

"He has come to! Oh, papa, I am so glad!" cried the girl, clapping her hands.

Tom's story was soon told. He then learned that he was aboard the ship Trumpet, bound home from Calcutta to New York.

That same day the after part of the Dolphin's hull was discovered, bearing her name, proving that she had been lost, not long after the boy fell overboard.

The crew, who were in her when she was wrecked, were never heard of. All had perished after she went to pieces. Had Tom been aboard of her then, he, too, would have found a watery grave. His courage in obeying orders—in mounting that perilous mast, to do his duty—had been his salvation. To use the homely words of his sailor adviser, he had "come out all right and shipshape in the end."

Not only had his life thus been saved, but a piece of rare, good fortune followed. The old man and little girl, who sat near him when he recovered his senses, were a wealthy oil merchant and his daughter. When the vessel arrived home, the child coaxed her father to take the lad into his employ.

In due time, by constant attention to his duties, he became head clerk, saved money and was finally made a partner in the firm of his benefactor. Soon after he married the merchant's daughter, who, on the night before their wedding, blushingly confessed to him that she had loved him ever since that memorable day when, picked up from the drifting spar, he was brought senseless aboard the ship Trumpet.—Rufus Hall, in N. Y. Ledger.

SHOE BUCKLES.

Their Great Size in the Last Century and Consequent Fall.

The manufacture of buckles contributed largely to the employment of Warwickshire and Staffordshire ingenuity during the last century. In 1781 all gentlemen of tone sported on their shoes a large square buckle plated with silver, and as the ladies soon adopted the reigning taste, "it was difficult," as Hutton, the historian of Birmingham, remarks, "to discover their beautiful little feet covered with an enormous shield of buckle, and men wondered to see the active motion under the massive load." The massive load soon after this became unsupportable for both sexes. Strings came into fashion, and consequently a large class of ingenious artisans were compelled to suffer the loss of their usual employment. In 1791 a deputation of master bucklemakers from the towns of Birmingham, Walsall and Wolverhampton obtained an audience of the prince of Wales, (afterward George IV.,) at Carlton house, where they presented a petition setting forth the distressed situation of thousands who had been engaged in the different departments of bucklemaking, consequent upon the fashion which was then so prevalent of wearing strings. The prince promised not only to wear buckles on his own shoes, but to order the members of his household to do the same. But the commands of royalty were nugatory when opposed to the mandates of fashion.—England in the Eighteenth Century.

BOSTON OUTFITTERS, Tecumseh,

HERE is a GOOD THING for YOU

A MAN, OR WOMAN,

of intelligence and quick-witted enough to know a "GOOD THING" at sight, but who has Lost the Most Precious Possession on Earth, viz., GOOD HEALTH, WILL NOT require a SECOND TELLING to be induced to become a purchaser

DR. GREGG'S ELECTRIC BELTS & APPLIANCES.

Do you know why? Because it is plain to be seen that the TRUTH ONCE TOLD is enough. The Surprising Promptness with which all classes of people respond to our announcements, and the rapidly increasing demand for Dr. Gregg's Goods wherever introduced, conclusively prove that true modesty is always recognized and the quality of merit takes care of itself. Metaphorically our statement is the Button—the Public Press it, and

DR. GREGG'S ELECTRIC SPECIALTIES "Do the Rest."

The extent of Pressure on the button and the success of Dr. Gregg's Goods in "Doing the Rest" is most satisfactorily shown in the marvelous growth of our business the past 60 days.

Repeated and increasing demands for The Gregg Electric "Foot Warmer" are coming in from all parts of the country with profuse acknowledgements that so much comfort for $1.00 (the price) is like buying Gold Dollars for ten cents.

The Delicate Organism of Woman subjects her to many peculiar ailments and unfortunate misery. The extreme sensitiveness of her Nervous System very frequently requires artificial stimulus. The Gregg Electric Belt and other Appliances supply this as nothing else can.

The Rugged Constitution of Man, when once broken, becomes pitiable in the extreme, from which there is absolutely no escape without assistance. The Gregg Electric Belts and Appliances in cases of this kind, have honestly won their title of King of Remedies.

Rheumatism is conquered, sufferers from Obesity are speedily relieved, Dropsy quickly yields, spinal difficulties and Paralysis disappear, and many other diseases of Men and Women are permanently cured, fully described in complete catalogue for 6c, or elaborate circular free. We guarantee to forfeit twice the price of any of Dr. Gregg's goods found not to be genuine. We make an elegant little $3 Eletric Belt, which is selling very rapidly and which we take in exchange for any higher power belt (except $5 belt) and credit $3 on the price of new order. Remember the Electric Foot warmers are $1 a pair, worth $10. Address

Two young Brittonites, about 12 years old, were found quite boozy last Sunday as a result of drinking too much cider out of a whisky bottle. What next.

Prof. W. J. Reynolds will appear at the opera house on Saturday evening, Feb'y 13, with his presentation of beautiful scenery. No one should fail to witness this entertainment, as it will be both amusing and instructive. Admission 10 and 15 cents. Reserved seats 25 cents.

Chris. Miller and Herbert Robbins, of Adrian, were arrested here Monday afternoon for appropriating and making away with numerous articles of clothing belonging to the latter's uncle at Milan, where they had been stopping. They were held by officer Gibson till Mr. Robbins arrived from Milan, when he paid all costs and sent the young scapegraces home.

The Adrian Press cannot understand how Britton has gotten along without an orchestra as long as it has. We can only account for it in this way: That Adrian has, with her artful demagogism, so far succeeded in inspiring certain Brittonites with her law book songs of right and wrong that we had not yet decided to call "chestnuts" or ring the bell until the monotony of those law songs compelled us to ring the bell and call for something new. Although chestnuts are good they will sometimes get wormy.

One of the grandest, most complete and most gratifying entertainments ever witnessed by the citizens of Britton was that given by the Dramatic Club in their presentation of the thrilling war drama entitled "The Confederate Spy," last Friday and Saturday evenings. Every available seat in the large and spacious hall was called into requisition and the entire audience was held as if by magic during the whole performance. The humorous soldier-Dutchman, Sockery, was greeted with deafening cheers, although the quietness of still midnight reigned at his first words. Manager Gillen, in his impersonation of Mulgarry, the Irish policeman, did the natives of the Emerald Isle full credit. Cassius Zeluff, in the role of Philip Bradley, the daring spy under Lee, graphically portrayed the devotion of the South to the cause of slavery and rebellion. Miss Ella Exelby as Maud Bradley, the Spy's sister, carried her part excellently, receiving in consequence of her devotion to her lover, George Waterman, a Union soldier, her brother's curse. During this terrible rending of brotherly love in behalf of country's honor, the eyes of the audience were dimmed with tears, to be dashed away in a moment by the final happy reconciliation and homecoming at the close of the war, illustrated in a grand illuminated picture. In consequence of the cast being so very lengthy it would be impossible to follow each one individually, and therefore in conclusion will say that all rendered their different parts admirably—so satisfactorily, in fact, that the citizens requested the Club to repeat it, which they have concluded to do Monday evening, Feb'y 22d. Admission as usual.

The last entertainment of the Tecumseh entertainment course will be given by the Lotus Glee Club Monday evening, Feb. 22d. Reserved seats can be secured at Adamson's for 10c.

Thomas Florence, who has been spending several months with relatives at Pen Yan, N. Y., returned Wednesday night of last week, accompanied by his wife. We extend congratulations.

Marvin Pattison, while watering his colt Thursday evening of last week, came very near being killed by a kick from the animal. In some way the colt got away and in play kicked, hitting Marvin in the face, cutting two quite ugly gashes and knocking some teeth out and several others loose. He did not regain consciousness until the following morning. Dr. Nelson was called and did all that could be done, and he is getting along nicely.

David O'Riley is preparing for a general overhauling and enlarging of his barn this spring. It will be 70 feet long with basement.

John Easterly, of Saline, brother of Mrs. Mary Turner, deceased, of Tecumseh, died of grip and asthma combined last Monday afternoon, at 3 o'clock.

The grippe does not seem to be letting up much. It is still claiming a victim here and there and some whole families are down with it. There is scarcely a house where one or more have not been in its grasp.

The next in the form of a social at Macon Grange hall, for the benefit of the church, will be a New England supper, Friday evening, Feb. 19. Pork and beans etc. will be served. Anyone wanting a good time don't fail to go. Perhaps it will be well for the gentlemen to bring their money in case some of the ladies should be timid. Can not every one look like a New Englander?

Cases of grippe are too numerous to mention, most of whom are convalescing.

Joseph Harrington and Miss Jennie Craig were united in matrimonial bonds last week Wednesday.

Dell Whelan is slowly recovering after a severe struggle with typhoid fever.

Maud Poucher, one of the latest victims of the grippe, is reported as on the gain.

Howard Whelan has been unable to attend school for the past three weeks on account of sickness.

Mrs. John Bracy's death occurred week before last, and she was laid to rest by the side of her husband, who died some time ago.

On Friday, Jan. 29th, Mrs. Robert Smith passed quietly away to the better land. After partially recovering from the grip she took cold, which resulted in pneumonia, and suddenly came the call which took her from home and loved ones. The funeral services were held on Sunday, at the Congregational church, Rev. Patchin officiating. In her death her husband loses a faithful companion, her children a fond mother, and her associates a faithful friend.

The ladies' society connected with the M. E. church met with Mrs. Milo Rowe Wednesday.

Mrs. Deborah Morgan and Mrs. D. P. Gilbert are very feeble, as a result of severe attacks of grippe.

Miss Eva Case, third daughter of Albert and Mary A. Case, died at Jackson, of typhoid-malarial fever, on Friday morning, Feb'y 5th.

James McMahon, a well-known and influential citizen of this township, died at his home of erysipelas, on Saturday evening, Jan'y 30th. He was born in the north of Ireland in 1816, his father coming to this county and town when James, his youngest child, was a young man. He married Miss Theodocia Merriman, of Manchester, who survives him. He leaves three sons; James B. and George P., of Ludington, Mich.; Charles D., who lives upon the farm, and one daughter, the wife of Dr. Schmidt, of Chelsea. The funeral services were held at the house on Wednesday, Feb'y 3rd, Rev. John Patchin officiating.

FARMERS' SOCIAL CLUB.

February 2d the Club met at the residence of Mr. Kehoe. So many of the Club members being sick the meeting was made up largely of the younger people, but a very pleasant and social time was enjoyed by all present. The question box brought forth several questions, but the one which excited the most interest was in regard to the free delivery of the mail in the rural districts and in order to give more time and thought to it, it will be presented as the question before the Club at the next meeting. The program was not fully carried out as so many were absent. The question in regard to the cheapest feed for fatting stock could hardly be called a discussion, as all who spoke on the question agreed as one person, thus losing the interest a little difference of opinion gives. As sickness and bad weather had broken up the meetings so much, it was decided by vote of Club to meet again in two weeks. Club then adjourned to meet again Feb. 16, at John Schreder's, with the following program:

Congregational singing.
Recitation—Lovisa Schreder.
Charade—Mrs. John Schreder.
Reading—John Boice.
Duet—Jennie Gillespie and Bert Rector.
Declamation—Ralph Gillespie.
Quotations, Longfellow—by all the Club.
Essay—Frank Gillespie.
Singing—Misses Gillespie.
Question—"Would it be advisable for the government to extend the free delivery of mail to the rural districts?" Opened by O. P. Remington.

S. W. FARMERS' CLUB.

The Club held its February meeting at the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Burtless, just west of the village, on Friday, Feb'y 5th. The attendance was large, for about seventy persons, from the towns of Bridgewater, Sharon and Manchester assembled in these bright and spacious parlors on that day. After partaking of an elegant dinner the lively hum of voices engaged in conversation was hushed when the president, B. G. English, called for order and we listened to the report of the secretary, Mrs. J. F. Spafard.

Mrs. L. M. Baldwin read an essay, entitled "Vacation," in which she said that every nature welcomed an occasional escape from surroundings grown monotonously familiar, to the mountains or the sea. And the sight and the sound of the ocean with its roar and breaking waves, like the incessant waves of life, afford rest to a tired mind. She described very graphically and beautifully a pleasant trip she enjoyed while a resident of Riverside, California.

The paper upon the subject for discussion—"Will the sheep industry prove remunerative in the near future?"—was ably presented by Albert D. English. He said that the occupation of a shepherd had ever been held in esteem by man and been blessed of God. Holy writ says Abel was a "keeper of sheep" and offered of the first of his flock to the Lord, and He had respect unto Abel and his offering. Abraham and Isaac were blessed and prospered in the same noble calling. David was called from feeding his father's flocks to be King of Israel. History tells us of Joan of Arc, who left her flock to lead the army of France to the field of victory. Henry VI. of England, when tired of the ceaseless turmoil of camp and court, sighed for the happy life of a shepherd and when the keepers asked that if he were indeed a king where was his crown, he replied: "My crown is call'd content; a crown it is that seldom kings enjoy." Not only is it an agreeable employment, but, in a monetary sense, a successful one. The writer gave the proceeds derived from a flock, continuated from 1864 to 1888, to prove that while wool prices are not as high as formerly, the average clip of wool per head has risen, making the profit greater than when wool sold for 45 cents per pound.

Richard Green gave an interesting talk about the manufacture of the article called "shoddy," in England.

H. R. Palmer described the process by which a fleece of wool is converted into cloth in the Clinton woolen mills.

David G. Rose, Wm. Mount, S. M. Merithew, J. R. Holmes, W. B. Osborn, J. G. English and others participated in the discussion, which proved a lively as well as an instructive one, even though each evidently sought to steer clear of that much-mooted question—the tariff problem.

The president, in referring to the Club's meeting at the home of the Supervisor, said that Mr. Burtless' success as a farmer proved that public office did not necessarily incapacitate a man for any other profession or business.

After the discussion was over Miss Jennie Hollis favored the company with music, finely executed upon the piano, and thus closed one of the largest as well as most delightful meetings in the history of the Club.

TECUMSEH-FRANKLIN FARMERS' CLUB.

The Club met at the residence of C. A. Matthews on the evening of Feb'y 3, with a good attendance. Club adjourned to meet at H. Wilson's in two weeks, with the following program:

Duet—Pauline and Christine Wilson.
Recitation—Neta Osborn.
Reading—Halleck Wilson.
Music—Mr. Martin Windup, the musical crank.
Dialogue—Eva Wilson and Gertrude Tallman.
Essay—Miss Clara Waldron.
Music—Miss Nellie Heesen.
Reading—Pauline Wilson.
Parody—Mrs. Van Valkenburg.
Song—Miss Lillie Vedder.
Dialogue—Hurry family.
Music.
Question—"How shall we compete with the cheap farmers of the West?" Opened by George Swartz, followed by B. Hurry, Abner Wilson and others.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, February 5, 1892.

President making is always one of the favorite occupations in Washington, and recent events have added a special zest to it. Senator Hill is given the credit, whether rightly or not I do not pretend to say, of having made a combination with Senators Gorman and Brice to control the democratic nomination, which Mr. Hill wants himself if he can get it, but failing in that he wants a hand in naming the man, and his second choice is understood to be Gorman, and his third "some good Western man." Senator Hill found a congenial atmosphere from the first among the democratic senators, most of whom are bitterly anti-Cleveland in their sentiments, and until his recent New York coup he appeared to be rapidly growing in popularity, but now fears are expressed by those friendly to him that he has gone too far in so openly showing his hand as the manipulator of the democratic machine in that State. No one can deny that he is one of the shrewdest political wire pullers that this country has produced, but that very fact may prevent securing the nomination of his party, as has often been the case with wire-pullers of the past.

Evidently the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations think the present Chinese laws sufficient for all practical purposes, as it has reported adversely all of the bills introduced providing new and more stringent laws, and presented a substitute in the shape of a bill to continue the present anti-Chinese laws for a period of ten years.

Senator Kyle made his debut as a Senatorial orator in a set speech in favor of his joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution giving Congress authority to enact uniform marriage and divorce laws for the whole country.

The Farmers' Alliance members of Congress are wielding considerable influence in that body. They have, aided by a rapidly growing public sentiment in favor of the change, caused the House committee on the Election of President and Vice President to decide to report favorably a bill for a Constitutional amendment providing for the election of Senators by popular vote, but their greatest triumph, in which they were ably aided by the influence of all of the labor organizations, was to compel Representative Oates of Alabama, chairman of the sub-committee of the Judiciary committee which recently adversely reported Representative Watson's resolution for investigation of the Pinkerton Detective Agencies, to ask the full committee to recommit the resolution to the sub-committee for further consideration as to the jurisdiction of Congress.

Lobbyists representing the great corporations of the country here are much exercised over the decision of the House Judiciary committee to favorably report the bill which makes a corporation a citizen of the State in which it carries on business, for all judicial purposes.

The House having adopted an amendment to the rules compelling the several committees to report all of the appropriation bills within eighty days after the announcement of the committees at the long session, and within forty days after the opening of the short session, the committees will have to do some lively hustling to comply therewith, as they have hardly begun work on any of them yet, and the time within which they should be reported will expire on the 12th of March.

So many democratic members of Congress refused to be bound by the decision of the caucus which was to have been held to-night on the silver question, that the caucus was given up, and with it the idea of making the free coinage of silver a party question was abandoned, for the present, at any rate. As announced some time ago the House Coinage committee will next week authorize a free coinage bill to be favorably reported to the House. Next week the Senate Finance committee will also act on Senator Stewart's free coinage bill, and the action will probably be unfavorable.

The democrats of the House have at last succeeded in getting their code of rules adopted, after the debate which seemed to be aimlessly stretched out had become so tiresome to the members that most of them kept off the floor to escape it. The question now is, what next? And nobody seems to be in a position to make an authoritative answer.

AN AMERICAN MOTHER.

What She Thinks of McKinleyism—Her Experiences in Buying Goods For Her Children at McKinley Prices.

It is a soothing fiction which protection papers are trying to circulate that the McKinley law has not increased prices, but a fiction all the same. Women who go to buy woolen dress goods for themselves and their children this winter know that prices are higher than they were before duties were raised.

A woman writes to the New York World giving some of her experiences in buying such goods, and some sharp comments on the iniquity of McKinleyism.

She says: "I am a busy mother, and I am shut in my room with grip. I have spoken disrespectfully of it—did not believe in it. Now it has me in its grip and I could cry. One other thing this winter I did not believe, have found true, and have cried over—the cruelty of the tax on woolens to little children. I look to American men to stop this tax, which is, I say, the most monstrous iniquity done in our land since the days of our acquaintance with King George III. But the stupid arrogance of his taxation was more endurable than the fraudulent sham of our fellow-citizens. Where is the spirit of the men who threw over the tea into Boston harbor? How I should like to see Mr. McKinley there! But this is irrelevant and he is governor of Ohio, and, of course, it was not the money of any tariff beneficiaries that helped him there! King George III., stupid and bigoted as he was, would never have legislated against the health of growing children—the men to be. Good woolens are necessary as good milk to children, and he who dilutes their milk is no worse than he who taxes their flannels.

"I have lost no child yet, and I believe I owe it, under God, greatly to their good woolen clothing. I have let silks and velvets go, even my bonnets may go, but my little ones have always had a full supply of good all-wool clothing, from head to foot, "from the skin out," of different weights, as the weather changes.

"Now our best houses offer me an inferior German stocking at the price I have paid for English merino. There is an Australian wool in the market, heavy and coarse—all kinds of inferior substitutes. The beautiful, soft, heavy French flannel I have made my little girls' dresses of for years is taxed out of the market. It is now made nearly as light as cashmere, being taxed by weight, Arnold's salesman told me, and he sold me a coarse German flannel at the old price of the French. I looked for Shaker skirting flannel at remnant counters. The kind I wanted was dear 'because there is a great deal of wool in it.' Domestic flannels are dearer; perhaps it is because the price can be raised.

"Now, I ask what will be used by those who formerly bought German and domestic woolens cheaply?

"Will their children wear a mixture of cotton and wool, mostly cotton, or shoddy or all cotton? Ask Mr. McKinley. I cannot believe he understood what he was doing. Woolens may be less necessary inland, and men do not know it all about children and flannels, but there will be more croup, diphtheria and bronchitis, more half clothed and stunted children. How dare they make this infamous thing a law?

"But I have faith in my country yet! Our people are very patient and law-abiding, but when the wrong is understood I believe there is a power in our land to rise against it, by whatever party it is done. I am told there are republicans opposed to this measure of the men who lead them by the nose. I am reminded of Dean Swift's remark when some one said: 'The air in Ireland is very excellent and healthy.' 'For Heaven's sake,' said Swift, 'don't say so in England; for if you do they will certainly tax it.'

"AN AMERICAN MOTHER."

THE TARIFF ON LEAD ORE.

Effect of the Duty On Lead Ore—Building Up the Lead Industry of Mexico at the Expense of That of the United States.

At the demand of the lead miners of Colorado and Montana, the last congress imposed a duty of 1½ cents per pound on the lead content of imported ores. Under the tariff of 1883 lead ores containing silver were free of duty. The mass of our imports of these ores come from Mexico, being shipped thence to Kansas, Missouri, Illinois and other states having large smelting works, where they are smelted with the silver lead ores of the United States. The mixture of these ores in the smelter reduces the cost of production to a considerable extent. The lead ore miners of Colorado believed that if a duty were imposed on Mexican ores the price of their own lead would rise. They cared little for the injury which such a course would have on the smelters and mines of silver-lead ores here.

The duty has been in force a year and its effects can, therefore, be shown. The production of lead in the states, the mines of which secured the duty of 1½ cents per pound on lead ore, in 1890 and 1891, has been as follows:

	Production. 1890.	1891.
	Tons.	Tons.
Arizona and California	1,000	1,000
Colorado	60,000	64,000
Idaho and Montana	24,000	25,000
Nevada	2,500	2,500
Utah	24,000	25,000
Total	111,500	117,500

An increase of only 6,000 tons.

The producers and smelters of lead in Missouri, Kansas, Illinois and Wisconsin, who use the imported ores as a flux in the smelting of our own more refractory silver-lead ores, opposed the duty, declaring that it would greatly injure their business. The production of lead in these states in 1891 as compared with 1890 was as follows:

	1890—Tons.	1891—Tons.
Lead produced	55,000	40,000

A falling off of 15,000 tons, making the net decrease in the production in the states enumerated in 1891, 9,000 ton.

How this was brought about is shown by Mr. R. P. Rothwell, of the Engineering and Mining Journal, in his annual review of the lead industry. Says Mr. Rothwell:

"For a short time indeed, toward the end of 1890, the price of lead was advanced by the McKinley bill, and the smelting charges on dry silver ores were also increased quite heavily, owing to a temporary scarcity of lead fluxing ores, but a more liberal interpretation of the bill of the treasury department again allowed the Mexican ore to enter. The price of lead thenceforward declined (though smelting charges did not), and as a final outcome it must be apparent to every one, from a study of these statistics, that the McKinley bill has been an injury rather than a benefit to the lead, and especially to the silver miners of the west.

"This result must set some of the intelligent miners to thinking who profited when they were injured, or at least not benefited, by the legislation which they were told would prove so greatly to their advantage. But had Mexican lead ores continued to come in free, what would have been the result? Undoubtedly the smelting of the Mexican ores would have been done in this country, to the obvious advantage of our metallurgical industry, instead of in works built with American capital in Mexico.

"Lead might have ruled lower in price had a very large amount of ore come in from abroad, but this would have greatly stimulated consumption, and would have kept down smelting charges on dry ores, the mining of which gives occupation to more men than does the mining of lead ores."

Turning from the injurious effects of the duty on the production and smelting of silver lead ores in the United States to the effect on the production of lead in Mexico, Mr. Rothwell says:

"Previous to 1890, only a few unimportant smelting works existed in Mexico, the product of which was very small, but when the American market was closed to the Mexican miners, who could not afford to pay the heavy freight charges to Europe on the low grade ores, nothing was left for them to do but to establish a smelting industry of their own. The opportunity was promptly seized, not only by them but also by the larger American smelters, who found themselves deprived of a proportion of their supplies; they, too, went over to Mexico and started up smelting works, which are now partially in operation, and will be entirely so this year.

"At present the production of lead bullion in Mexico goes on at the rate of about 1,200 tons per month, but very shortly this will be increased to about 2,500 tons, and may by the end of this year amount to 3,000 tons. If this latter figure is reached it will mean that Mexico will thus produce about one-sixth as much as the United States, and there can be no doubt that most of this bullion would have been produced here had not the law been altered in a most deplorably narrow-minded spirit."

Since the duty of 1½ cents per pound on the lead content of imported ores benefits no one in the United States, but positively injures the other lead producers and smelters, why should it not be repealed?

FALSE PROMISES.

An Illustration of What It Is to Promise and Not Perform.

"Now what we want to do is to go on and prosper."—Major McKinley at the banquet of the American Protective Tariff League, New York, April 29, 1891.

"Business failures in the United States in 1891 numbered 12,394, or 16 per cent. more than in 1890."—Bradstreet's, January 2, 1892.

It is never pretended by tariff reformers that the adoption of a tariff for revenue only will usher in a political millennium or of itself bring steady and universal business prosperity. All they claim is that it would lighten the burdens of taxation, make a fairer distribution of those burdens, release from taxation the materials of industry, and thereby increase the wages of labor and the opportunities of employment, and that it would stimulate commerce, home and foreign, thus opening, as well in our own as in foreign countries, larger markets for the products of labor and especially for the disposition of that surplus that to-day finds but a precarious and not always a paying demand.

Scarcely less important is it to dissolve the partnership between the moneyed power of the country and the government, with all the demoralization in politics and business that inevitably grows out of it. These reforms accomplished, we have thrown open to all our people the fairest field for industry, thrift and enterprise yet offered in human history, where every individual can feel that he will enjoy for himself the fruits of his own labor and prudence, and that his success in business life will be as nearly commensurate as human laws can make it with what he really deserves.

But no laws can guarantee a country or its individual inhabitants against the manifold evils that flow from their own errors and ignorance, or from forces that occasionally impair their prosperity, without being under the control or within the range of their own foresight.

Not so with protection. It never hesitates to promise all the material or other blessings that men are eager to secure, and especially to secure them without paying the price for them, by mere operation of statutory laws. We are always just fled in putting their promises and performances side by side, and Maj McKinley furnishes us many opportunities for doing this. Here is another:

"I beg to say in passing that the rates given on wool and woolens are assuredly protective. They will help every farmer in the country who owns sheep, and will enable manufacturers of woolen goods to better compete with their foreign rivals."—His speech in the house September 27, 1890, on the conference report upon this bill.

"Manufacturers are not buying heavily unless large concessions are made in their favor. The year closed with prices on a much lower basis than in 1890."—Bradstreet's, January 2, 1892, on Wool.—W. L. W., in St. Louis Republic.

And so all over the world to-day you will find distress arising from this cause, says Mr. George. It is for you to say whether he is right or not. He asks us to come out west and he will show us a place where there are 40,000 acres of land, bought from the government a while ago for little or nothing, owned by a Boston man. He has never been on the land. For years it remained there, without an improvement of any kind. Villages grew all around it, which was what we was waiting for. Through his influence the railroad built a depot upon the land, so that the people from all these towns around there were obliged to cart their produce over this 40,000 acres of waste to reach the depot. The consequence is that that land is worth to-day $100 an acre. It was bought for $1.35 an acre. What made that land worth so much? Why, every one of those settlers, who have settled all around that 40,000 acres, and carted their grain through it, by the mere fact of settling there and of cultivating the land have added almost $100 to the value of every acre. Ought not they to have some part in that $100 that they have earned? The owner of the land did not do a thing, never paid a cent of taxes on it. In Brooklyn there is a lot of land which twenty years ago was offered, with the buildings upon it, for $30,000. Five years ago it was sold—and the buildings upon it were counted of no value—for $135,000. What made it worth $135,000 instead of $30,000? Every man who lives in Brooklyn, and has come here and increased the size and importance of this city by the fact of his coming here, has helped to make that value and has not got a cent for it. Land grows in value by the massing of people in great cities; and if to-day every man, woman and child should leave Brooklyn, that lot of land would be worth about at the rate of $5 an acre, if there were no buildings on it; but having buildings upon it, I suppose it would be worth nothing, because no produce could be grown upon it. You see that, according to Mr. George, there are two forms of common property. One is property which God has given to all His children, and the second is that which has been made of value by the aggregation of large numbers of people in one center. Mr. George says there is no way to solve the difficulties in our day; there is no way to take off these oppressions which rest upon the poor and which rest upon industry, except by the commonalty again assuming the natural property in land. How is it to be done? What about the vested interests? Mr. George replies that the same arguments applies to vested interests in land as was applied to vested interests in negro slave property. Did the American people respect vested interests in negroes? The characteristics of Mr. George as a Christian man are shown in the method which he proposes in order to reach this end without violence. Here is the novel part of his theory. Here is that which is purely original with Mr. George: The community is to resume its right by simply gathering its public revenue from this natural value, and from the value which is acquired by the aggregation of people in great centers of trade and production. No tax is to be laid upon the buildings that are on the land. If a man puts up a beautiful house, which is an honor to us, and, if, perchance we receive a visit from a distant friend, and we want to show him what has been done in our city, we show him what a beautiful house has been built. Then why should we immediately go and tax the builder ten or a hundred times as much as the man who has built a miserable hovel in the neighborhood, which we would like to be rid of? Mr. George holds that when a man wants a piece of land exclusively for his own benefit, he should pay something to the general community, and that is where public revenue should be derived. And it is easy enough for us to see that that is the direction in which the world is going. In olden times it was customary to tax incomes. The American people do not like it, because of its inquisitorial nature. We used to tax personal property. But this tax has become in the eyes of the American people a miserable, meddling thing. It is not a practicable thing to collect taxes upon personal property to any great extent. The leaders in this movement are seeking to change the laws of the state so that in different sections they shall have the right to assess land in this way. That is a good movement; that is in accordance with the current ideas of the time I verily believe that the movement here marked out by Mr. George is to be a movement along which American life is to proceed, and along which in some respects English life has proceeded, even further than we have here, and in Australia still further, and in Paris they are almost ready for it. Let me read a law which was recently passed in New Zealand—which is a far more important place than we are accustomed to think. It has about half a million of English speaking people and a large number of the natives are working harmoniously in the government. This is the law: "Every person and company, being the owner of land, shall be liable to a tax in accordance with this act, and such tax shall be assessed and levied upon the actual value of such land; but the value of improvements upon all land owned by any person or company up to £3,000 (that is the place where they have run off the track) shall be deducted from such assessed value, and mortgage then due or owing upon such land shall also be deducted from such value." In bringing the act before the legislature of that country for adoption, it was most powerfully supported by the prime minister of the country, and in answer to the question which was put to him whether this would not cause the cutting up of the large estates by saying that that was one of the aims which they had in mind; in fact, that since this movement has been started and such an act was in prospect and likely to pass, a great many of the large estates had been already cut up, so that there were in some cases forty or fifty owners where a year before there had been but one—large estates which were being held for speculative purposes. When they had seen this act coming and the large tax which was to be put upon their holdings, the holdings had been cut up to the benefit of the community. And when the prime minister was asked if this was the case would it not be the end of the purchase by large capitalists in England of great tracts of land in New Zealand, to be held for increase in value, he said that if such was to be the result he devoutly hoped the measure would immediately pass, for whether the capitalists bought the New Zealand land or not would not alter the fact that the large tracts of land would still be there for the use of real settlers who should come into the country. Now you can see that our government has been making progress in this same direction with an eye to the future prosperity of the country. It has sought to sell land in sections only to actual settlers. That is exactly the object sought in this New Zealand law. It aims to carry out what seems to be a true principle of righteousness as well as a true principle of political economy. For, after all, what is political economy except the right relation of men to one another? Political economy, as John Ruskin says, is nothing more nor less than applied religion. And therefore, as I have said, in all parts of the world the movement is going steadily along the line which has been marked out here.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Why is Not Valuable Land Used?

J. H. Root, of State College, Pa., has been puzzled by a question asked him in substantially the same form by two radically different skeptics. One questioner is an outright free trader, free silver coinage man, and prohibitionist, who appreciates the injustice of existing social conditions; the other is perfectly satisfied with things as they are, believing that any man who really wants to work can find profitable work to do. This is the question: How can it be said that valuable land is withheld from use, when there is no landlord trust to arbitrarily corner it, and every landlord naturally seeks to obtain a profit from his land? If landlords can not get the rent they ask, why do they not take, for the present, what they can get, as owers of commodities generally are forced to do, and thus enjoy some income while awaiting an opportunity to get more.

A great deal of land is held wholly out of use. It is this alone that the questioners have in mind; but this is not the worst form of land pre-emption. Owners of absolutely vacant land would rent it for something if they could; and when they can they do. Thus, in the suburbs of cities, valuable building sites are rented for market gardens from season to season at low rentals; but they are withheld from use as building sites, because the owners will not give the security of tenure necessary to encourage building, without a price or rental that exceeds the present non-speculative value of the land. And this illustrates the kind of pre-emption that is most detrimental to society, and which these questioners have not in their minds at all—partial withholding from use. Building sites are used for market gardens; sites for large business buildings like the United Bank building, at the north-east corner of Wall street and Broadway, are used for old ramshackle structures, like that at the south-east corner of the same streets. Well cultivated farms have acre after acre of land attached to them that are only partially cultivated; and so on, and so on. This condition deprives capital of opportunities for investment and men of opportunities for labor in constructing buildings, for example, and it restricts opportunities for carrying on business in the possible structures.

Some of Henry Ware Allen's Work.

Mr. Allen has succeeded in creating considerable local interest in the Henry George "single tax" system. In an interview with a "Two Republics" reporter, which appeared in the issue of the paper on the 23d of July, Mr. Allen gave at some length the main arguments on which the theory is based. Later he contributed an article to the Mexican Financier on the same subject. This aroused criticism on the part of El Universal, which, in a lengthy article, combatted the theory. Two replies soon afterward appeared, one by Mr. Allen himself, and one by a single taxer, who used the non-de-plume of "A. Z." El Universal thereupon recurred to the attack in a lengthy article, to which a long reply was inserted in that paper in the form of an article signed by Mr. E. Van de Velde, followed by comments by the editors. Later on another article appeared in El Universal attacking the theory, and there the matter stands at present. Mr. Allen has certainly succeeded in raising great interest in the question which he so ably and earnestly advocates. He says that the position taken by El Universal is based on a misconception. That paper will have it that Mr. George is a socialist, whereas, says Mr. Allen, the very opposite is the fact. Mr. Allen declares himself very much surprised, as well as pleased at finding a considerable number of single taxers here.—Two Republics of Mexico.

THE time when two employers will be seeking for one workman will be when the opportunities for acquiring wealth are equally free to all. No man will work for another at low wages when he can earn more by working alone or in co-operation. The single tax will get us there.—Justice.

THE CRUEL FLAMES.

Many Lives Lost in a Hotel Fire in New York.

Belief That the Death List May Reach 100.—Five Bodies Already Recovered.—Thrilling Stories of Narrow Escapes.

HEMMED IN BY FIRE.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—The Hotel Royal, that well-known landmark which has stood for more than a quarter of a century at the southeast corner of Sixth avenue and Fortieth street, was burned to the ground early Sunday morning and a large number of people were burned, suffocated and crushed in the ruins. At the time of the disaster there were nearly 150 guests in the house. The hotel employes, all told, number fifty-five. Of this number of people five have thus far been found dead, six are in the hospital and sixty-three have been reported alive.

It is feared that a search of the vast, smoking pile of debris in the cellar of the hotel will reveal many ghastly finds. It was reported at a late hour that no less than 100 people were still unaccounted for. Soon after the fire broke out ambulances arrived from the various hospitals. Many physicians whose residences are in the neighborhood were quickly on the scene and did all they could to relieve the injured.

The scenes at the fire before the fire companies arrived were heartrending. One man whose name is not known sprang from a third-story window and was dashed to death on the ground below. This was on the Sixth avenue side of the building. A moment later another man leaped from a window on the Fortieth street side and was instantly killed. Shortly afterward two women jumped from windows on the Sixth avenue side and were dead when picked up. The bodies were taken to the Thirtieth street station house, and afterward, unidentified, removed to the morgue.

Mr. Frederick Uhlmann, the dealer in hops, has been a guest at the Hotel Royal for years and lived with his brother Simon and mother. The latter went to their country residence at Lakewood, N. J., Saturday. Mr. Uhlmann escaped with only an overcoat to cover his nakedness. Mr. Uhlmann lost everything in his room, including $12,000 in cash. Several checks and notes and other valuable business documents were lost.

When the walls fell people were seen at several windows on the top floor crying for help, but they fell back and were soon buried in the ruins. The flames of the burning building illumined the sky for miles around and drew to the scene—which during the entire day was an object of curiosity—an immense throng of people.

The loss on the hotel property is estimated at $250,000. The building was owned by Hyman Israel, furniture dealer on the Bowery. The Hotel Royal was built more than twenty-five years ago. It was formerly kept by Messrs. Peris & Butler, but Mr. Meares leased it thirteen years ago. In 1882 the building was remodeled and an addition was made on the south side. The house was the home of many persons in the theatrical profession and was patronized chiefly by transients for a night.

Killed His Aged Wife.

CHICAGO, Feb. 6.—Patrick Hurst, a laborer living at 118 Townsend street, killed his wife Friday afternoon. It was a literal butchery, the woman being stabbed thirty-eight times with a 6-inch blade bowie knife. The murderer and the victim were each about 65 years old and had been married forty years. They had frequent quarrels, and Hurst had often threatened to kill her. He gave himself up to the police, saying that he took his wife's life because she would not take care of him when he grew older.

Man and Wife Crushed to Death.

GURDON, Ark., Feb. 8.—Frank Tyler, a well-to-do farmer, and his wife were crushed to death while attempting to repair an out-building. With the aid of his wife Mr. Tyler tried to prop up the building, when it collapsed. Almost every bone in their bodies was broken.

Three Were Killed.

LARRABEE, Mo., Feb. 8.—The fast express on the Chicago & Alton road collided with a freight train near here, and Engineer Ellington and Firemen Keller and Hinderman were killed and several persons were badly injured. A misplaced switch caused the disaster.

GOOD COUNTY ROADS.

AN ABLE PAPER READ AT THE RECENT FARMERS' INSTITUTE BY HON. JOHN D. SHULL.

The Immense Advantages to Both Farmers and Business Men of Good Highways—Some Practical Suggestions.

The public highways of a country are its arteries, along which course the vital currents of its industrial and material welfare. They are important in proportion to their general use as ways and means of intercommunication, transportation, and travel. Like most public, or private luxuries, they are expensive, but are worth all they cost, for without them our business relations could not be maintained, nor could our present population subsist. Their expense consists in the value of the land occupied thereby, the cost of original construction, and greatest of all, the burden of keeping them in repair. Like almost everthing else, the poorest ones are the most expensive in the end, and are endured sometimes because the community does not fully realize their cost, but more frequently because the public treasury, like the private purse, does not seem to warrant the procurement of many things that would be desirable.

In consequence of the advent of steamboats and railroads, the science of constructing good wagon roads has not advanced as it otherwise would have done, because the relative importance of a country highway is not as great as it was a century since. Two thousand year ago Rome in her greatness gave perhaps more attention to the road question, than was ever done before, or has been since. No better roads than hers have ever been known. They were as far as possible made straight, they were level, smooth, and wide, and cost enormously in money and labor. To the present time, many of them have continued in a fair state of preservation. They were doubtless the most useful as well as the most durable of all Rome's public works. Perhaps the most celebrated of these was the Appian Way, built 313 years before the beginning of the christian era. It was constructed of large hexagonal blocks of the most durable stone joined together with such exactness as to form a solid mass. The cost was so great that it exhausted the public treasury; and it was said to be in perfect repair for more than 700 years after its first construction.

In great Britain, nearly a century ago, John Loudon McAdam commenced the making of roads, after a plan which proved to be far in advance of any system then in use. In describing his method he said: "Let the road bed be the reverse of a ditch; that is, raised above instead of sunk below the level. This may be accomplished sometimes by ditching, at other times by banking, and not infrequently both may be necessary. Having disposed of the water underneath the next problem is to avoid damage from rain fall. This may be accomplished by using broken stone, none of which shall be more than two inches thick in diameter, and carefully laying them so that they will unite by their own angles into a compact body. From this all earth, clay, chalk, or other matter that will hold water must be carefully excluded. This layer of stone should be from 7 to 10 inches in thickness. The surface should be nearly level, and the slope from center to sides not more than 1 inch in 5 feet." This system so gained in public favor that within four years 700 miles were built, and before the death of the inventor, out of the 25,000 miles of public roads in the kingdom, nearly seven tenths were macadamized. The discovery that angular fragments of hard stone, reduced to proper size, could be made to form a compact mass, and become almost impervious to water has been of incalculable benefit to improved road making.

At about the same time, Thomas Telford; a Scottish engineer was experimenting with and constructing some improved roads which are claimed by many to be the best in England. The principal difference between the Telford and the McAdam road, is a foundation, or sub-pavement of stone blocks. Concerning this Telford says:

"Place upon the prepared road-bed a bottom layer of stones, to be set by hand so as to form a close, firm pavement. For a thirty-foot roadway, those set in the middle must be seven inches in depth; those nine feet from the center five inches; those twelve feet from center, three inches. These stones must be set on their broadest edges, lengthwise across the road, and the breadth of the upper edge shall not exceed four inches. Irregularities of the upper surface must be hammered off and all interstices filled in with some chips, placed by hand, and sent home with a hammer. This leaves the foundation with a convexity of four inches from center to sides. This pavement is next covered with stone, broken into pieces whose edges shall not exceed two and one-half inches across, and be applied so as to make the convexity of the road six inches. Over all this place a covering of good clean gravel one and half inches in depth."

In the United States early in this century the question of good roads claimed the attention of congress, and the several state legislatures. Under the fostering care of government several roads were commenced, and some bro't to a successful completion. Noteworthy among these was the national road starting at Cumberland, Maryland, and running direct to Wheeling, Va., and from thence across the states of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois to the Mississippi river. The original bill authorizing its construction, was signed by Thomas Jefferson in 1806, and the first contracts were let the same year. It had a standing committee in congress, and received annual appropriations from the national government. It became a bone of contention in party politics, was incidentally drawn into the notable discussion between Webster and Hayne, in the U. S. Senate, in January, 1830, and was finally buried beneath the doctrine of states rights. Prior to Jackson's administration there had been two and a half million dollars appropriated for the road, under acts approved by Jefferson, and each of his successors. But Jackson vetoed a bill for extending it from its western terminus to the gulf of Mexico; and another for its extension from Cumberland, eastward to the tide-water. In spite of these vetoes, and the fact that the era of competition by railroad and canal was at hand, the national road was yet to see its greatest prosperity. After the B. & O. railroad reached Cumberland, the national road from thence westward became the main thoroughfare between the east and west and almost endless processions of picturesque canvass-covered, broad-tired conestoga wagons, were constantly in sight. In course of time the road was surrendered to the several states it traversed; but not until the nation had spent on its construction six million dollars. After a while the state control was surrendered to the counties, and now though kept in good condition, it is used only for local travel.

These several roads were much better than any of the country roads in Michigan to-day, but it is worthy of note that they were built under the fostering care of the government.

But as the sum total of a nation's greatness does not now, as formerly, so much depend upon good wagon roads; and as Michigan swamp lands which have been appropriated to aid in building roads are exhausted, it seems difficult to procure assistance from the state. In some places the counties are aiding in the construction of the thoroughfares, and it does seem to me that the county can properly do so. But here comes the difficulty of agreeing as to which are the principal ones. Each community and every individual has a road that is of first importance to it, or him.

Telford and McAdam roads, or modifications thereof, have been adopted to some extent in many sections of the United States where suitable stone abounds. On account of their cost I do not know that it would be practicable for us to have them, but I believe it would be, on our main thoroughfares. I am informed that a great many miles of good stone roads are being constructed in Bay and Saginaw counties, the material for which has to be transported greater distances than it would be necessary for us to go for the same. Whether especially low freight rates are granted them by the railroads I do not know, but so interdependent is the prosperity of city and country, and that of the railroads upon both the latter, that in some sections of Illinois, where the towns engaged in systematic improvement of the highways some of the railroads agreed to draw gravel for road purposes free of charge, the town authorities paying only for loading and unloading.

In some sections of this and many other states there are stone, plank and gravel roads constructed under charters which require certain conditions, and grant various privileges. On these a specified rate of toll is charged, but there is general complaint that whilst the toll is regularly collected, the service is otherwise poor and the roads not much better than the common highways. In consequence of this, and perhaps for other reasons, the system has lost instead of gained in favor. In securing a good road very much depends upon the nature of the soil where it is to be built. Where gravel naturally prevails, with attendent natural underdrainage, the problem is not a difficult one, it being only necessary to keep the road well turnpiked, which can readily be done with scrapers, thus banking the road bed and excavating the side ditches at the same time. But in clay, alluvial, or muck soils, without natural drainage, it becomes a difficult matter to keep on top more than half the time, unless artificial drainage is resorted to, which reminds me of an incident that seems to fit in at this place. A gentleman from New England who visited here a dozen or more years ago, upon being asked if he had been around the county any, laughingly replied that he had been all OVER Lenawee county, and UNDER a good portion of Ogden and Riga. * * But in so far as Ogden and Riga are concerned, the same commendable, progressive intelligence and industry that has governed the people there in draining and improving their farms, has been so successfuly applied to the road problem that we now find the highways there much better than are many in other townships, where the same natural obstacles were not encountered.

And now, having wandered all over the world, from ancient Rome to modern Riga, in search of solid, rock-bottomed roads, let us proceed to seriously consider the mud-bound conditions with which the people of Lenawee county are annually confronted. As a topic for public or private discussion, the roads and the weather are ever fruitful, especially during the dull winter season, when with unfailing regularity, we each year have the worst weather and the very worst roads that ever were known. We are sometimes charged with boastfulness in regard to many things, but this does not apply to the freely expressed opinion concerning our highways. We admit the importance of good roads, yet in and out of season we publicly pronounce faulty, and condemn the system governing their construction. We declare them expensive, and admit that to a great extent this expense is unnecessary, and largely due to the fact that the work done one year is so imperfect as to be of no account the next year. We acknowledge that a farm located near a good road is worth a great many more dollars than an equally good one on a poor road. We know that the difference in value between a farm two miles from the county town, and one ten miles away, both being equally improved and fertile, is due to the difference in the time consumed in getting to and from the city. We also know that this time could be lessened almost half by having the best kind of roads to travel over. If the farm ten miles out is worth thirty or forty per cent less than one two miles out you can reduce the difference to fifteen or twenty per cent by making the roads good. If you could deliver twice as large a load of produce, and at the same time make a speedier trip the cost of delivery would be correspondingly decreased. All these things are worthy of more consideration than we give them, especially when we remember that the wagon road is essentially the farmers' road, and that it is frequently mud-bound for months at the very season when he expects to do the bulk of his team work. It not infrequently happens that when the top of the market is reached, or when there is the least other work to do, then the mud road asserts itself, axle deep. It becomes a practical embargo, prohibiting traffic at the time when most demanded, and yet the principal loss or expense remains untold. I believe that the unnecessary wear and tear of vehicles, harness and horseflesh, and cost of keeping teams that are idle on account of poor roads during a series of ten years, amounts to more than would be the first cost of a stone road that could be kept good for all time, with less annual expense than is now put upon our common dirt turnpikes. From these several causes there will accrue a loss of at least 50 per cent. Now, as farming is not an occupation wherein profits are figured at any such rate, farmers cannot afford and ought not to allow such precentages of loss when a remedy is within their grasp. But the question remains: "How are we to improve our main thoroughfares if plank roads are obsolete, toll roads undesirable, and state or county aid in building stone roads unattainable? There yet remains a forlorn hope, a way that may be measurably successful if systematically attempted. Let the progressive and forceful men along these lines apply the same intelligent energetic conduct in regard to road affairs that they do in the management of their own. Have a committee wait upon every tax-payer in the district and prayerfully entreat of him to agree to do double the amount of his road work for one year. I know of instances where this has been done. If at all successful, then let the committee visit the business men in the city who are benefited by having country people come greater distances to trade, and point out to them the mutual advantage that would accrue to both city and country if travel was expedited, and solicit a cash subscription from them. I have likewise known instances in which the town's people contributed money equal to the extra work donated by the farmers. If the plan succeeds thus far, then allow the soliciting committee to determine where this work and money should be applied. By concerted action have a practical road maker elected pathmaster, and then proceed to construct a thoroughly good road for a distance commensurate with your resources. Before commencing the work it might be well to see whether the line cannot be shortened in places at less expense than it would cost to construct a thoroughly good road way along the greater distance caused by the zig-zag angles of section lines. The route fixed, the next thing to do is to provide efficient drainage. Sometimes open ditches may serve the purpose, but in most places the water cannot be properly removed without drains, which are permanently cheaper, and are more sightly and more efficient than open ditches. One good tile drain running lengthwise under the center of the track will effect wonders; but many persons advocate the use of smaller tiles on each side of the road. In either case good outlets must be provided for them at all points where the water can be diverted from the line of the road. This accomplished, next prepare the roadbed.

In constructing a new road where the surface is alluvial soil or muck, beneath which no great depth is a firmer formation, it will pay to scrape the top away into the adjoining fields, then turnpike well up so that your road will be a high way in fact as well as in name. Lastly apply eight or ten inches of broken stone of good clean gravel, and you have a road ready for business. If gravel is used it will do better service if applied at intervals during the season, in layers of three or four inches at a time, than if all put on at once. If this plan is once commenced the result will be so satisfactory that it will be continued from year to year, until the entire road is in good shape. Not only this, but the example will be contagious and the plan adopted in other districts. Even when subscriptions of extra work and money cannot be obtained, it would be economy to follow the plan of thorough construction. Better have half a mile of good road than twice that length only half built. Having thoroughly constructed one piece of road one year, the next year's work can be devoted to a similar section, either contiguous to that first built, or if more needed, at some other place. But all this should be prearranged with intelligence, so that eventually all these places will be connected. When a really good gravel or stone road is once secured, it does not require very much labor to keep it in repair, if proper vigilance is manifested, but the "stitch in time" maxim is very pertinent here. The road should be looked after frequently, so that little imperfections can be remedied before they become great ones. By the timely filling of a rut, serious damage may often be averted, and by remedying the incipient undermining of a culvert, serious washouts may be prevented. Very frequently a wheelbarrow load of gravel or broken stone, used at the right time, will save the need of wagon loads a week or two later. To facilitate such repairs it might be well to have a few wagon loads of good gravel or broken stone stored at certain convenient points along the road. If any large stones work to the surface of the road they should be speedily removed, and instead of being indiscriminately strewn along the gutters, they should be collected, broken fine, and thus made available for repairs.

A word more concerning work in general and I am done. Dirt roads can never be quite satisfactory, but if thoroughly drained and intelligently made and repaired at the proper time, using always the best soil available, they can be much better than they usually are. Roads, like fields are often ruined for a year's time by breaking them up when they are too wet. The proper time to commence work is just so early in the spring as the soil is properly settled, and before it becomes dry and hard. At that time the road machines or scrapers should be used to fill in all ruts or inequalities of the surface, and they should be kept going until this is properly accomplished, and this roadbed left slightly rounded toward the center. Only half the labor will be required to do this well now, that would be necessary to do it indifferently later in the season. When gravel is used in places, it had better be applied in layers, each to be well trodden down before the other is placed. Before winter sets in, ruts should be attended to and culverts put in order. Mud holes should always receive prompt attention, but not filled with gutter-wash, sods or stone larger than two inches in diameter. Broken stone, gravel or earth approaching it as near as may be in solidity, should be used for this purpose. Altogether too much of the road work is done hurriedly, and at one time usually—just after corn planting when farm work is crowding rapidly on. But I must admit that it is difficult to find a time when there is not plenty of farm work in sight. Some of the road work, however, could more easily be done earlier, and part of it could be done better little later than it now is. The work is often done under the direction of men ignorant or indifferent to the first principles of road making, and without tools. A move in advance has been made, however, by the increased use of good road machines in most townships. With a good machine properly handled, two or four men with an equal number of horses can do many times the amount of work that could be accomplished by the same force in the same time with ordinary farm tools. But in my opinion the root of the evil in regard to road work could best be touched by a change in our road law. I believe we would have better roads if the tax was paid in money, and the work done on contract. Bids should be received, and whilst the price should somewhat govern, the contract should be let only to a responsible man, with a good knowledge of road building. He should give a bond for the faithful performance of his duties, which would introduce into the system an element of responsibility now so notably lacking. It might be stipulated that he should be a citizen of the district, and that he should employ only those therein. It would thereby not take away employment, for work would be done and somebody would have it to do. Nor would it necessarily work a hardship to those who desired to work out their taxes, for they doubtless would be employed if they would perform as efficient service as any one else. It would, however, abolish the habit so prevalent in some districts (never our own), of "loafing" out the road tax, for the contractor would undoubtedly insist on better service than does the average pathmaster, working in conjunction with his neighbors who frequently elect him, not on account of what he will do, but rather for what he will not do. It would be for the contractor's interest to get a good day's work, and by paying cash for it, he could readily do so. At the same time every property owner would become a jealous inspector, anxious to see that the contractor did the work fully as well as required in the specifications. I hope to live to see the day when at the intersection of diverging roads, one need not in fanciful imagination picture a placard inscribed: "Whichever road you take, you will wish you had taken the other one."

The Geometry class have begun the final exercises in plane geometry, and will soon begin the review preparatory for an examination of the same.

The preparations for the Washington birth-day exercises are being arranged by all departments. In the High school the exercises will take the place of the Lyceum. The seventh and eighth grades will unite in their exercises, also the fifth and sixth grades in the East branch and the two rooms in the West branch school, the North branch exercises being held alone. All exercises will be held on Friday afternoon Feb 19. A penny collection will be taken to assist in raising funds for the Michigan educational exhibit at the World's fair, as the legislature failed to make the necessary appropriation. Visitors will receive a hearty welcome at any of the exercises.

The earnest song and praise meetings during the last six weeks at the M. E. Church will close on Sunday evening. Over fifty souls, old, middle aged and children have acknowledged their love for Jesus, and they are the happiest people in Tecumseh. Mrs. Smith, of Columbus, Ohio, has assisted Rev. Perrin the last two weeks, and a more earnest working evangelist never struck our poor, old, free and easy, go-as-you-please town. While there are some who will rejoice in her departure, there are many true souls who will never forget the earnest aid she gave the M. E. Pastor. She woke up over 100 souls at Ridgeway and had reason to do the same here. Will she find faith in Tecumseh should she come again?

A LITTLE GIRL'S EXPERIENCE IN A LIGHTHOUSE.

Mr. and Mrs. Loren Trescott are keepers of the Gov. lighthouse at Sand Beach, Mich., and are blessed with a daughter four years old. Last April she was taken down with measles, followed with a dreadful cough and turning into a fever. Doctors at home and at Detroit treated her, but in vain, she grew worse rapidly, until she was a mere "handful of bones." Then she tried Dr. King's New Discovery and after the use of two and a half bottles was completely cured. They say Dr. King's New Discovery is worth its weight in gold, yet you may get a trial bottle free at J. J. Orr's drug store.

Fifty-Second Session of the National Congress.

A Daily Summary of the Proceedings in the Senate and House—Bills Passed and New Measures Introduced.

SENATE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—In the senate yesterday a bill was introduced continuing for ten years all laws now in force prohibiting and regulating the coming into this country of Chinese persons. The joint resolution proposing an amendment to the constitution of the United States relating to marriage and divorce was discussed and the bill for the creation of a fourth judicial district in the territory of Utah was passed.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—In the absence of Vice President Morton yesterday the chair was occupied by Senator Manderson (Neb.), president pro tem. A bill was introduced for the erection of a monument at Put-in-Bay, O., to commemorate the battle of Lake Erie in 1813. The report of the committee on privileges and elections in the case of the Florida senators (declaring Mr. Call entitled to the seat) was adopted. Adjourned to the 8th.

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The house spent the time yesterday in the discussion of the rules.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—In the house yesterday the new rules were adopted. Resolutions were introduced directing an inquiry into the affairs of the World's Columbian exposition, and directing the committee on judiciary to make an investigation and report whether congress has the constitutional authority to appropriate money for the exposition.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—In the house yesterday bills were introduced to place a duty of one cent a pound on tinplate or taggers' tin; to repeal, after July 1, 1893, the duty of four cents a pound on pig tin; providing for a patent on any new plant, fruit or flower. A resolution was introduced instructing the ways and means committee to report a bill for the admission of all agricultural implements free of duty. In the contested election case of Craig vs. Stewart, from the Twenty-fourth district of Pennsylvania, Craig (dem.) was given the seat. In committee of the whole the census bureau, its management and the extent to which it has been subordinated to political ends, were the subject of spirited discussion for two hours. A bill was passed appropriating $115,514 for the subsistence of the Sioux Indians.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—There was but a small attendance in the house on Saturday. The day was set apart for the delivery of eulogies upon the late W. H. F. Lee, of Virginia. Mr. Meredith, the successor of Gen. Lee, was the first speaker, and he delivered a touching tribute to the deceased. At the conclusion of the remarks the usual resolutions were adopted and the house adjourned until Monday.

AN ABSCONDER CAUGHT.

A Mobile Defaulter to the Extent of $10,000 Admits His Guilt.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Feb. 6.—Joseph Calhoun, wanted at Mobile, Ala., on a charge of stealing $10,000 from the Equitable Life Assurance Company, was arrested here Thursday. Until three weeks ago he was cashier and most trusted employe of the company. He was then $10,000 short in his accounts and disappeared, leaving a note saying he was going to South America. Previously, however, a shortage of $1,000 was found and he shot himself in his left eye. It did not kill him, and his friends made good the amount belonging to the company. He was given his old position. He acknowledges his guilt and attributes his downfall to fast life.

Mother and Children Burned.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Feb. 5.—A fire which cost the lives of three persons occurred at an early hour Thursday morning in the house of A. M. Lennig. Mr. Lennig succeeded in escaping to the street in safety. Mrs. Lennig was suffocated and died before she could be taken out of the house, and two children were burned to death. Oil was found in several parts of the house, which leads to the suspicion of foul play.

A Pioneer Passes Away.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Feb. 6.—John Stewart, who was the oldest living pioneer of south California, died Thursday, aged 81 years. Stewart first came here in 1830, when he was pilot of the ship Alert. He was a shipmate of Richard Henry Dana, author of "Two Years Before the Mast," in which book he is frequently spoken of.

Forty Persons Drowned.

BRESLAU, Feb. 5.—Thirty barges were torn from their moorings by drift ice in the harbor, several of the barges sank, and forty persons were drowned, including many women and children.

Wils Howard Convicted.

LEBANON, Mo., Feb. 5.—Wils Howard, the notorious Kentucky desperado, who killed thirteen men in the famous Howard-Turner feud of two years ago has been convicted of murder here and will hang.

Oldest Postmaster Dead.

KINGSTON, Tenn., Feb. 6.—Hamilton Gray, the oldest postmaster in the United States, died near here yesterday. He had served as postmaster at Gray's Hill since his appointment by President Polk.

Greek Steamer and Nine Sailors Lost.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—A Greek steamer, bound from Cardiff for Malta, has been lost on one of the Scilly islands. Fifteen of her crew were saved but nine are missing.

Reporters Can Attend Electrocutions.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 5.—Gov. Flower signed Thursday the bill which allows newspaper reporters to be present at electrical executions.

WILL BE COLUMBIA'S FAIR.

National Commissioners to Ask Congress for Funds.

CHICAGO, Feb. 6.—It is now practically settled that the Chicago world's fair directory will not ask congress to give them a dollar in aid of the Columbian exposition. The proposition to go before congress and solicit a loan of $5,000,000 and the movement to have Uncle Sam invest in $5,000,000 of world's fair stock will be both abandoned and in their stead a bill will be brought forward by the national commission asking congress to appropriate about $4,000,000 to be expended by the national commissioners appointed by the president.

If this appropriation is secured, no part of the $4,000,000 will be spent on the grounds and buildings of the exposition. The entire sum will be paid out for administrative purposes on the lines laid down by the law of congress creating the exposition. Gen. J. W. St. Clair, of West Virginia, and his associates on the committee of federal legislation of the national board outlined the plan of campaign and it is as good as settled that the local directors will indorse Gen. St. Clair's action. President Baker stands alone in opposing the new plan.

ORANGE CROP A FAILURE.

Many Southern California Growers Practically Bankrupted.

RIVERSIDE, Cal., Feb. 6.—The orange crop is now being gathered and the outlook for most of the growers is disheartening. The season's yield was largely spoiled by the severe frost and by the electric windstorm on December 17. It is safe to say that at least two-thirds of the oranges on the trees are unmarketable and many are unfit to eat. The loss is a hard one to all the interests of southern California. Many orchard owners are practically bankrupt, for many depended entirely on the unusually promising crop to make payments on their lands. Even the real estate men find that they have a hard thing to explain away in the case of prospective purchasers, and by no means the smallest trial is upon the large body of laborers and fruit handlers, who relied on work at orange picking and packing to help them through the winter, when all other kinds of fruit work are suspended. The railroads are heavy losers also, for instead of 5,000 carloads of fruit that would have been sent there will probably not be more than 1,000 carloads.

A NOTED METHODIST DEAD.

Dr. Frey, Editor of the "Central Christian Advocate," Passes Away.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 6.—Rev. Benjamin St. James Frey, D. D., editor of the Central Christian Advocate, organ of the Methodist Episcopal church in the west, and one of the leading ministers of that denomination, died Friday of erysipelas following an attack of the grip.

[Dr. Frey was born in Rutledge, Tenn., in 1824, and graduated at Woodward college, Cincinnati. In 1847 he entered the ministry and after several years' pastoral service was elected president of Worthington Female college. During the war he served as chaplain of the Sixty-third Ohio infantry. In 1865 he was placed in charge of the Methodist Book Concern at St. Louis and conducted its business until he was elected editor of the Central Christian Advocate in 1872. His success was so marked that the general conference continued to reelect him to this position for twenty years. He served as a delegate to the general conferences of 1873, 1880, 1884 and 1888. He was also a delegate to the ecumenical conferences of the Methodist church, held at London in 1881 and at Washington city in 1891. Dr. Frey was the author of several biographical works and a frequent contributor to the best periodicals.]

Given Thirty-Six Years for Robbery.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Feb. 4.—Fred Newberg has been sentenced to the penitentiary at Jackson for thirty-six years for robbery. He, with Tom and Jim Goodin, all colored, entered a widow's house early one evening when she was at supper and forced her to give them $12, all the money she had. The Goodins were convicted and are in jail awaiting sentence.

Tornado in Ohio.

CYGNET, O., Feb. 8.—A tornado passed through the southern part of Wood county at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon, unroofing houses, uprooting large trees, blowing down fences and oil derricks and doing damage to the oil tanks of the Standard and other oil companies. The loss in the vicinity of Cygnet is figured at $7,000. No loss of life is reported.

Yellow Fever on Board.

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—The steamer Buffon arrived at quarantine with yellow fever on board. After the vessel had left Santos, Brazil, the disease broke out in epidemic form and five of the crew died. Four seamen were lying in the ship's hospital when the vessel reached quarantine.

Cardinal Manning's Will.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—The will of the late Cardinal Manning was opened Thursday. It shows that he possessed less than £100, which was in consols, and a collection of books. This fact speaks louder than words in showing the benevolence of the cardinal. The will contains no statement of public interest.

The Clearing Houses.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—At the leading clearing houses in the United States the exchanges during the week aggregated $1,319,874,432, against $1,208,579,817 the previous week. The increase as compared with the corresponding week of 1891 was 11.1.

Memorial Hospital Dedicated.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Feb. 5.—The $65,000 memorial hospital here was dedicated at noon. It was erected by the state flood commission.

WILL NOT RUN.

Secretary Blaine Not a Candidate for President.

He Declines to Allow His Name to Go Before the National Convention—Regard for His Health His Main Reason.

OUT OF THE RACE.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—Mr. Blaine is not a candidate for the presidency. He makes this official announcement in the following letter to Chairman Clarkson of the republican national committee:

"WASHINGTON, Feb. 6, 1892.—Hon. J. S. Clarkson, Chairman of the Republican National Committee—Dear Sir: I am not a candidate for the presidency and my name will not go before the republican national convention for the nomination. I make this announcement in due season.

"To those who have tendered me their support, I owe sincere thanks and am most grateful for their confidence. They will, I am sure, make earnest effort in the approaching contest, which is rendered especially important by reason of the industrial and financial policies of the government being at stake. The popular decision on these issues is of great moment and will be of far-reaching consequences. Very sincerely yours, JAMES G. BLAINE."

That a regard for his health has something to do with Mr. Blaine's decision is not unlikely. At present he is in excellent health, and his doctors assure him that he has no chronic trouble to fear. But he is not willing to undergo all the fatigues and excitement of a presidential campaign when he finds it necessary now to husband his strength. It is also said that it is the wish of Mrs. Blaine and the secretary's family that he refrain from a renewal of the strain which was so great in 1884. It is true that the old malignant fight could not be fought over again, but the strain would be none the less. Since he became secretary of state Mr. Blaine has cared less and less for the powers of the presidential office with its infinite cares in the way of patronage.

If the office could be entirely disassociated from this and given over to public policy he might think more of it, but it has been an admitted relief for him in fulfilling the duties of secretary of state to be able to give his time to the great questions with which that department has to deal. Some time ago in talking to a friend he discussed the situation freely, saying in substance:

"I don't suppose any man who has once sought the office can truthfully say he doesn't care for it. I confess I would like to be president, but I will never risk my health and life in seeking it. The office of secretary of state is a broad enough field for me during the rest of my public career."

FUSION IN MICHIGAN.

Prohibitionists and People's Party Delegates Agree to Pull Together.

JACKSON, Mich., Feb. 6.—Representatives of the prohibitionists and people's party of the state held a secret session to discuss the advisability of consolidating the two parties. After a long and heated discussion, largely led by the temperance speakers, resolutions were adopted declaring the platforms identical and eulogizing the people's party and its principles.

Iowa Democrats.

DES MOINES, Ia., Feb. 5.—The democratic state convention to select delegates to the national convention will be held in Council Bluffs May 11. The selection was made on the fourth ballot, the vote standing 6 for Council Bluffs to 4 for Davenport. The ratio of representation will be two for each county and one additional for each 225 votes cast for Horace Boies in 1891, making a convention of about 1,100.

Struck at a Crossing.

STAMFORD, Conn., Feb. 6.—While attempting to drive across the track of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad at the south branch crossing Frank Adams and his nephew Walter were instantly killed. The express from Stamford struck the carriage just as it reached the middle of the track and the men were dashed to pieces. Their bodies were terribly mangled.

Cable to the Bahama Islands.

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—The work of laying a cable between New York and the Bahama islands was completed Thursday. The first message of the Bahamas came to Messrs. Isaacs & Heineman, of this city, from the senior member of the firm. It was sent at 2:10 p. m. and was delivered by the Western Union Telegraph Company inside of thirty-five minutes.

Gen. James F. Robinson Dead.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Feb. 6.—Gen. James F. Robinson died here Friday. Gen. Robinson was a well-known turfman, having been president of the Kentucky association for twenty years. He held the office of city treasurer of Lexington, at the time of his death.

Death of a Noted Indian Chief.

Death of a French Veteran.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent;
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
" No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.
The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.
The No. 9, for family use, and the No, 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.
And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory.

DEAD.

Oh weary eyes! that oft did weep,
Closed now: rest well in dreamless sleep.

Oh, tired hands! that did their best,
Lie still—be folded into rest.

Oh heart! so torn with love and pain,
Thy troubles ne'er can come again.

Oh busy brain! so full of thought,
Thy work is ended; all is nought.

Oh feet! that trod life's stony road,
There's rest for you 'neath grassy sod.

Oh fragile body! sad and worn,
Rest thee—ah, rest thee from life's storm.

And thou, oh soul! that wing'st the flight
From earth's dark prison into light—

Great rain, oh soul! be thine for aye—
From earth's dark night to endless day.

WRECK OF THE SALLY.

Story of a Staunch Little Boat and Her Interesting Crew.

I am the captain of the fine canal boat "Sally—No. 452," my wife is first mate and our baby is the crew. The "crew" isn't big enough to steer the mules yet or throw stones at them when they stop to dine on the bushes along the tow-path, but he can do his share of yelling, and as the mules think the yells are for their benefit and start up a little when they hear the disturbance, the "crew" earns his salt.

The cargoes we carry are of coal from the mines, and our trips often extend to the seaboard, where we see the ocean blue in the distance, while the Sally lies moored to the dock.

Sometimes, in late fall, while anchored that way in salt water, the canal will freeze over so we cannot get back, and we are then forced to spend the winter in or on the edge of the city, for we of course live aboard our boat, as we own it.

My first mate enjoys this hugely, as she has been told it is quite fashionable to spend the cold weather in town. It also gives her an opportunity to go a-shopping, hear the opera, and attend scientific lectures—same as city women do.

I take much pride in sailing our mule yacht, and many a race I've run and won with her on the canal by sneaking past the boats ahead of us while they were heaved to for the night.

Folks think a canal boat sailor is something to make fun of, and they always like to get off their little jokes about being wrecked in a storm on the raging canal. They take delight in speaking of the larboard mule and the starboard mule, and like to ask if we have a spanker boom on deck whenever they see the baby.

They like to call out "Breakers ahead!" when the mule stops to kick at a fly, and "Low bridge!" and "All hands to the pumps!" and "Let go the main sheet!" and "Weigh anchor!" and other ridiculous things.

It makes my first mate mad when the Sally is treated with such disrespectful levity, and sometimes I lose my patience, too, but the baby don't mind it, so, after all, what difference does it do?

If the small boys catching catfish out of the canal think it smart to display their ignorance of seamanship in these ways, or if the grown-up people attempt to show off their nautical knowledge in such silly manners they can. But if they knew that the Sally had really been to sea in a raging storm and properly wrecked, and that those aboard only saved their lives by a thorough understanding of what is required in such emergencies, the laugh would be on them and not on the captain, first mate and crew of a mule yacht.

Two years ago we were spending the winter on the Sally, moored alongside one of the great coal docks of Jersey City opposite New York.

Our small cabin was handsomely decorated by my wife, and in it we were as cozy and comfortable as possible. The baby was then about ten months old, and in his hammock enjoyed life immensely. The mules were snugly stabled in the forecas'l after the coal had been taken out and extra planks laid on the floor to prevent their kicking a hole in the bottom, and everything looked favorable to all hands leading a serene and happy existence aboard till spring.

But "Man proposes and God disposes," as the saying is.

About the middle of January a terrific wind storm set in, blowing great guns from the northwest and every day getting worse.

The cold was intense, the mercury going to fifteen and twenty degrees below zero.

Forty degrees below in the western states was hot alongside of it, for the damp, chilling air of the coast eats right into the vitals and freezes the very marrow in the bones.

Keeping warm was out of the question. If we could keep alive was enough to be thankful for.

The ever increasing and colder growing gales had raged for a week without a lull and the fearfully angry waves in the bay were leaping mountains high and causing destruction and wreck all around.

Old sailors who had lived at sea for years said they never saw the ocean any worse. Ships were dragging their anchors and dashing ashore by dozens, and many lives were nightly lost in vain efforts to save the vessels.

I had stout and extra lines from our fresh water boat to its dock, but in spite of them our frail and unworthy craft was wrenched and tossed till I began to feel we had no business to risk staying aboard while the storm lasted.

My wife wouldn't listen to our leaving the only home we had, and vowed that if I talked of deserting the Sally again she would head a mutiny to prevent it. So both of us, being only fresh-water sailors and knowing but little of the force of a salt-water storm, settled down to remain aboard in spite of the warnings given to us by men on the dock.

It was on the fifth night of the awful and almost unprecedented gale and the chilling cold was at its lowest point. By stuffing all the crevices of our little cabin room and keeping the stove red-hot, we made out to be comparatively comfortable. Baby was sleeping soundly in the middle of a big feather-bed on the floor, and in his warm nest was happily oblivious to the tempest and arctic temperature outside.

By and by, without undressing at all and, in fact, putting on overcoats and wraps, wife and I laid down and tried to sleep and forget how the gale was shrieking in the black night without and how our boat was creaking and straining and tossing on the rough waters.

The wind and the rocking of our craft after awhile made us sleepy, and soon we were slumbering as soundly as the baby.

I was dreaming of shipwrecks and drowning when suddenly I awoke.

It seemed as if our boat was pitching harder than ever and being battered and knocked about frightfully.

The noise of the hitting against the wharf and the creaking of the ropes I missed. I got on my feet and managed to get to the little window and peer out through the frosted glass.

The city lights had vanished and nothing but intense blackness met my gaze.

Something was wrong I knew. Mounting the ladder stairs and opening our little hatchway door I looked out. We had broken loose from the dock and were flying before the shrieking gale and the huge waves to almost certain death.

Where we were—what to do I knew not. I quickly roused my wife and told her of our danger. How brave and how calm she looked. Her courage made mine.

Leaving her to bundle things on the baby and prepare for what was to happen, I stuck my head outside again to try and discover a way to safety if there was one.

We were drifting rapidly across the bay, and so far, luckily, had not struck an anchored vessel.

Behind us I could see the distant and disappearing lights of New York city. In front the light-house on Robbins' reef, and beyond that the lights on Staten Island.

If we were not carried out on the ocean through the Narrows—if we did not collide with a ship or strike the reef, we probably would bring up against some dock on Staten Island—providing our frail and clumsy craft lived to get there.

As soon as we struck anything, I realized too surely that in a moment's time after the crash we must founder and die.

Our only chance, then, was to be ready to leap, if possible, on the object we should dash against, and trust Providence for the rest.

The Sally had whirled around, and was rushing stern foremost through the thundering billows, and I hoped when we struck that end on which we were would hit first. If it didn't, no use leaping, for we never could all of us make our way over the icy, slippery two foot wide deck on the boat's sides to its other end.

Passing a large ship so close that I thought our end had come, barely missing the lighthouse reef, we were fast approaching Staten Island—and the Narrows.

For a time it looked certain that we would be swept seaward and surely perish—then we switched around and went before the wind straight for the island docks. Five minutes I calculated and our fate for life or death would be sealed.

Getting a rope I placed our darling baby, laughing and crowing at the excitement, on its feather bed, rolled the soft bed entirely around it, trusting it wouldn't smother for awhile, and bound the precious bundle firmly with the rope. Taking it in my arms, bidding my brave and quiet wife to hold me and follow, I gained the stern, over the slippery boat's deck.

Thank heaven, we were still stern foremost—dashing straight on a dock.

One more moment of suspense and horrible dread—then with a crash that smashed the boat under us like an eggshell we hit the wharf.

At the same instant, before the wreck could rebound, I flung bed and baby on the dock, seized my dear wife's hand and leaped for life.

We landed safely alongside of our child—then down under the raging waters plunged our good boat, drowning the awful cries of the poor mules left on board.

Cutting the ropes to give air to our babe, blown along by the blasts behind us, we reached land and a house and, soon inside, found shelter and a warm welcome.

We also found the Sally after the storm was over, raised and mended her, and now she is as good as ever for fresh water sailing, which she means to stick to for the balance of her days.

And this is why I am provoked when land lubbers try to ridicule her, or her captain, mate and crew.—H. C. Dodge, in Goodall's Sun.

The Pin Just Suited Him.

The other day a young man of Willows, Cal., entered a jeweler's store and informed the proprietor that his occupation was that of a carpenter, and he desired to get a bosom pin emblematic of his profession. The obliging jeweler looked over his stock, and finding nothing else, showed him a very fine Masonic pin.

The young man looked at the pin carefully. "Yes," said he, "there's the compass and square. I use both of them, but why didn't they put a saw in? It's first-rate as far as it goes. Hello! there's G there. What does that stand for?"

He studied it carefully for a moment, and a bright idea struck him. He flushed up as if he had made a discovery. "I have it," he said; "it's all right. G stands for gimlet—compass, square and gimlet. That will do. I will take it."—Jeweler's Weekly.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

A LIFE WRECKED.

Death of a Man Who Served Twenty-Five Years in Prison for Another's Crime.

Edward Murphy, who died recently in Jackson, aged 80 years, from the effects of being struck by an engine, had a remarkable experience. Thirty years ago he was tried and convicted of murder in the first degree and sent to prison for life. Seven years were spent in solitary confinement until life solitary was abolished, then for fourteen years he labored in the wagon shop. At the end of twenty-five years a dying man confessed to the murder and Murphy was released. That was seven years ago. The state pensioned him at $300 a year by a special act of the legislature. He was broken down and his death resulted from his inability to hear the whistle of the train. His only relative is a brother in Liverpool, Eng. When he was convicted he was a prosperous drover.

Clemency for Criminals.

President Harrison has commuted the sentence of Robert Judge, of Michigan, to four years and six months imprisonment. Judge was sentenced December 13, 1888, to ten years in the penitentiary and to pay a fine of $1,000 for counterfeiting silver certificates. The president has also commuted the two-year sentence of John D. Nichols, of Michigan, for violation of the postal laws, to one year and three months, but permits the fine imposed of $482.76 to stand.

Diphtheria was reported at twenty-nine places, scarlet fever at forty-seven, typhoid fever at nineteen and measles at eleven places.

Worthily Bestowed.

E. church and to the widows and orphans of deceased ministers property valued at $10,000; also to a needy church of the same denomination $12,000. Mr. Bostwick has already donated $100,000 toward the endowment fund of Albion college.

A New Organization.

E. Kennedy, of Liberty; vice president, A. S. Wolcott, of Concord; secretary and treasurer, E. A. Croman, of Grass Lake.

Assessing School Children.

In order to aid Michigan's educational exhibit at the world's fair all the school children throughout the state will be asked on Washington's birthday to contribute one penny apiece, teachers and school officers ten cents and principals fifty cents. If the scheme succeeds the projectors expect to secure a fund of $8,000 from the public schools of the state.

About seventy-five of the neighbors and friends of Mr. and Mrs. George Hotrum, gathered at their residence last Saturday evening to celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage. The occasion was a very pleasant one and long to be remembered by those present. A bountiful repast was provided, to which ample justice was done. The host and hostess were the recipients of many beautiful gifts, among them a silver tea set, a silver baking dish, and many other articles both ornamental and useful, which will serve the two-fold purpose of brightening their home by their beauty and their hearts by this testimony of the love and and good-will of their friends.

Happy Homes.

Thousands of sad and desolate homes have been made happy by use of "Rose Buds," which have proven an absolute cure for the following diseases and their distressing symptoms: Ulceration, Congestion and Falling of the Womb, Ovarian tumors, Dropsy of the Womb, Suppressed Menstruation, Rupture at Childbirth, or any complaint originating in diseases of the reproductive organs, whether from contagious diseases, heredity, tight lacing, overwork, excesses, or miscarriages. One lady writes us that after suffering for ten years with Leucorrhea or Whites, that one application entirely cured her, and furthermore, she suffers no more pain during the menstrual period. It is a wonderful regulator. "Rose Buds" are a simple, harmless preparation, but wonderful in effect. The patient can apply it herself. No doctor's examination necessary, to which all modest women, especially young unmarried ladies, seriously object. From the first application you will feel like a new woman. Price $1.00 by mail, postpaid. The Leverette Specific Co., 339 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

THE NEW SOUTHERN CITY.

If you are southward bound on the Crescent route, upon the day express leaving Cincinnati a little before noon, you will pass through Emory Gap, in Tennessee, about 8 p. m., after a picturesque hour beside the Emory River. No prettier stream flows anywhere, and at its break through Walden's Ridge—the Gap mentioned—you part company with it with regret; but you must leave it, or it will leave you, if you are bound further south, and crossing it on the great iron bridge you will swing round a vast buttress of rock which there stands sentinel, and behold with surprise the electric lights of a large town. It might be a city of a hundred thousand inhabitants, you think, judging by its extent as indicated; and if you journeyed this way no longer than two years ago you are puzzled, for then there was no town at all.

"What place is that?" you ask the conductor, and he says "Harriman." Then it dawns upon you that they called out "Harriman Junction" before you crossed the bridge, and that you saw another train standing there with cars labelled "Harriman Coal and Iron R. R."

"Harriman has four thousand people," the conductor says. It's one of the new southern towns, but it seems to have succeeded better than some. Looks pretty by night, doesn't it?"

You assent; the train plunges into tunnel 27 and Harriman is behind you. Later you return to it and study its character, its environment, its prospects. You find it situated in a beautiful bend of the Emory, with Walden's Ridge partly encircling it on the other side. You admire its rolling elevation, and are amazed at what has been accomplished here in so brief a period. You note the many substantial brick blocks, the dozen or more factories in active operation, the Belt Line Railway that accommodates each of these, the churches and schools, the macadam streets, and the many neat, home-like residences, some of them fine and costly specimens of architecture. You walk with growing wonder through the extensive rolling mills, and learn of untold iron and coal resources close at hand. You observe the banks, the schools, and the churches, and mark the unusual number of stores that appear well patronized. You become convinced that somehow this is an old community in a new spot, and if you tarry long and seek information you will find that Harriman is made up of sober, industrious, well-to-do people from many states, led there to build homes and live. You will find, also, that while stores and school-houses and churches and banks and homes abound, there is nowhere a saloon.

When General Clinton B. Fisk and others founded Harriman, on the 26th day of February, 1890, they shut the liquor traffic out. Some say that is why many good people have come in. Some attribute Harriman's exceptional growth and success to that fact. Others think it is due, not less, at any rate, to the superior advantages of location, to the pure water supply, the surrounding mineral wealth and the fine climate. That Harriman has grown in exceptional fashion, and that it appears under headway to greater things, you do not doubt. There is a fascination about it that you cannot resist. The longer you stay the more it possesses you. If you like scenery you climb Walden's Ridge and revel in a view surpassing that of Lookout Mountain. If you like boating you visit the Emory. If you are mineralogically inclined you visit the Byrd mine, just across the river, or the great iron mines ten miles away down the Tennessee, or the vast Brushy Mountain coal fields, twenty miles distant, to be reached by the H. C. & I. railroad; or, lacking time for these, you haunt the Exposition Hall and study there the specimens of iron, coal and coke there shown, with other specimens of timber and agricultural products.

All in all, Harriman grows on you, even as it grows on the spot where two years ago no town stood. It seems like a marvel that such a town could be in so short a time. You cease to smile at its claim that in ten years it will equal the Birmingham of to-day. Having done so much, you simply wonder what it may not do. Having so much to do with and build upon its possibilities appear unbounded.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Mr. Strong has the grip.

Come to the play next Monday eve.

S. C. Stacy was in our village one day last week.

The "Spy" goes to Petersburg Saturday night. Here Monday night.

Wm. Prindle is to be seen on the street again for the first time since his late attack of grip.

Geo. Smith just finished last year's threshing last Friday—something over 600 bushels of wheat.

Don't forget to buy your shoes during the one-fourth off sale at Lenardson's. Lasts only next week.

T. V. Hoagland received a barrel of oranges one day last week from his son Lamont, who is spending the winter in Florida. We had some of them and they were fine.

Prof. W. J. Reynold's grand phantasmagoric show last Saturday night did not pan out well, door receipts being only about $3.75, 30 per cent of which went for hall rent.

The Confederate Spy will actually be repeated Monday evening, Feb'y 22nd. Let everyone come and enjoy one more hearty laugh. The Dutchman will be on hand. Admission, 10 and 15 cents; reserved seats 20 and 25 cents at Lenardson's.

Milo Ousterhout will be the new hotel proprietor after April 1st. Just what George is going to do we cannot say, but we sincerely trust we may still retain him as a citizen, if not as the accommodating hotel manager. George is just the one to run an elevator.

The Maccabees are multiplying quite rapidly at present and when their hall is completed their membership will increase still more. Let all, both married and unmarried, look into the merits of this association and become a Maccabee at once.

Valentines are seemingly quite plentiful, if one is to judge by the number of large envelopes flying about in the neighborhood of the postoffice. But we think E. B. Lenardson, of the firm of W. Lenardson & Son, received the largest and best of all—an eleven pound boy. One can hardly reach Mr. L. with a ten-foot pole, and grandpa and uncle carry quite a smile, too. All doing well.

Mr. Post, who is here during his son Norman's illness, came very near being killed at the C. J. & M. crossing. He was waiting on the south side to cross, and either not noticing the train was so near or mistaking a signal as one for him to cross, he started up his team, and the car coming caught the wagon midway and breaking it in splinters threw it each side of the track. Fortunately the horses did not become frightened and taking it all in all it was a most miraculous escape from death.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to extend our sincere thanks to our friends and neighbors who so kindly assisted and sympathized with us during the sickness and burial of our little darling Harry.

JAMES AND MATTIE SMITH.

RAISIN RACKET.

Chauncey Graves spent the Sabbath with his grandparents.

T. G. Mead is again renewing his old occupation—"courting."

Ollie Mead is on the sick list and the doctor pronounces it without doubt a case of scarlet fever.

Bert Colvin is suffering from an enlargement of the gland under his right arm, caused by the grip.

The attendance at the Valley Church Sunday was very small, on account of the weather and sickness.

There seems to be a prospect of the C. T. line getting to the Seminary as soon as the weather will permit.

Considerable interest is being manifested in the meetings that are being held at the Raisin Center church.

Bret Simonds makes his regular daily trips to the postoffice at Sutton, in spite of his accident and grip combined.

The monthly meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held at the home of Mrs. Wm. H. Cornelius on Thursday of last week.

Those quails that the town sports tried to capture proved rather an expensive luxury; at least it looks that way. $5 and costs seems to be the tune.

J. H. Green, who has been confined to the house for the last seven weeks with grip, has had a large abscess under his right arm lanced, and it is now hoped that he will soon be able to be around again.

PRONOUNCED HOPELESS, YET SAVED.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd, of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in consumption. Four doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Saviour, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles; it has cured me, and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottles free at J. J. Orr's drug store. Large size 50c. and $1.00.

A physician has just discovered that a dislocation of the neck is not fatal. This will bring very little consolation to the man about to be hung.

Nearly every one needs a good spring medicine, and Hood's Sarsaparilla is undoubtedly the best. Try it this season.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

F. J. Temple has been quite sick with the grip during the past week.

Mrs. Lester Osgood does not improve very encouragingly from her sickness.

Several carloads of baled hay have been shipped from here during the past week.

The Lotus Glee Club will be at the opera house, Tecumseh, next Monday night.

A. R. Arner left for Marshall Monday to take a position as brakeman on a special freight.

Prof. Drake is in Paw Paw, attending an electrical institute being held there the remainder of the week.

Dr. Nelson and wife were called to Dundee Sunday to attend the funeral of the Doctor's step-father, Mr. Palmer.

Owing to the bad weather the attendance was not as large as usual at the denation last week. The amount received was $87.94.

The L. C. S. will give a public entertainment at the church this week Friday evening. It is hoped there will be a large attendance.

F. E. Pocklington, who is superintending a large job of mason work at Wheeling, Va., made his family a flying visit last week.

Mattie Rappleye is teaching the advanced grade during Prof. Drake's absence and Fannie Miller has charge of the primary department.

We understand the Britton Dramatic Club will not go to Detroit during their trip; as Detroit can't meet the requirements necessary for the Club after entertaining ex-President Cleveland next Tuesday.

The article in last week's issue of the HERALD, among the Tecumseh locals, in regard to the widows Arner, is not quite complete or correct. There are seven widows Arner, and four widows whose maiden names were Arner. Mrs. John Arner, Mrs. Jacob Arner, and Mrs. Louisa Arner married sons of Peter and Louisa Arner, and reside in our village. Mrs. Eliza Arner, of Philadelphia, Pa., Mrs. Rebecca Arner, of Dowagiac, Mich., and Mrs. Cryscilda Arner, of Ridgeway, married sons of Wm. and Catherine Arner. Mrs. Catherine Cox, of this village, Mrs. Sarah Bailey, of Hudson, Mich., and Mrs. Mary Usher, of Cleveland, Ohio, were daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Arner, Sr. Mrs. Lavinia Jackson, of Macon, was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Arner, making eleven widows in the families of the two brothers, six of them living in our village.

Did you notice the beautiful aurora borealis Saturday night?

Aunt Ann Allen was ninety-two years old last Wednesday.

Al. Morseman lost a valuable horse Sunday morning, which we hear choked to death.

John H. Davis and wife, of Milford, have been visiting their many Franklin relatives and friends. They started for home via Milan Tuesday, where Mr. Davis has relatives.

Charley Avery's portable sawmill is at Mrs. A. B. Wisner's, where he was engaged last week sawing lumber for a house. He moves to Ben Reynolds from A. B. Wisner's to saw lumber for a big barn and shed.

The time at the lyceum at Wm. Witherell's was mostly given over to the debate on the silver question. At the last hour of the night the judges rendered a decision in favor of the affirmative—the free silver side. The lyceum will meet next Saturday night at Alanson Updyke's, when the following question will be discussed: "Resolved, That this government should be supported by an income tax." Aff., G. W. Allen; neg., J. S. Allen.

THE LADIES'

A USEFUL INVENTION.

Mr. H. C. Ingraham, superintendent of the Tiffany Iron works has placed a new invention on the market which seems to have large possibilities in it. It is called Ingraham's adjustable grain scourer and separator, and is designed for scouring and cleaning wheat and other grains. Mr. Ingraham built a machine himself and put the first one into the Globe Mill the first of November last. It displaced three standard machines in that mill, doing better work than all the others. It takes off all dirt, smut, and refuse matter and will scour the grain down to the last coat of bran if necessary. The machine is perfectly adjustable and is made in two sizes; one size will scour from 50 to 100 bushels per hour. The Tiffany Iron works will commence next Monday manufacturing a large invoice of these machines. The test at the Globe Mill was so satisfactory that Mr. Wm. Hayden has given the inventor the following testimonial:

Having used the H. C. Ingraham wheat scourer the past two months, and given it a thorough trial, I take this method of certifying to its worth and superior excellence as a wheat scourer. With a 6-inch belt it will scour 75 bushels per hour, and with an 8-inch belt (and a trifle more power) will scour 100 bushels per hour easily, and do it better than any two machines I ever used in my mill. There is no question in my mind as to its excellence and durability, and certainly I call it a wonderful machine for the scouring of wheat and the best I ever have seen.

Respectfully,
WM. HAYDEN.

ANN ARBOR LETTER.

EDITOR OF HERALD.—Ann Arbor people have been unusually favored during the past week in a musical way. On Friday evening the third concert of the Choral Union series was given, which was pronounced the success of the season, and on Monday evening following an enthusiastic audience gathered in University Hall to hear—yes, and to see—the much-famed Paderewski, who gave a piano recital for the benefit of the Women's Annex to the Waterman Gymnasium.

This opportunity of listening to a genius who has created such a furore among musical circles of our large cities was surely appreciated outside of Ann Arbor. Parties came in from different cities of the State where they were not fortunate enough to secure him.

The fact that the close of the semester is drawing near—and that always brings with it the pleasant reminder of examinations—detained but few of our more conscientious students, who felt that a few hours of credit was much more important than any visions the name of Paderewski could bring before them.

He played selections from Beethoven, Schubert, Chopin, two of his own compositions, Melodie and Menuet, Liszt's arrangement of Erl King, and lastly, Liszt's Rhapsodie Hongroise, No. 2. The different composers were interpreted in such a way that those not having a cultivated musical taste listened with rapt attention and enjoyment. Cold words serve to convey but little meaning to those who have not heard him, of the depth of feeling displayed in his playing. He repeated his menuet in response to a hearty encore; enthusiasm grew with every selection, and the final number, Rhapsodie Hongroise, from beginning to end, was a revelation to all.

The concert of Friday evening deserves a few words of mention. An excellent program was given by a chorus of 240 voices, assisted by Mrs. Ginevra Johnstone Bishop, Chicago, soprano; Mr. Max Heinrich, London, England, baritone; Mr. Marshall Pease, Ann Arbor, tenor, and a full orchestra, with Mr. Wilhelm Yunck, Concert-meister.

It passed off so satisfactorily as to deserve the well-earned words from Prof. Stanley, the conductor, that he could not have wished it different in the least respect, words which may well be appreciated from a man of his critical taste.

The first number, "Fair Ellen," by Max Bruch, founded on the dramatic story of the relief of Lucknow, is dominated by the motive, "The Campbells are coming," which grows in intensity till the climax appealed to the audience with great force.

The Dutch lullaby, "Wynken, Blynken and Nod," was very taking.

"The Wreck of the Hesperus"—music by Arthur Foote to the words of Longfellow, is of course very dramatic. The solo parts could not have been better interpreted.

"The Discovery," for male chorus and baritone solo, is grand in its conception and has the northern flavor characteristic of Grieg's music.

"The Flight into Egypt," in which Mrs. Bishop's clear, rich voice was accompanied by a female chorus, is another selection by Bruch, but as totally different from the other as the subjects are widely separated.

Max Heinrich received repeated encores in his songs sung to his own accompaniments, which revealed to the audience his abilities as a true musician.

Gounod's "Gallia" was a fitting close to such a program. The magnificent closing chorus, "Jerusalem! Jerusalem! return thee to the Lord thy God!" with the full orchestra, and the soprano solo sounding pure and clear above all the rest, fairly made one feel as if he might be in the heavenly regions.

The next concert in the series will be by the Boston Symphony Orchestra May 9, and the 27th of the same month Berloitz's "Damnation of Faust" will be given by the Choral Union, for the first time in the State.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, February 12, 1892.

Representative Bland, chairman of the House committee on coinage, fired the first gun in the silver battle, by favorably reporting to the House from the committee, his bill providing for the free coinage of silver. Whether the fight shall be immediate or be for a time staved off is to be determined by the committee on Rules, in whose hands the fate of the bill now rests. That committee can indefinitely prevent the bill being taken up, or it can allow it to be taken up and fillibustered to death, as it has exclusive and autocratic authority, under the new rules, over legislation to come before the House and in naming a time for the close of debate. The democratic members of that committee, Speaker Crisp and Messrs. McMillin and Catchings, are on record as advocates of free coinage, but they may have been convinced, like many of their colleagues, that it would be "good politics" not to pass the bill until after the Presidential election. The silver men are, however, very confident that the bill will in due time be taken up and passed, as they claim that at least two hundred members are determined to do so, even if it be necessary to block everything else in order to do it. Close observers predict one of the most bitter fights that ever took place in Congress over the bill.

The Senate Finance committee surprised no one when it favorably reported a number of final bills, including free coinage and Senator Peffer's land loan bill. That report does not settle the silver question in the Senate, as it is by any means. The Senate Democrats say they will not allow action of the House on the Bland bill, and that if the House and Senate bills are different they will not agree to the Senate bill. Mr. Harrison, of course, still stands ready and waiting to veto any free coinage bill that gets through.

Chicago wants Congress at this time, characteristic energy of the city which usually gets what it wants, it has sent a strong committee here, after Congress. The proposition is to take Congress on special trains to Chicago on Saturday night the 20th inst., giving the members a chance to spend Washington's birthday in finding out what is being done for the World's Fair, and getting back to Washington in time for business on Wednesday, the 24th, inst. Present indications are that about one-third of Congress will make the trip.

If the bill which the house Banking and Currency committee has favorably reported shall become a law it will be difficult, if not impossible, for the officers of national banks to flim-flam the depositors by borrowing large sums from the bank on worthless securities.

The House has been in a decidedly investigating humor this week. It adopted resolutions providing for investigations of the World's Fair, the wrecked national banks of Boston and Philadelphia, and of the Pension bureau.

Mr. Blaine says the statement that his letter withdrawing his name from the Presidential contest would be shortly followed by his resignation from office was "an infernal lie!" He ought to know.

The House talks economy, but when it comes down to increasing its own patronage by the appointment of two additional messengers it agrees to it by a vote of 133 to 96.

Representative Bushnell, of Wisconsin, has offered a resolution to the House for the appointment of a committee to investigate and report whether any articles of home manufacture are sold abroad cheaper than at home, and if so, what are the reasons therefor. The same gentleman has offered a resolution providing for the adjournment of Congress on May 31. The first resolution may be adopted, but there is little chance for the last one, as it is now dollars to straws that the dog days will find Congress sweltering away.

The Canadian reciprocity Commissioners are holding daily conferences with Secretary Blaine and Gen. John W. Foster, representing the United States, at the State department. The conferences are, of course, secret, but if they result in even a little bit of reciprocity the public will be greatly surprised. The Canadian Commissioners are here of their own accord to submit certain propositions to this Government, and not upon the invitation of this Government, as has been published. This Government will hear the propositions, just as it would those from any other friendly government, but accepting them is another matter.

HIGH TARIFF METHODS.

High Tariffites Resort to "Bunco" and "Blackmail."

It has long been the plan of the high protected combinations and trusts to use all means possible and resort to the most unscrupulous methods to retain possession of the advantages which they have already secured in the form of high tariffs on foreign competing products. During the war, when the government found it necessary to tax manufactured products to increase its revenues, these interests were able to have the tariff raised to offset such tax. Said Mr. Morrill, who had charge of the tax bills in the house during the war "if we bleed manufacturers we must see that the proper tonic is administered in return"—i. e., give them power to bleed the people. This policy of bleeding the people was justified during the war by the necessities of the revenue. When the war was over and the internal taxes were taken off, thus stopping "the bleeding of the manufacturers," these very manufacturers were powerful enough to secure the retention of the war tariffs as they were, and in some cases to have them increased. In this way their power to "bleed" the people has been strengthened.

Now that the people are awakening and are gathering their forces preparatory to a campaign to reduce the "bleeding" power given by high tariffs, these high tariff beneficiaries are perfecting their organization, known as the American Protective Tariff league, so as to be able to resist any reduction whatever in their tariff privileges, knowing that the present administration is favorable to their cause, they do not hesitate to use the officers of the national government to assist in accomplishing their ends. The following circular letter sent by Mr. Wilbur F. Wakeman, secretary of the league, to a western postmaster recently appointed by President Harrison will show how unscrupulous are the methods resorted to:

NEW YORK, Dec. 29, 1891.—Dear Sir: Accept our congratulations upon your recent appointment. Situated as you are you can accomplish the best results for the cause of protection of anyone in your locality. It is our plan to have at least one official correspondent of the league at every post office, and through him secure information, obtain the distribution of our documents and exert every legitimate influence in favor of protection and reciprocity.

It is impossible for us to bear all the expense of this work, for this is a big country. Every intelligent voter should receive complete information showing the benefits of protection. We wish to have you act as our confidential agent and correspondent to assist in this work.

We expect that each correspondent will subscribe monthly or with the aid of friends furnish at least $5 before the next election for the circulation of our documents. If you can not do this please inform us, and by contributing the original $25 we will furnish you with a list of names to whom we will send documents. We expect as our correspondent to

As a return for your services you will receive free a set of our important issue of documents and newspapers as soon as printed, and in this way keep in touch with the developments of the new tariff.

It is important that every friend like you puts his shoulder to the wheel and works in season and out of season until the election of '92. Yours very truly,

WILBUR F. WAKEMAN, Sec.

This is nothing but blackmail pure and simple. Shall it be allowed to succeed?

RECIPROCITY.

How Much Benefit Can We Expect to Derive From Our New Treaties With Germany?—We Merely Transfer a Part of Our Exports of Breadstuffs From One Country to Another.

So far as the reciprocity policy of the present administration tends toward the improvement of our foreign commerce, it may be deserving of favor, and were it not for other reasons such favor would be freely accorded to it even by those not in sympathy with the present fiscal policy. The first of these reasons is that "reciprocity" is evidently intended to obstruct the progress of true tariff reform principles, and another, a natural sequence, is that there exists a manifest disposition on the part of its supporters to exaggerate the benefits likely to accrue from the several treaties effected. This is the secret of the enthusiasm of the high protectionists over what is in reality some concessions to low tariff principles and is full justification of the critical attitude of tariff reformers.

The latest treaty with Germany is a good example of the truth of this. It has been held up as a wonderful combination of business acumen and diplomatic sagacity on our part, and a tremendous stride forward in opening up foreign markets to the farm produce of this country. An imposing show has been made by placing side by side the old rates of duty in Germany on the products affected and the new, and calling attention to the "substantial concessions" secured to this country. It must be admitted that on paper these look well, and had the concessions been made to the United States alone might even have been invested with some importance. As it is, the following shows that they affect a small part only of our exports to Germany, and, further, that one important competitor with us for the German market in agricultural products has been accorded like concessions and is in a natural position to take much fuller advantage of them than we are.

During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1890, the last for which full details are available, our total exports to Germany amounted in value to $84,315,215, a very considerable trade; but of this total the articles upon which the duties have been revised furnished only $8,887,197. It may of course be argued that the latter total was small on account of the duties; but, as will be shown later on, these duties did not prevent heavy importations from other European countries of similar products. Nor when we consider how much the saving of duty on the above year's importations, at the revised rates, would have been to Germany does there appear to be much in the argument itself. The following table shows the amount of duty actually paid, what it would have been on the reduced scale and the amount that would have been saved by German importers:

	Duty Collected	Duty at New Rates	Difference
Wheat	$ 3,000	$ 2,100	$ 900
Rye	181,104	126,772	54,332
Peas	8	6	2
Oats	16,246	10,154	6,092
Maize	1,453,335	1,162,668	290,667
Hops	155	108	47
Butter	87,115	74,048	13,067
Oxen	29,827	25,353	4,474
Horses	285	142	143
Flour, etc.	27,475	19,525	7,950
Totals	$ 1,798,055	$ 1,420,876	$377,467

In addition to the above there is a reduction of duty on imports of lumber and timber which we cannot exactly calculate, but, making an extravagant allowance for it, the entire reduction in duties on our exports to Germany for the year 1889-90 would come under half a million dollars.

This result appears still more trivial when contrasted with the saving which the same concessions to Austria-Hungary will effect on imports from that country. The German imports from Austria are returned at $165,250,000 yearly, on which old duties amounted to $36,250,000. Under the new treaty these duties are reduced to $27,500,000, a saving of $8,750,000. Why Germany, bent upon effecting a commercial union with Austria, Italy, etc., should have been willing to extend consideration to the United States also to secure its American trade in beet sugar, needs no explanation with the above figures before us.

The discrimination against Russia by the new treaties will without doubt have the effect of changing the sources of Germany's grain supplies to some extent, but the assumption that any material benefit will accrue to us therefrom is not well supported. The following shows Germany's imports of the four leading cereals in 1889, with chief sources of supply, in thousands of bushels:

	Total	Austria	Russia	U.S.
Wheat	18,553	194	11,057	38
Rye	11,032	631	9,440	107
Oats	13,188	655	10,576	4
Maize	13,420	1,057	7,917	2,413

In only one instance, maize, does the United States really figure as a competitor with European sources of supply, and it must be apparent that Austria, and not this country, will derive the reduction in her case will not be offset by extra freights, which must operate to our disadvantage in competing even with Russia.

There is still a further consideration. Were we securing the German market for such imports as have in ordinary years been drawn from Russia, we do not dispose of that competition in more important markets, but, on the contrary intensify it. If Russia is discriminated against, even to the point of exclusion by Germany, it simply means that her surplus supplies will find their way in still greater volume to other countries, Great Britain for instance, and what we might gain on the one hand would certainly be more than lost on the other.

Owing to the extraordinary state of things now prevailing throughout Europe, present or immediate experience is of no value in testing the soundness of the above analysis; but with a return to normal conditions it will be seen that the treaty of which so much has been made is a small matter indeed. —N. Y. Daily Commercial Bulletin.

Protection and the Value of Farm Lands.

So long as we have McKinley tariffs to keep up the prices of manufactures and to keep down the prices of agricultural products by discouraging exports, the price of farm lands will continue to decline. In New York state, where, if anywhere, the benefits of protected home markets ought to be reaped, the average decline in the price of farm lands during the last fifteen years has exceeded 50 per cent; often it has reached 100 per cent and the farms have been abandoned. This is particularly true near the Mohawk river, along which are located the most of the heavily protected manufacturers. In 1890 many farmers, particularly republican ones, expressed the opinion that the bottom had been reached and that prices of farm lands would advance considerable in 1891. One farmer in western New York who had represented his district in the assembly, said that prices had already stiffened and that farm lands were held 10 per cent higher than in 1889.

That the same forces are at work pulling prices down is evident from the following from the New York Times of January 10, 1892:

"State Assessor J. D. Ellis is at work on the report of the state board of assessors, which will be made to the legislature about February 1. Mr. Ellis says that the value of the personal estate in New York state is substantially unchanged. The realty has increased in large cities and farm lands have decreased.

"This has been the order of things for seven years past,' said Mr. Ellis, 'and it would seem that bottom must be struck before long. I can't see how farm lands can drop much lower. Perhaps we can say that they have depreciated as far as possible now.'"

—Austria-Hungary and other countries do not appear seriously alarmed by Mr. Harrison's threat that if they do not do something or other before March 15 next he will issue a proclamation taxing the consumers of this country on hides, tea, sugar and coffee. But about the time an American president begins trying to levy taxes on Americans by Russian ukase he is liable to learn something.

Hill Forces a Vendetta.

The speech made by Mr. David B. Hill on New Year's Eve, when his term as Governor of New York expired, was the formal opening of his canvass for votes in the Democratic National Convention. In that speech he announced his platform, declaring himself in favor of the Republican High Tariff of 1883 as a substitute for the McKinley bill. Could Mr. Hill be nominated on a Democratic platform his private platform would defeat the party. Could he be nominated on his private platform there would be no Democratic party left. Could he be nominated, as he cannot be, it would be in every way desirable to postpone the reorganization of the party until after the election, but it is not probable that such postponement could be had. In the West and South a considerable proportion of the Democratic vote would go to the People's party candidates. As many more would take no part in the election, while in the East the Democratic free-traders would nominate a candidate of their own.

Mr. Hill's action in calling the New York Convention so as to prevent the Cleveland tariff-reform Democrats from securing representation is causing great bitterness. The New York delegation was practically conceded to Mr. Hill before he took this action, but since he has determined to gag all opposition those he has challenged to a life-and-death struggle will meet him more than half way. Controlling the machine, he will easily control his February convention, but its verdict will amount to little or nothing more than his own indorsement of himself. He will be met at the Democratic National Convention by a powerful organized opposition representing a majority of the New York Democracy and also the Free-Traders who have come over in thousands from the Republican party since 1880. The fight will be a vendetta, and Mr. Hill will have to settle for the action of his friends in defeating Cleveland and Warner Miller to elect Harrison and Hill in 1888.

Whatever happens in New York, it is certain that the Democratic party means to make the campaign for "a tariff for revenue only." Platform and candidate will represent the issue.—St. Louis Republic.

Sleeplessness Cured. IV

I am glad to testify that I used Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic with the best success for sleeplessness, and believe that it is really a great relief for suffering humanity.

E. FRANK, Pastor.

LOGAN, Ohio, Oct. 18, 1890.

I used Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic in the case of a 13-year old boy for a case of St. Vitus dance of two years' standing. His condition was most lamentable, as his limbs were constantly in motion, and at table his hands could not hold knife, fork or spoon. The effect of the medicine was at once noticeable to all, and the boy himself remarked, "I know it helps me," and before the second bottle was used up, insisted that there was no necessity of taking more as he was entirely cured.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT

THE DUTY OF RICH MEN TO PROVIDE.

In its current issue the New York Independent publishes a collection of articles on "The Right Use of Wealth." The writers are D. Willis James; Robt. C. Ogden; President Merrill E. Gates, of Amherst college; Rev. Dr. J. M. Buckley, editor of the Christian Advocate; Rev. Dr. Robert S. McArthur; Rev. Dr. F. E. Ellinwood, secretary of the Presbyterian board of foreign missions, and Chas. D. Kellogg, secretary of the Charity Organization Society. The spirit of all the contributions is expressed by Mr. James when he says that "a rich man holds his wealth simply as a trustee between his Maker and humanity." The mode of enforcing this trust obligation is described by Dr. Buckley: "Stewards or agents of men have fixed salaries, and receive direct instructions from their principals as to the management of the interests committed to their care; but stewards of God are left to determine by the precepts which He has given how they should live, and by the exercise of their own judgment what use they shall make of what they do not deem necessary or lawful to expend for their subsistence and comfort." This is a comfortable sort of trusteeship, surely, for the trustee; but it leaves what lawyers call cestui que trust in a rather awkward plight.

Observe that the rich man does not own his wealth. It is not his to do with as he pleases, subject only to the universal law of liberty that he shall not work injury to others with it; he is merely a trustee. His wealth belongs to humanity. Nevertheless he has full discretion to fix his own salary; and if he fixes it at an unreasonable high figure, even misappropriating the entire trust fund, no power is anywhere lodged to enforce the trust. The trustee may be punished in a future world, but in the only world where wealth can be enjoyed, the defranding beneficiary is remediless. What conception of divine justice can these well meaning men have. What conception have they of divine intelligence.

The truth is that they do not look below the surface of things. They see that some men are rich, while more are helplessly poor, and instinctively feeling that in this there is something wrong, yet unwilling to believe that God is other than good, their first impulse is to accuse rich men of grinding the faces of the poor. But the impulse gives way when they consider—as consider they must, for it is true and plain—that rich men do not grind the faces of the poor. They are in daily contact with rich men whom they find to be generous, well-disposed to be just, and altogether incapable of consciously doing a personal wrong or giving play to a mean motive. In this dilemma, the preacher, the charity organizers, the business man of beneficent instincts, all that class which is so well represented by the writers who have discussed the "Right Use of Wealth" in the Independent, seek farther for an explanation of the phenomenon of abject poverty in the midst of abounding wealth. But he does not seek far enough. Consequently he constructs a crude theory of divine law calculated to reconcile the impartial generosity of God with the persistence of poverty.

In doing this he only detracts from the justice and the wisdom of the Creator. Negligently assuming that the wealth of individuals is bestowed by God, and seeing that for every one who has it thousands are without it, and thousands cling more desperately to the steep sides of poverty's gulf, yet believing that God is no respecter of persons, writers like those in The Independent conclude that the possession of wealth implies an affirmative obligation to use it for the benefit of those who need it. If they searched deeper they would find the true law, which reconciles divine justice, generosity and wisdom with the persistence of poverty, without holding rich men responsible for deplorable social conditions in any greater degree than all men are responsible for an ignorant or negligent misuse of such influences as they possess.

This law is involved in the self-evident proposition that God, though he gives no wealth to anyone, in trust or otherwise, endows men with the mental and physical power requisite for its production, and bestows upon them all alike the material and forces of the universe with which they may produce wealth in all its forms, according to the common knowledge of the time in which they live, and without which they can not produce it in any form. It follows that the wealth that any man produces is his to do with as he pleases him best, subject to no other obligation than that he shall not use it to injure others, and to no other deduction than compensation to his fellows for such advantage regarding his use of natural material and forces as through the artificial adjustments of society he may have secured.

It is what God has bestowed upon mankind—the land—that is a trust, not the wealth that individual men, by their own efforts, have temporarily produced from the land and which must soon return to the land again. That trust can be enforced here and now by the simple, wise, and just expedient of taking the value of land for public use, and leaving private wealth to its owners. The trust proposed by the independent contributors can not be fairly enforced in this world, nor in any degree at all except by measures that are communistic in the worst sense; and in the next world it will be too late.

Society and the Baby.

There was a Baby born; a brand new, fresh baby, who didn't mean any harm, and came quite unintentionally.

Said Society to the Baby: You don't own that land—get off!

Said the Baby to Society: How absurd you are! I must have some land to sit on or I can't stay. You don't expect me to live in the water, do you?

Said Society to the Baby: It is immaterial to me where you live, or whether you live at all; but you can't stay on the face of the earth without paying for it. To sit or stand or walk, or to have your little grave in—you can't have any land without paying for it.

All right! said the Baby, briskly. It seems absurd to me, but I'm young yet. I'll pay with all my heart when I'm bigger. Just feed me well now, and when I'm grown I'll be a credit to you. The more you do for me now the more I'll do for you then—see? And I can pay back compound interest, for the work of a smart person is worth vastly more than his keep.

And the Baby opened his mouth in cheerful confidence.

But Society put dirt into it.

Child, said Society, you can't have food without paying for it.

But I must have food or I can't live said the Baby. And the better the food the better for you when I'm bigger.

It is immaterial to me whether you live or die, or how you live or die, said Society. You have got to pay for everything you get; and, because you can't, your parents must!

Parents! echoed the Baby. What are they?

You young heathen! cried Society. Your parents have brought you into this world in accordance with the inevitable laws of nature; this is an immense benefit to you, because the world is so pleasant; and, therefore, you should regard them with veneration, gratitude and love, no matter what kind of people they are, or what they do to you afterward.

To bring you into the world was a duty and a privilege to them, an honor and a benefit to you; therefore, you owe them obedience and devotion, but they owe me for your board and keep!

You don't seem to me to make that quite clear, said the Baby. It doesn't seem to hang together. You say it was by inevitable natural law that I came at all?

Yes, said Society.

Then why should I owe them for doing what they ought to do, and couldn't help doing? And if it was what they ought to do and couldn't help doing, why should they pay you for it? asked the Baby.

You owe them for their affection, care and support, said Society.

But I have their affection, care and support, or I couldn't live, said Baby. I've a right to it.

I tell you it makes no difference to me whether you live or not, said Society.

Oh, come now! I know better than that, if I am young, said Baby. Who are you, anyway?

I am Society.

And what are you made of?

People, said Society, with some reluctance.

Aha! I thought so. And the better the people are the better you are—is that not so?

Yes, said Society, with even more reluctance.

And the people are all Babies first, aren't they? And the better the Babies are the better the people are, and the better you are! cried the Baby, who was beginning to take notice, and feeling his feet. Talk to me about parents! My business is with you, you old fossil. My parents are temporary guardians, but you and I are permanently connected. Why, you short-sighted ostrich! What hurts me hurts you, and what helps me helps you, and without me there wouldn't be any You. And there you sit and plaster your wounds, and nurse your diseases, and fight your vices, and pretend you own the earth! You are a hollow, crack-brained discrepant old rudiment! Be off with you, dodo! I'm Society myself!

But Society, though on its last legs, was bigger than the Baby, and put more dirt into its mouth, and the Baby died.

But there are more Babies.—Charlotte Perkins Stitson, in New Californian.

How to Abolish Absentee Landlordism.

In the following reference to the alien land law of Illinois, the St. Louis Chronicle goes to the marrow of the alien land law question:

William Scully, an Irishman, who in his native land learned the lesson of landlord greed, lives in England, and owns townships of fertile farm lands in middle Illinois, which are rented for all that can be got out of them to users. The legislature of Illinois tried to rid the state of this devil-fish by the passage of a law against the ownership of her soil by an alien. This law has been declared unconstitutional by an inferior judge, and it is probable that the decision will be sustained. The work of the legislature was therefore in vain. But the object of the law can be obtained and much good accomplished in other directions if the next session of the legislature will pass a law providing for the taxation of all land in the state up to its annual rental value independent of improvements. Scully would be driven from the state with all his tribe. His holdings would be worthless, and the state would have so large a fund in the treasury that all legitimate public improvements might be undertaken.

The Astor Dynasty.

The Astor dynasty, described by Ward McAllister as "a dynasty in real estate," has been perpetuated in the person of a son born to the predestined name, John Jacob Astor.

This infant is in the fifth generation and, being in the male succession, inherits by his birth $150,000,000.

Here is primogeniture in America. It can not call upon the government to become the responsible stakeholder for an idiot, but it is none the less just as essentially fortified as in England.

While this tiny Astor sleeps in his cradle the toiling inmates of 2,100 Astor tenement houses in New York are busy rolling in the contributions which keep the dynasty going.

What is the difference between an Astor in New York and a Cavendish or a Stanley in England? One has a ducal title and the other hasn't. But then if papa Astor chose he could buy his son just as good a one in the markets of Europe for $75, all guaranteed.—Boston Globe.

LINCOLN'S BIRTHDAY.

The Eighty-Third Anniversary Observed in Many Places.

Chicago, Brooklyn, Boston, Philadelphia and Other Towns Honor His Memory—Business Suspended in Illinois.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

CHICAGO, Feb. 14.—In accordance with an act passed by the legislature at its last session making it a legal holiday, Lincoln's 83d birthday was for the first time generally observed in this city and throughout the state. All the banks in the city, municipal and county offices, the board of trade and the stock exchange were closed and the post office did honor to the day by making fewer deliveries. Business houses were open during the morning, but generally gave their employes a half holiday in the afternoon.

Five hundred guests and members of the Marquette club participated in the club's annual banquet at the Auditorium last night in honor of Lincoln's birthday. Mayor Washburne, on behalf of the club, delivered the address of welcome. Senator Shelby M. Cullom responded to the toast "Abraham Lincoln," and made the principal address of the evening.

George H. Thomas post, No. 5, G. A. R., celebrated Lincoln's birthday by a big gathering at the Auditorium. Robert G. Ingersoll was the orator of the occasion.

Lincoln council of the National Union held its fifth annual celebration of the birthday of Abraham Lincoln in Central Music hall. Rev. Dr. Emil G. Hirsch delivered the principal address of the evening.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—The annual dinner of the Union League club of Brooklyn was given at the clubhouse last night. The club at the same time celebrated the birthday of Abraham Lincoln. The attendance was large and addresses were made by several notable persons.

BOSTON, Feb. 13.—"Abraham Lincoln" was the topic upon which nearly all the speeches centered at the banquet of the Butler club last evening at Young's hotel. The chief point of interest in Gen. Butler's speech was his declaration in opposition to the free coinage of silver.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 13.—The Pennsylvania club, a semi-political organization of this city, yesterday celebrated the birthday of Abraham Lincoln by a dinner, which in the future it proposes to make an annual affair. The principal addresses were by C. Stuart Patterson, dean of the law school of the University of Pennsylvania, and Attorney General Miller.

Bridge-Jumper Stanley Probably Fatally Injured at Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 15.—Meredith Stanley, the bridge jumper, made what in all probability will prove a fatal leap Saturday morning from the Cincinnati and Covington suspension bridge, a distance of over 100 feet, into the Ohio river. Stanley is now lying in his bed in his room at 1060 Vine street suffering intensely and unable to talk. His side is badly hurt and it is feared he has received fatal injuries.

THE SILVER QUESTION.

PAPER READ AT THE FARMERS' INSTITUTE BY B. F. DePUY.

Would our Financial Condition be Benefited by the Free and Unlimited Coinage of Silver

The "silver question" is not a new one in the United States. For the past 18 years it has been discussed freely and in almost every conceivable medium. The public press, daily and weekly, the lecture platform, the halls of legislation, political harangues, scientific treatises and economic pamphlets, have all taken a hand in the turmoil and have contributed their share to the discussion. The literature upon the silver issue which has appeared since 1873, would fill many volumes. Hence I say that the question is not a new one; and yet I am confronted with another singular fact at the outset of this investigation, that before 1883 it was a new question, or rather it had no existence at all. Prior to this date we heard nothing about a gold basis or a cheap silver dollar; the press was not teeming as now, with long dissertations upon this everlasting silver question. Trade assemblies and farmers alliances were not taking action upon it. Political parties were not shaken by it, and politicians were not hanging on the ragged edge by reason of its prominence. What gave this question such an impetus? What has caused all this upheaval and discussion about the dollar of the daddies? It was the Sherman Act, so called, of 1872, demontizing Silver. It was accomplished by simply dropping the words "standard dollar" from the mint law and substituting a "trade dollar" of 420 grains. In the senate debate, pending the passage of the bill there was not the slightest allusion to any change of the standard, and it is doubtful whether any senator, except Sherman, understood its real significance. From the remotest period of history silver had been one of the two great money metals of the world. Money has become the very life blood of trade and commerce. Every civilized government in modern times has assumed absolute control of all national money, to the exclusion of both private individuals and foreign governments. Every government has used gold or silver or both, without limitation, but the use of silver has been more general and wide spread than that of gold. Up to the 12th day of February, 1873, the legal standard of the United States was bi-metalic, that is, both gold and silver. Neither metal was given any preference over the other. The unit of value was the dollar; this consisted either of 25.8-10 grains of standard gold, or 412 1-3 grains of standard silver. Both metals were freely coined and both were full legal tender for all debts, both public and private. Now, what was the effect of this demonitizing upon the national finances? It practically destroyed silver as money, made it a mere merchantable commodity and made gold the sole standard of value throughout the United States. The inevitable effect of this was to appreciate the value of gold, the only legal tender money, and depreciate the value of all commodities that money would buy. But they tell us "The gold dollar cannot change, its value is intrinsic, it is always worth, just 100 cents, other things have gone down, that is all." This is mere pettifogging with words. The fact is that one assertion is correllative of the other and both are true. When we say that commodities have fallen 30 per cent. by that very assertion we state the fact that gold has risen 43 per cent; that is, it will buy 43 per cent more. David A. Wells, in his work on "Recent Economic Changes" gives a series of tables showing a decline of prices during the past twenty years of about 30 per cent; silver has declined in about the same ratio. Hence we see that silver is the stable metal rather than gold; its purchasing power, compared with commodities, remains relatively the same, but gold has risen in value, thus decreasing its purchasing power. The friends of a single gold standard wax eloquent over an honest dollar, and inveigh against the evils of a cheap silver dollar. If our present silver dollar is "a cheap dollar" what made it so and who made it so? The Sherman act that struck down the white metal made it cheap, and the men who voted for that act, committed a monstrous outrage against every debtor in the land. It has been the chief cause of the general business depression of the past 15 years. The practical destruction of one of the great money metals threw an additional burden on the other and thereby enhanced its value. To my mind this proposition is as plain as a pikestaff. Now, which is the honest dollar? The silver dollar treats all classes, both debtor and creditor, alike; the gold dollar hammers down prices, reduces values, produces business depression, robs the laborer of a portion of his wages, increases the debt of every man in the country and damages every man except the money lender. I submit to you in all candor: Which is the honester dollar of the two?

The demonitizing act is what made the silver dollar cheap. Silver and gold ran along side by side from the foundation of the government until the passage of that act, with but slight relative changes in their value; some times one metal was a trifle in the lead and sometimes the other, but in practical use they were both at par; silver was at par with gold and gold was at par with silver; there was no cheap dollar then. We maintain that the dear gold dollar is the instrumentality which has raised Cain with the finances and entailed our present business depression upon us. But if the cheap silver dollar has done the mischief, then I say restore it to its old place as a money metal, which will soon raise it to a par with gold, and both gold and silver will be worth 100 cents.

Let us show you a few of the results of this rise in value of money, some of the legitimate effects of the single gold standard. A very large proportion of the world's business is done with borrowed money, the exact proportion no man can tell. A late report of the Controller of Currency states that on the 2d day of October 1890 the aggregate loans of the National banks amounted to $1,970,000,000 and the state banks to $1,900,000,000, amounting to nearly four billions in all. Even this enormous sum only represents a part of the actual indebtdness on loans in existence, as it includes but a small proportion of real estate mortgages, railroad and municipal bonds. The loan of any sum of money must preceed the payment by a longer or shorter interval of time. Hence if money is raising in value, the borrower must pay back dollars more valuable than those he received. Every man engaged in farming, manufacturing or any kind of productive industry, must meet his payments out of the commodities he produces. If a dollar becomes more valuable it will take more commodities to offset it and if the farmer owes $1,000 and wheat brings one dollar a bushel, he can pay the debt with one thousand bushels of wheat, but if wheat falls to 70 cents he must part with 1,430 bushels to pay the same debt. Suppose wheat had remained at one dollar, and the government had stepped in by some official act and raised the words and figures in the mortgage to $1,430, the robbery would be apparent to any school boy ten years old. Yet, the government by passing a law which contracts the volume of currency and raised the value of the money standard, thus forcing down the prices of commodities, has done this very thing indirectly. It compels the farmer to use 1430 bushels of wheat to pay a debt, which 1000 bushels ought in equity to pay. It is simply robbery under the forms of law, that's all. If the government received a share of the plunder, there might be some excuse for it, but every dollar goes into the pockets of the money lender. Probably but few contracts made back in 1873 are now in existence, but that does not change the principle. Every contract made then and due now would subject the borrower to an additional 43 per cent. to pay his debts. We gather from statistics from 1873 to 1887, the average annual rise in money was about 3 per cent. During those years the men who contracted a debt at 7 per cent and paid it in one year, actually paid ten per cent. and three per cent additional for each year that payment was delayed. The friends of the gold standard maintain that the quantity of money is a matter of little concern, that the credit is the main thing, and if the quality of money is good, it will sustain a sound basis for credit. And yet, since 1873 gold has not deteriorated in quality, an atom, a gold dollar is just as good as it was prior to 1873, and still prices are collapsing and business depression rules. If this dear gold dollar is to bring about a business millenium, is it not about time that the millenium had begun?

Another objection urged against free coinage is that it would make the United States a dumping ground for all the cheap silver of the world. This would depreciate silver, drive gold from circulation and produce contraction and business distress. Ah, yes, a policy producing contraction of the currency would produce business distress, would it? But our present gold standard has produced a contraction of the currency which is the chief cause or our business distress. The fact is however that this is only a surmise. The nations of Europe are not overburdened with money themselves. They could not part with all their cheap silver if they wished to. After coming here it would be used to purchase our surplus crops and manufactories or invested in permanent industries. In either event I fail to see how it could injure us. It might tend to lower the price of gold and raise the price of commodities and that is exactly what our finances need.

The chief result of the single gold standard, we maintain, is this: That the amount of gold is insufficient to the wants of business and that under our present policy a gradual and continual contraction has resulted, not absolutely, but relatively. The volume of currency should increase in the same ratio with business, but it has not, and this failure to keep pace with the business needs has produced contraction practically, with its long train of deterforated values, reduced prices and business depression. Silver should be restored to its old status as a money metal on an equality with gold. Silver would then soon rise to par with gold, carrying the prices of commodities with it, the business interests, would possess sufficient money metals on which to base our growing business credits, and the masses of the people would have the benefit of the few millions of additional currency to which they are equitably entitled.

We do not pretend to entertain the belief that the question of free coinage involves any such alternative as national prosperity or national ruin. We believe that under any system of finance that is at all likely to be adopted in future, the American Republic will move steadily onward in splendid and progressive development, and that for ages to come our people will continue, as they are now, the happiest and most prosperous upon the face of the earth.

OBITUARY.

Lodema Sherman was born in Springport, Cayuga Co., New York, October 5, 1814. She died in Tecumseh township Jan. 29, 1892, at the residence of Mrs. Matthews, her adopted daughter, where her home had been for nearly seven years. Mrs. Sherman became a Christian in early life. For more than thirty years she had been a devoted member of the First Methodist Episcopal church of Tecumseh and was very highly esteemed by the older members, who knew her best. After her conversion the cause of Christ held a supreme place in her affections. Her Christian life was noted for its simple, constant devotion to our holy Christianity. Her love for the church of her choice was ardent and loyal to the end. She was a generous and cheerful contributor to its support as far as her means would permit. Her confidence in God was strong and unwavering to the end of life's journey. Her last illness was brief. She met death without fear, and while anxiously waiting for release from pain and sorrow, with great peacefulness she fell asleep in Jesus. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. O. J. Perrin from the residence of Mr. Matthews, Sunday afternoon, Jan. 31., and were largely attended by old neighbors and sympathizing friends.

Marcellus A. Gray, whose approaching death was mentioned last week, breathed his last about five o'clock Saturday. Funeral services were held at the house on Monday afternoon, Rev. D. R. Shier officiating, aided by a quartette of singers—Mrs. Breymann, Rose Page, E. B. Butler and H. H. Spencer. Mr. Gray was born in Rupert, Vt., July 3, 1825., making his age 66 years, six months and twenty days. He learned the stone cutter's trade in New York State, and from there came to Adrian in 1868. He afterward lived in Tecumseh and Blissfield, and moved to Morenci about seven years since. Besides his wife deceased left two sons—Frank L. Gray, now an invalid at home, and Fred Gray, of Detroit. Mr. Gray was in unfortunate circumstances, being without means or property. Those who knew him well regarded him as a man of honest intentions. Mrs. Gray and son desire to express their great gratitude for the sympathy and help of which they have been recipients during their affliction.

The above article was written Tuesday, following an interview with Frank Gray, who was then sitting in his chair and conversed with courage and hopefulness. But death had set its mark upon him—he, too, was a victim of consumption—and about 8 o'clock Thursday evening his life went out. Just a few moments before he died his brother, a compositor on the Free Press, arrived from Detroit. The departed young man was 38 years old and also a stone-cutter by trade. He leaves a 17-year-old son and a wife, who lived in Tecumseh and who are now here to attend the funeral, which will occur at the house at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The mother of deceased, in her double bereavement, has the community's heartfelt sympathy. Truly her's is a grievous sorrow, losing husband and son within so short a time.

The above notice was taken from the Morenci Observer. The family lived in Tecumseh many years ago and Mr. Gray conducted a marble shop here. Frank was always an industrious, honest man, but the fates seemed to be against him. Frank had been acting as travelling salesman for some time for the Best Marble Co. of Princeton, Ill., and went home to Morenci about five weeks ago. The funeral services were held at the house, Rev. D. R. Shier officiating. The family have many old acquaintances in Tecumseh who will deeply sympathize with the survivors in their bereavement.

IN MEMORIAM.

Head Quarters, Beers Post, No. 140, G. A. R., Tecumseh, Feb. 15th 1892,

On Feb. 10th, 1892, at his home in the town of Clinton, Comrade Seth P. Sheldon, a loved and honored member of this Post, was relieved by the Great Commander of the Universe, from the cares and conflicts of this life, to join those who have gone before in that bright and glorious camp where there shall be no weary marches, no enemy to annoy, no battles to fight. During the war of the rebellion Comrade Sheldon served faithfully as a true patriot in Co. C. 14th Vt. Infty., enduring the privations and hardships of the camp, the march and the battle field with soldierly fortitude and courage. On his return home he removed from his native state to Warsaw, N. Y., and afterwards to his late home in the town of Clinton, Lenawee Co., Mich., and united with this Post soon after its organization. We shall miss his cordial greeting at our gatherings, and while we deplore the broken ranks, the vacant chair, we will not forget to emulate his many virtues as a soldier, a citizen, a christian, a friend and a comrade, and while we mourn our loss, we will not forget to extend our heartfelt sympathy to those who mourn the loss of a dear and loved husband and father, and we will ever extend to them that true fraternal sympathy which was welded in the fires on our country's alter.

Tramp, tramp, tramp, the boys are marching.
Onward hastening we will come
Soon to join that great, grand army,
In that Celestial Home.

Paradoxical as it may appear, when a man has got low down in the world he may be said to be gone up.

Additional Local.

The venerable Francis A. Dewey, of Cambridge, who has been in feeble health for the past year or more, departed this life on Saturday last, at the ripe old age of 80 years. He came to Tecumseh in the year 1829 and has been a resident of this county ever since. The funeral obsequies were held at his residence at Cambridge Junction, on Tuesday afternoon and were attended by a large concourse of old pioneers and acquaintances. He had been a leading spirit in the state and county pioneer societies for many years and was regarded as one of Lenawee's best citizens. An obituary tribute will appear hereafter.

The HERALD mentioned the fact last week that Miss Lucy Train had been summoned to Butler, Ind., by the serious illness of her brother, Geo. S. Train. He died soon after her arrival there and she returned on Friday with his remains. The funeral was held at his mother's home on Sunday morning, in charge of Co. C., George having been a member of the company during his residence here. The boys turned out about fifty strong, and the old city band furnished the musical escort. The services were very impressive and were attended by a large number of the old friends and acquaintances of the deceased.

The Lotus Glee Club, assisted by Miss Minnie Marshall, reciter, appeared at the Wagner last evening in the fourth entertainment of the Y. M. C. A. course. The house was packed to its fullest capacity, and an exquisitely rendered programme was listened to by a spell-bound audience. The entertainment was one of the most successful of the series and gave unqualified satisfaction. One of the features of the singing was the distinctness with which every word was pronounced. Miss Marshall captivated the audience with her elegant recitals, and was recalled four times in succession.—Bradford, Pa., Daily Record.

The "Twice-a-Week" St. Louis Republic is bigger, cheaper, and better than any weekly paper published in America. Other papers may claim to pay more for their news, but it is unquestionably true that the "Twice-a-Week" Republic prints more news, and fresher news, than any weekly paper does or can print. It is issued on Tuesday and Friday of every week. During the four winter months each issue contains eight pages, making sixteen pages a week and not less than fourteen pages, of seven columns each, any week in the year. Five separate editions are printed: one each for Missouri, Illinois, Texas, Arkansas and Kansas, and a general edition for other States. Another big attraction is the special tariff department, edited by Hon. Wm. L. Wilson, M. C. These special features, which no weekly paper can claim, combine to render The "Twice-a-Week Republic indispensable during this great campaign year, 1892. Send one dollar now for a full year's subscription (104 papers), or address for free sample copy THE REPUBLIC, St. Louis, Mo.

John Murphy, who bought the old Culbertson farm in Clinton township last year, is improving it very materially and is going to make a nice homestead of it.

The Adrian Press says that John Britton is President of the Britton Democratic Club. Well, well, what will happen next? But perhaps the compositor meant the Dramatic club.

Says the Detroit Free Press: An Adrian parson has been slumming and is preaching about what he saw. He spent three minutes in each of twenty-three saloons in a single evening, saw 275 persons take a drink and saw church members playing pedro for beer. He is what might be called a "rounder."

Puck of February 17th has a grand cartoon by Keppler, entitled: "The Greatest Effort of His Life." Senator Hill, having placed his collar around the necks of the political bosses of New York State, is trying to place it on that of the Independent Democracy. As pictured in Puck, it looks like an impossible feat.

Manchester will have electric lights. The council gave a ten-year franchise and a three-year contract for four arc lights and fifty thirty-two candle power incandescent street lights, to the Kingsley Milling Co., of this village, last evening. The lights are to be turned on May 1. The Thompson-Houston system will probably be used.—Manchester Enterprise.

The Lotus Glee Club proved itself to be second to no quartette that has been heard in Utica in many years, and Miss Marshall found high favor with the large audience from the outset. She is a reader of exceptional ability, and possessing an attractive presence and unusual ease and grace on the platform, it is no wonder that she was repeatedly and enthusiastically encored.—Utica, N. Y., Observer.

The present winter has been very unfavorable for the shipment of ice over the Cincinnati, Jackson & Mackinaw. The ice business is one of the main features of this road, and this year the weather was severe enough to freeze ice any place north of Cincinnati. The ice taken from local creeks and ponds is not as good as that shipped from northern lakes, but people wanting ice at the lowest figure manage to make the poorer quality answer their purpose.

True and tried friends are always welcome, consequently "Vick's Flora Guide" is sure of a warm reception, especially when dressed as daintily as this year. The "Nellie Lewis" Carnation on the front of cover, and "Brilliant Poppies" on the back, are unusually attractive, and the numerous colored plates of flowers and vegetables are certainly works of art and merit. The first twenty-four pages, printed in violet ink, describe Novelties and Specialties. Send ten cents to James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y., and procure a copy of this attractive and useful catalogue. It costs nothing, as the ten cents can be deducted from the first order.

Fine winter weather.

Dept. H. W. Stevens spent most of last week courting at Adrian.

David McConnell is quite seriously ill with an attack of the grip.

The grip is letting up in this vicinity, although there are several cases of it yet.

Rev. W. W. Dewey, of Cadillac, filled the Baptist pulpit last Sunday most acceptably.

Detroit is preparing for a big crowd and a big time at Grover Cleveland's reception next Tuesday.

Call at J. C. Hazlett's and examine his stock of spring suitings just received. They are good goods and nobby styles.

Frank Munson, of Bridgewater, favored the HERALD with a call yesterday. He believes in lifting his subscription in good season.

Rev. Edward Mott, of Raisin Valley, will preach at the Friends church next Sabbath morning, and the pastor, David Lewis, will preach in the evening.

DIED, in Butler, Ind., February 11th, 1892, of consumption, resulting from the grippe, George S. Train, aged 40 years and 7 months. Funeral from the home of his mother, in Tecumseh, on Sunday, February 14th.

Haight & Calkins, the new Britton firm, are going to make one of the business fixtures of that hustling village. They are deservedly popular in both their personal and business relations and have evidently come to stay.

Rev. J. I. Gulick, having sufficiently recovered from an attack of the la grippe, will resume regular work next Sabbath. Appointments as follows: Public service at the South Macon church at 10:30 a. m., at East Macon church at 2:30 p. m., and at the North Macon church at 7:30 p. m.

Among the best farmers and noblest men in this section of the country, Seth P. Sheldon, stood in the first rank. His untimely death will be lamented by a very large circle of acquaintances and friends. The funeral last Saturday was attended by a large concourse of neighbors, the G. A. R. Post, of which he was a member, attending in a body. A beautiful tribute to his memory appears elsewhere.

Mr. E. L. Teeple, the artist who bought out M. P. Brown, has got nicely settled down to business and he is turning out some excellent work. We paid his gallery a visit yesterday and saw a few group pictures and cabinet photos lately executed by him which are very fine specimens of the photographic art. Mr. Teeple will certainly prove to be a worthy successor to Mr. Brown in his line of business.

The oldest inhabitant cannot recall such a brilliant display of the aurora borealis as was seen in this latitude Saturday evening. It lasted about an hour between the hours of seven and eight. The entire northern sky, reaching almost from the horizon to the zenith, was a crimson blaze, streaked at intervals with white flashes. The phenomena was visible quite generally through the northern belt of states.

The Britton Dramatic Club will repeat the play, "The Confederate Spy," next Monday evening at Britton. They will present the play at Petersburg this week Saturday evening. It is no flattery to say that the club is a first-class amateur troupe and the Spy seems to be especially adapted to their talents. They will doubtless be greeted with a crowded house again next Monday evening.

A delighted audience repeatedly encored the various numbers of the programme rendered by the Boston Lotus Glee Club and their assistant, Miss Minnie Marshall, the talented elocutionist, at Old City Hall last evening. Miss Marshall was charmingly picturesque, which is half the battle with a lady, and added to the personality was talent of a high degree, which made her a great favorite with the audience.—Pittsburgh, Pa., Post.

There has been no change in the personnel of the Club since its appearance here last year, and their efforts were as artistic and pleasurable as before. For a beautiful and finished example of chorus work, the finest contribution of the Club was Goldbeck's "Sands o' Dee," and was given with a perfection of detail which could hardly be surpassed. Miss Marshall's numbers were given with that finished articulation and expression which entitle her to take rank as one of our leading reciters.—Syracuse, N. Y., Standard.

Louise Phelps went to Chicago Wednesday morning.

Mrs. A. W. Slayton, who has had a severe attack of la grippe, is improving slowly.

James Tefft, of Saranac, Mich., brother of C. C. Tefft, of this village, died of grip last Saturday.

Prof. Skinner has a bran new cornet. It is pronounced a fine instrument by those capable of judging.

Phebe U. Hunt has rented her place, and expects to make Adrian her permanent residence hereafter.

We have just opened our new spring dress goods. They are beautiful; please call and see them. ANDERSON & Co.

Married, by E. Hurry Esq., at the home of John Wilson, in the town of Franklin, Wm. Wilson, of Franklin, and Maud E. Hindes, of Dundee, Feb. 17th, 1892.

Rumor says we are to have a grand leap year party the last of the month. Be sure to get a good seat in the gallery for at that time our ladies will take the lead in more ways than one.

A shooting party will do a little long range target practice on Sand Lake to-morrow. Several farmers of that vicinity have abandoned their dwellings and driven off their live stock till after the shooting.

Nearly all the scholars of the high school met at P. C. Snell's last evening to give George Harris a birthday surprise. Clarence Hurry could not come and sent his regrets in the shape of some very nice apples to which they all did justice. They all went away feeling that they had spent a very pleasant evening.

John J. Orr's dog, Rover, while on exhibition at Jackson on the bench show, got away from his keepers and was lost. He was found some distance from Jackson and returned to his master by Thos. Parker of the police force. The actions of both John and Rover easily demonstrated to the most casual observer that they belonged to each other and further identification was unnecessary. Mr. Orr. feels very grateful for the courtesy of Mr. Parker and the police force during the search.

FIFTY-SECOND CONGRESS.

Work of the National Lawmakers in Washington.

A Daily Summary of the Proceedings in the Senate and House—Bills Passed and New Measures Introduced.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—Bills were reported adversely in the senate yesterday to increase the circulating medium by issuing treasury notes based on gold and silver coin and bullion; for the retirement of national bank notes; the free coinage of silver; promotion of the international free coinage of silver, and for the loan of money to the farmers of Indiana. A joint resolution was introduced for the appointment of a commission of five senators, seven representatives and three experts to take evidence and inquire into the depressed condition of the agricultural interests and the low prices of agricultural products, especially of cotton. The president sent the nomination of William H. Grinnell, of New York, to be third assistant secretary of state.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—The time in the senate yesterday was occupied in discussing the bill providing for the public printing and binding and the distribution of public documents. Mr. Gorman, of Maryland, presented the credentials of his colleague, Mr. Gibson, and the oath of office was administered.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Bills were introduced in the senate yesterday appropriating $16,000,000 to improve navigation on the Mississippi, and for statues to Gen. John Stark and Gen. Zachary Taylor. The bill to amend the law as to the coasting trade on the great lakes was passed. Adjourned to Monday.

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—The first adjournment resolution offered in the house this session made its appearance yesterday. It was offered by Mr. Bushnell (Wis.) and provided for the final adjournment of the first session of congress on Tuesday, May 31. It was referred to the committee on rules. Bills were introduced to promote the safety of national banks; authorizing the detail of army officers for special duty in connection with the world's fair; providing that persons employed to guard or defend property of any kind shall be residents of the state where the property is located. The bill placing the secretary of agriculture in the line of presidential succession after the secretary of the interior was passed.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—A resolution for the appointment of a committee of five to investigate the methods of business in the bureau of pensions was adopted in the house yesterday. Mr. Bland's bill for the free coinage of gold and silver and for the issue of coin notes was favorably reported. A resolution was introduced providing for the final adjournment of the first session of congress on Tuesday, May 31.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—Bills were passed in the house on Saturday for the better control of and to promote the safety of national banks; to abolish the minimum punishment for the violation of the revenue laws; allowing the board of managers of the national soldiers' home to appoint as its officers soldiers without regard to rank. A bill was introduced to retire the circulation of national banks, to issue legal tender notes in lieu thereof, to reduce the interest-bearing public debt and to amend the law in relation thereto. A resolution was introduced appropriating $2,000 for an investigation by the committee on manufactures of the so-called "sweating" system of tenement house labor, upon manufactures of clothing and other manufactures and upon wages and prices in such manufactures. Speaker Crisp announced the following special committee to investigate the pension bureau: Wheeler (Mich.), Litler (N. Y.), Dungan (O.), Lind (Minn.), Brosius (Pa.).

A COAL CORNER.

One Is Threatened by the Reading Company's Latest Move.

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—Dispatches telling of the gigantic combination effected by President McLeod, of the Reading railway, by which the Reading secures control of the Lehigh Valley and New Jersey Central railroads and their vast coal properties, and proposes to combine the anthracite coal producing and carrying interests into one management, created a tremendous sensation in the stock exchanges and in railway and coal circles throughout the country.

Messrs. Drexel, Morgan & Co. announced officially Thursday afternoon that the leases and contracts which were signed Wednesday night have now been ratified by the boards of directors of the Reading, New Jersey Central and Lehigh Valley railway companies, by which was effected the combination of the anthracite coal interests. Samuel Sloan, president of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, said to a reporter regarding the combination:

"The Lackawanna is thoroughly in sympathy with the combination. While we have made no formal agreement with the Reading we shall act in harmony with that company, and we shall not be a competitive factor in the coal trade. We shall act with the combined interests both in the output and price of coal. The object is not to raise the price, but to regulate production and to make prices uniform."

SPURGEON'S FUNERAL.

Tribute of the English People to the Memory of the Great Preacher.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—All that is mortal of Charles Haddon Spurgeon has been laid to rest in Norwood cemetery, and the interment of the once great divine was made the occasion for such an undenominational demonstration as probably has never before been seen in the united kingdom. The funeral services yesterday were very simple, being confined to prayers, the singing of appropriate hymns and brief addresses by Rev. James Spurgeon and Rev. Dr. Pierson.

At the conclusion of the last prayer and while the benediction was being pronounced the lid was placed upon the coffin and it was removed to the hearse in waiting. Then the solemn procession moved to Norwood cemetery. One hundred carriages followed the hearse, and behind these came a torrent of people on foot, filling the roadway and the sidewalks and extending back farther than the eye could reach. It was estimated that not less than 20,000 people thus paid mute testimony to the memory of the great preacher. At the grave there was a short prayer, the hymn "Abide with Me" was sung and the casket was lowered to its last resting place.

The steamer Missouri will carry it free to Libau. The ship leaves early in March.

MARSHALLTOWN, Ia., Feb. 13.—Miss Julia Long, a teacher in the Marshalltown schools, was shot twice in the head and dangerously wounded at 9 o'clock Thursday night by Sam Kelly, an Iowa Central railroad engineer, who then turned the revolver upon himself and blew his brains out. THOUSANDS DYING.

A Frightful State of Affairs in Russia.

The Starving Peasants Forced to Kill Their Horses in Order to Obtain Food. The Thermometer 58 Degrees Below Zero.

A TALE OF HORROR.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—A dispatch from Penza, capital of the government of that name, in the southwestern part of what is known as Great Russia, says that the thermometer registers 58 degrees below zero, and that there is terrible suffering among the peasants. A number of men have been frozen to death on the high roads, and so intensely cold is it that birds drop dead from the trees in which they have sought shelter. None of the children in Penza are allowed to go to school.

A quantity of grain for the famine sufferers has arrived at Penza, but it is impossible to distribute it among the peasants in the surrounding country owing to the fact that nearly all the horses have been killed for food or sold to procure money with which to buy the absolute necessaries of life. Five thousand horses have been killed in Penza alone, and it is estimated that several million draft animals have been killed throughout the empire since autumn.

Typhus fever, smallpox and diphtheria are decimating the inhabitants. Around Penza 200 of the peasants have died from these diseases. The dispatch adds that in the governments of Samara, Saratov and Nijni Novgorod, the condition is far worse than in Penza. In those three governments thousands of the peasants have fallen victims to the hunger, typhus and the other epidemic diseases. On the governments of Glarkov and Kazan, the typhus fever is especially terrible in its ravages. The inhabitants are dying off by the hundreds. Whole families have been stricken by the disease, and have died, not a single member recovering.

The records show that in the vicinity of Penza, 17,986 persons, men, women and children, are daily fed by charity.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 13.—The government has granted the further sum of 60,000,000 roubles to be expended for the relief of the sufferers in the famine districts.

BOMBAY, Feb. 13.—Official notice has been given that a famine prevails in this presidency, and that the famine code will be applied over an area of 5,000 square miles in the districts of Bijapur, Bolgaum and Dharwar. These districts contain a population of 1,500,000 persons.

HELENA, Mont., Feb. 13.—Gov. Toole has issued a proclamation setting forth that the peasantry of Russia, embracing 25,000,000 people, is suffering from famine; that the only relief rests with the generosity of the people, that the people of Montana are blessed with abundance and prosperity. Believing the people of Montana ever ready to respond to just demands of humanity, he recommends prompt and generous contributions.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Feb. 13.—Gov. Pattison has issued a proclamation relative to the Russian famine and calling for contributions.

SCARED TO DEATH.

A Young Girl Dies from Fright at Being Chased by Two Men.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Feb. 12.—Caroline Gardner, the 15-year-old daughter of a coal miner living at Federal Station, a few miles south of this city, was frightened to death Wednesday night by two men chasing her. The young girl went to the coal sheds shortly after dark and two men who were coming up the road started after her. She ran into the house, and fell on the floor in convulsions, from which she never recovered. The men were recognized as Thomas and James Skidmore, two miners. The coroner held them for manslaughter.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 13.—On Friday President W. I. Squire, of the republican state league of clubs, called the state convention of delegates to order in the Grand opera house and after invocation by Rev. Mr. Green, of Wilmington, read his address. His mention of Gov. McKinley's name in connection with the presidency called for uproarious applause. Secretary Chester's report showed that 300 new clubs were organized during the last state campaign, and there are now 550 in the state.

TOPEKA, Kan., Feb. 12.—The grand lodge of the Knights of Reciprocity has issued a circular announcing that within the next ninety days every state in the union will be organized. THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dressis of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent;
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory.

MENDING STOCKINGS.

Pair of baby's stockings!
They are small and black and plain,
But I find sweet satisfaction
In looking them over again.

I mended these same stockings
It must be two years ago—
And then they were laid in the drawer;
There was no one to wear them, you know.

For our own beautiful baby
Had gone to a fairer clime;
She had entered the golden city
Where we hope to meet her some time.

And though in the mending basket
There still were stockings small,
There were none for a tiny baby
With daintiest feet of all.

Yet again from the open Heaven
A wonderful gift has come,
And the sound of a baby's cooing
Is heard again in our home.

And tiny feet are moving
Along the nursery floor,
And dainty baby stockings
Are needed now once more.

Is it strange that I find a pleasure
In taking them in my hand?
They speak of our newest treasure,
And of one in the Fatherland.

—Mary J. Porter, in Harper's Bazar.

ONE OF THE MISSING.

An Old Soldier Who Wandered Back to His Boyhood Home.

A man was walking along the high way that belted with white the green expanse of a Connecticut meadow. Little puffs of white dust rose at each footfall, and hung behind him in a lengthening wall. He came heavily, slowly, the impersonation of weariness, yet steadily. There was that in his gait which associates itself in the mind with bodies of men in column. He seemed the material part of an invisible whole. His gaze was fixed ahead, as though on the back of a front-rank file, and the momentum of marching comrades swept him along.

Yet the meadow farmers and the dwellers in the village, whose church steeple rose beyond a fringe of trees, distinguished him only as one of that irregular army of foragers against whom, as reputable citizens, they were arrayed. They would have given no attention to such fine individual distinctions even had their critical quality been educated to it, and it was not. Thirty years had gone by since they had been enlivened by the presence of the military; and then it had been for but a few days and their materialized patriotism marched away in blue to the southern war. No. Tramps were inimical to good order and to safety of life and property. And to be in very bad odor in the village, a stranger had but to present himself travel-stained and tattered.

He marched up the road in that unseen column, a man of defeats. Sometimes he leaned so far forward that his balance became uncertain, and he wavered to the plumb. Men at work, afield leaned on their hoes as he passed, to regard him with hostile eyes. With some his unsteadiness was the occasion for derisive mirth. But the elder ones grimly forecast his detention in the calaboose, the cost of his maintenance, the tax it brought upon them, and resumed work with a fierce sense of personal injury. And the tramp, after each wearied lapse, compelled himself to attention, and marched on.

White, snug farmhouses stood now and then along the road. As he came abreast of one a woman appeared at the door, but, seeing him, she hastily recentered and fastened the door. The tramping man turned into the dooryard, but he halted as the woman appeared at a chamber window, fluttering her arms as though scaring chickens. She called to him, nervously, apprehensively:

"Go right away. I've got nothing for you."

At once he turned and took up his line of march along the dusty road. The woman observed the heavy, mechanical way in which he put his legs successively forward, his arms hanging like sticks of wood at his sides, and felt pity for him.

"I'm almost sorry I sent him away," she said. But she did not call him back, and he passed out of her sight, leaving, however, the cadence of his monotonous, sing-song step, to which her mind set itself for the rest of that day.

In another house, as he approached, a girl was singing shrilly a Sunday school song:

"But sweeter than the lily's breath,
And than the rose more fair,
The tender love of human hearts
Upspringing everywhere."

Then the song broke off, and the singer called, warningly: "Mother, there's a tramp coming up the road!"

And the voice of the mother came sharply out to him: "See if the front door's locked."

He plodded past, watched furtively from behind window blinds. He swung along painfully, for his joints were merely worn out, rusty hinges by which his limbs hung. The hot sun sweltered him; the fine dust choked him; his heart was gone out of him. Still he went on, like a tired soldier expecting the welcome "Halt! Rest!" until he reached a tree by the roadside. On the grass beneath he stretched himself, and lay motionless.

Slowly his fatigue lessened. By and by he sat up. The dust of the march had settled thickly in the deep lines and wrinkles of his face, and gave it a drawn, sharpened look. His mouth was firmly set, and his dim eyes looked out resentfully at the bright world. He felt the utter friendliness of a lonely man, and he talked to himself:

"They think me capable of anything," said he, bitterly. "It's 'not what I have been, it's what I am—a tramp—they judge me by. A war record don't count, nor three more enlistments, nor knocking about in the mines. I'm a tramp.

"Thirty years ago, when we marched out of this town, there were cheers and wavings. There's wavings enough now, and they mean 'go,' same as then. Only there's a curse with it now, instead of a cheer."

He pulled a square of hard bread from his pocket, moistened it in the rivulet at the foot of the tree, and bit it savagely. He heard a door at the next farmhouse shut, and knew a woman had come out towards him. He expected a sharp order to move on. She had nearly reached him, when he looked up and saw that she held a cup in her hand, extended towards him.

"Would you like this milk?" said she.

He put his hand out slowly, and with the cautious alertness of a dog that covets a proffered bone, but doubts the sincerity of the offer. Then his hand closed on the cup and he drained it. His eyes were on the woman's face, expressing wonder, incredulity, astonishment. He had had so little use for the sense of gratitude that he hardly recognized and expressed it; but at last he said: "Thank you."

She was a large, strong farm wife, and as she took the cup she smiled at his satisfaction. "It's more filling than water," said she. "I saw you here, and that you was not one of the begging kind, so I outs to you."

"I stopped at one house down here," he replied, "but not to beg. I don't beg. I wanted to ask a question. The second house," he added, tentatively.

"Oh, yes. The old Ames place. I guess you didn't stop long. If Hiram Ames had been alive there, he'd have kept you a week. But he's dead." She talked on garrulously, pleased to have a new listener. She did not know many people. "Why, you're sick," she said, suddenly.

But the tramp shook his head.

"A little tired, that's all, and disappointed. I've come a good ways to see Hiram Ames. I could have told him something about his brother."

"What, Jed? He went to war and was missing after one of those battles. They gave up all hopes of him, and now there's a beautiful monument to him in the burying-ground, right beside of Hiram's. You don't mean to tell me he isn't dead?"

"He is as good as dead," said the tramp, rising.

He thanked the woman again, and made her a half-military salute. Then he moved on, in a rising cloud of dust, till in the distance his figure appeared vaguely large and multiplied. And the old wife, shading her eyes and looking after him, cried:

"I declare if it don't seem like a lot of men, all keeping step together."

In the heart of the village a large, official-looking man roughly took the tramp by the shoulder, and said: "Here, you come with me."

"I've done nothing," he protested.

"And you won't have a chance to-day. I'll put a lock on you for to-night, and to-morrow you leave town." He thrust the tramp into the naked calaboose, turned the key, and left him there. The tramp went to the single window and looked out. He saw roofs and places that memory made familiar. The spire of the church steeple rose supreme, and through the trees he caught glimpses of white marbles in the burial place. There lay the man he had tramped far to see. His mind reverted to the kindly old woman who had gossiped to him, and then to the graves again.

That monument to the missing soldier, now. Could he see it? That tall one, perhaps—no, it was too pretentious. The epitaph of a private of the line would be lost on it. It would be curious reading, that epitaph. Something like this: "Jedediah Ames. Born 1840. A soldier. Missing after Shiloh." There could be nothing more.

He could have told a longer story had Hiram lived. He could have told it in the glance of a eye. Then he could have spoken of wounds, hospital, western service. It was not worth while now.

The past seemed insignificant to this tramp. The years of his wandering were but a point of time, and the present day never-ending. His mind dwelt upon it—how, with the sun, he had entered upon familiar scenes and knew that his journey's end was reached. That sunrise was far in the past now, and the day was eternity.

By and by he lay down on the floor. The sun had set, and a rain commenced. It made the air damp and chilly, and the tramp shivered. He rose restlessly, and returned to the window, but the outside was lost in blackness. From time to time jagged lightning tore the clouds apart, and through the rents the torrents poured.

He stood there and muttered something to himself—it may have been a prayer—after which he swallowed the contents of a little vial.

Then he lay down again. He moaned a little, and shivered as with cold. Presently he breathed heavily; he was asleep.

As it was rainy, the constable did not provide the tramp with supper; and the next morning he found him still lying on the floor.

"Come, get up!" cried the constable, and with his foot he turned the tramp over to awaken him. With superstitious terror he then saw the man was dead.

Afterwards they interred the body of the tramp in the Ames burial lot, and cut the date of his death on the monument of the missing soldier.—Geo. I. Putnam, in Harper's Weekly.

Equals.

Every incident should be welcomed which, in a country where offended "honor" must be satisfied by questionable means, tends to make the practice of dueling absurd. Many a sensible man has escaped the lifelong remorse attendant on "bringing down his man" by the simple method of throwing cold water on the person's injured sensibilities in the beginning.

One day, a distinguished notary, while breakfasting with a friend at a cafe in Paris, indulged in some stinging comments on the public acts of Marshal Marmont. Suddenly, another gentleman, dining at a neighboring table, rose and approached them, his mustache bristling with anger.

"Sir," cried he, tragically, "you shall give me satisfaction!"

"Are you Marshal Marmont?" quietly asked the notary.

"I have not that honor," was the reply, "but I am his chief aide-de-camp."

"Give me your card, then, sir," said the notary. "I will send you my head clerk."—Youth's Companion.

Some people imagine they are making giant strides every time they kick.

I feel it my duty to say a few words in regard to Ely's Cream Balm, and I do so entirely without solicitation. I have used it more or less half a year, and have found it to be most admirable. I have suffered from catarrh of the worst kind ever since I was a little boy, and I never hoped for cure, but Cream Balm seems to do that. Many of my acquaintances have used it with excellent results.—Oscar Ostrum, 45 Warren Ave., Chicago, Ill.

The lecture course committee have decided to add another entertainment to this season's course and have engaged Chas. T. Underhill to come here in April. Holders of tickets will undoubtedly remember that Mr. Underhill gave one of our best entertainments last year and he will be welcomed accordingly.

The lecture given by Chas. Townsend, of Jackson, last Friday evening, was far better than many we have heard given by those who called themselves "professional lecturers." Mr. Townsend's modesty in disclaiming his right to the above title led his audience to give a charitable criticism of his address, and to enjoy the discussion of the well-worn subject, "To-morrow."

Good Looks.

Good looks are more than skin deep, depending upon a healthy condition of all the vital organs. If the Liver be inactive you have a Bilious look, if your stomach be disordered you have a Dyspeptic look, and if your Kidneys be affected you have a Pinched look. Obituary.

Mr. Keeler E. Bangs was born in Stanford N. Y. in 1816. He died in Tecumseh, at the residence of his son, Thos. J. Bangs, Feb. 11 1892. Mr. Bangs came with his parents to Michigan in 1828, at the age of thirteen years. On reaching riper years, he was married to Martha Griswold Jan. 1, 1837. After thirty three years of wedded life, death separated them, his beloved wife dying in 1870. Subsequent to this sad event in his life, he lived with his son until the day of his departure to another life. One son, one daughter and one brother survive, to mourn their sad loss. There were seven brothers in all. Rev. F. B. Bangs, who died recently, for many years was an honored member of the Michigan Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He became one of the most highly esteemed Ministers of Gospel of this denomination in the state. The deceased, (Keeler Bangs) was educated by christian parents. His father during a period of forty years, was a devoted minister of Christ in the M. E. Church. His early training in christian principals was not in vain, during his last hours the latent faith of earlier years revived in his soul and was the the only source of comfort and hope. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. O. J. Perrin, Sunday afternoon, Feb. 14., from his son's residence, and were largely attended, by the many friends of the family.

FRANKLIN UNION LYCEUM.

Continued their free silver debate Saturday evening, Feb. 6, at Wm. C. Witherell's. The speakers present that evening were: Aff.—Carl Wisner, Hollis Taylor, G. W. Allen; neg.—Thos. Conlin, A. D. Hunt, S. N. Munger, Mrs. A. B. Wisner, O. P. Remington. J. S. Allen was also on the negative but declined to speak. The discussion lasted until nearly midnight. It was the hardest fought battle and the best debate the Lyceum ever saw. The judges finally rendered a decision in favor of the affirmative. The affirmative based their arguments on the need of more money. They said: "When money was plenty prices were good, failures few, and business prosperous. Money was drawn from its hoarding places to invest in the rising prices; prisons and poor-houses were empty and tramps were almost unknown; while to-day, with a contracted currency, we have on every hand strikes, failures and debauchery. Double the amount of currency," they said, "and our earnings and expenses would be doubled, hence our savings must be doubled. Therefore, our debt-paying power would be doubled, for debts change not with the rise and fall of prices. Silver was as popular as gold, since it formed the monetary standard of as many nations as did gold. Silver being the most plentiful of precious metals it, or its equivalent, forms the best circulating medium." The negative said: "We want an honest dollar and that dollar must be gold. Free coinage would drive gold out of the treasury; it would would increase the price of silver and thus make richer the silver kings: that there were 6,000,000 silver dollars in the U. S. treasury, which no hydrostatic power could force into circulation. What, then, could we do in case of free coinage? Why need we, they said, "an increased circulation, when to-day 95 per cent of the business is done with drafts, checks and the like." Also, "prices of living have been decreased and the dollar has a greater purchasing power. This nation is a unit and must have a standard—gold—like that of the world."

FARMERS' SOCIAL CLUB.

There was a very large attendance at the Farmer's Social Club, which met with Mr. and Mrs. John Schreder, February 16. The program rendered was very good and the discussion on the question, "Is it advisable for the government to extend the free delivery of the mails to the rural districts" was earnest and spirited and nearly all the gentlemen and some of the ladies availed themselves of this opportunity to let their ideas on this subject be known. So unanimous was the thought of the club that the following resolution was presented by Mr. Coddington and adopted by the Club:

RESOLVED, That we demand of the government as a right the extension of the free delivery of the mails to the rural districts, believing that it is perfectly practical and would become self-sustaining in a short time; that this resolution be published in our local papers, also in the Michigan Farmer.

We were glad to welcome some who are not in the habit of attending the club. Not only farmers, but editors, teachers, railroad men, doctors and any who are interested are invited. OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, February 19, 1892.

All aboard for Chicago and the World's Fair! This evening a goodly portion of Congress, accompanied by paper men start for Chicago, upon the invitation of the World's Fair committee of that city, to see for themselves what preparations are being made for the great exposition of next year. It will be simply a jolly picnic for the great majority, but there are a few sharp eyes along that will not be dimmed by champagne and Havana cigars, which will seek for stern facts, without prejudice for or against the management of the World's Fair.

The Republicans of the House practically have the fate of the free coinage bill in their hands. That seems a queer statement, in view of the fact that the Democrats are more than two-thirds of that body, but its nevertheless strictly true, as matters stand at this writing. A big majority of the Democrats favor the bill, and have signed a petition to the committee on Rules asking that a date be set for its consideration, but the Democratic minority is relentless in its opposition, and by a count of noses it has discovered that it may be defeated outright if the republicans will vote with them again it, or it may be defeated by fillibustering, if the Republicans will join with them in not voting, thus breaking a quorum whenever the attempt is made to get it before the House, and, it is said, that negotiations are now under way between the anti silver Democrats and the Republicans looking to such a bargain. There are some Republicans who will not join them, as they intend voting for the bill, but how many, is not known.

The Senate Finance committee has reported adversely on the bill providing for an income tax to be applied to the payment of pensions etc., on the ground that such legislation cannot constitutionally be originated by the Senate. Several similar bills are in the hands of a House committee, where no constitutional obstacle prevents action on them.

Representative Morse, of Massachusetts, thinks the Interstate commerce law is one of the things that ought to go, and he has introduced a bill for its repeal.

The proceedings of the Behring sea commission, now sitting in this city, are, of course secret, but there is always a tiny leak through which news escapes, and the news which has escaped is not altogether favorable to the satisfactory settlement of the questions which are to be arbitrated, owing to the failure of the Commissioners to agree as to the cause of the great decrease in the number of fur-bearing animals. There have been some silly rumors to the effect that the British commissioners are intentionally delaying an agreement so as to give the Canadian sealers a chance to get into Behring sea at the expiration of the temporary agreement, before another one is made, but none of our officials believe them.

Senator Pugh, of Alabama, predicts Hill and Gray as the democratic national ticket.

The last dinner of the season was given at the White House this week, to the Supreme Court.

The Senate and House committees on Agriculture have an opportunity to show in their action upon the anti-option bills before them, whether the Farmer's Alliance, backed by the agricultural masses of the country and many people in the cities who are morally opposed to speculating in grain etc., believing it to be gambling, are more influential with them than the grain and stock brokers from the big cities, who are here in droves spending their money liberally to defeat the bill. All of the hearings for and against the idea, have about been completed, and reports from the committees may be expected in a few days.

The Farmer's Alliance members of the House by a vigorous protest and demand of their right to debate the bill prevented the Indian appropriation bill being railroaded through the House.

Representative Livingston, of Georgia, offered the following resolution and asked unanimous consent for its consideration, but Representative Taylor, of Illinois, objected: "In view of the unrest and extremely distressed condition of the masses of the people in this country and their eager inquiry as to the policy of this House towards the people, resolved that we extend to them our sincere sympathy and promise to do all in our power for relief on the line of improved finances and reduced taxation."

A joint resolution for the investigation of the recent introduction of typhus fever into New York and Brooklyn by Russian Hebrews, illegally admitted, has been passed.

AT WHOSE EXPENSE.

Who Paid the Profit of Fifty Per Cent. Made By Mr. Whitman's Mill in 1891?

The American Wool Reporter shows that the meeting of the "National Association of Wool Manufacturs," called by President Whitman, at which resolutions were passed demanding that congress should make no change in the duties on wool and woolens, was but poorly attended and that even most of those present opposed the resolutions. This exposure of Mr. Whitman's little plot has called forth from him a long letter in which he declares that the "wool consumers association" and the people who demand free wool and lower duties on woolens are engaged in a crusade at the expense of other people."

Concerning Mr. Whitman's letter and his little association, the Wool Reporter has this to say:

President Whitman of the "National Association of Wool Manufacturers" did wrong in penning the following sentences in the letter which he gave to the press January 29 in reply to recent criticisms of his "Memorial:"

"To attempt radical tariff legislation now is the manœuvering of politicians for partisan purposes, who are thinking least of all of the welfare and prosperity of the wool manufacturer.

"The persons most eager for free wool are those who have nothing at stake and who are always ready to engage in crusades for tariff reform at the expense of other people."

Under Mr. Whitman's administration the large manufacturers have been dropping out of the "National Association" one by one, until there are but few remaining to dispute Mr. Whitman's supremacy. The "Memorial" upon whose defense he is now engaged, was not prepared even by the little meeting of the "National Association" at which it was first presented. It was brought in, cut and dried, by President Whitman and the secretary of the association at the opening of the meeting. And it cannot be true that legislation proposed by a committee, of which Hon. Moses T. Stevens is a member, and indorsed by such leading manufacturers as Arthur T. Lyman, Jesse Metcalf, Galen C. Moses, Charles M. Beach, William R. Weeden and T. Quincy Browne, nearly every one of whom has a larger actual ownership in woolen manufacturing than Mr. Whitman—it cannot be true, we repeat, that the attempt to secure such legislation as proposed by these men, as "the manœuvering of politicians for partisan purposes."

Hon. Moses T. Stevens, of the ways and means committee, is the largest individual woolen manufacturer in the United States. T. Quincy Browne is treasurer of the largest corporation in the United States making carded wool goods. Jesse Metcalf is the principal owner of very large mills making combed wool goods or worsteds. Galen C. Moses is treasurer and principal owner of the largest woolen mills in the state of Maine. Arthur T. Lyman is treasurer of one of the largest carpet mills in the United States and a director and heavily interested in other manufacturing establishments. Mr. William R. Weeden is one of the foremost woolen and worsted manufacturers in Rhode Island, and Mr. Charles M. Beach is equally concerned in manufacturing in Connecticut. All these men have a large portion of their fortunes invested in woolen manufacturing. On the other hand, Mr. William Whitman is a comparatively small owner in the mills of which he is treasurer.

That was a singularly ill-considered expression, also, in which Mr. Whitman refers to the vast army of consumers of wool goods as "engaging in crusades for tariff reform at the expense of other people." At the expense of whom, pray! Evidently at the expense of the Arlington mills in whose especial and particular interest the McKinley bill was framed to enable that corporation to earn fifty per cent. upon its capital stock in 1891, "at the expense of other people."

THE MONOPOLY TARIFF.

Congressman W. L. Wilson, of West Virginia, Shows How the People Are Taxed to Protect Monopoly "Infants"—His Letter to the St. Louis Republic.

The American Economist is the organ of the American Protective Tariff league. More perhaps than any other journal, it may be taken as the official mouthpiece of the protected industries, and any concessions it makes are always made with ample reservations to those industries. It is publishing just now what it calls "Short Tariff Sermons," evidently designed for the use of the country newspapers as an elementary statement of the case for protection.

It defines protection as "that system of tariff legislation which levies duties on imports, such as are adequate to establish and maintain industries, insuring high wages to laborers." This definition clearly implies that a protected industry is a burden upon the other and self-supporting industries of the country, which are taxed to "establish and maintain" it. As it is allowed to determine and dictate the amount of taxes it will require for its establishment and maintenance, it is very desirable that we should ascertain from unquestionable authority how far a protected industry is justified in pushing its exactions.

We are glad therefore that the Economist lays down the principle that "the amount of protection is determined by the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad," and that it makes it plain by the following illustration: "If because of high wages here it costs $30 to produce a ton of steel rails, and because of low wages it costs only $20 in England, the steel rails need a duty of $10 a ton to keep our mills open and to protect our own workmen from low wages."

This is all explicit enough, and it is gratifying to find that the framers of the McKinley bill accepted this same principle unreservedly and professed to have made it the rule by which they adjusted the duties of that bill.

"We have recommended no duty," said they in reporting the bill, "above the point of difference between the normal cost of production here, including labor, and the cost of like production in the countries which seek our markets."

Here, then, in sermon and in official report we have a statement of the full demand of protection. It calls for its own pound of flesh. Whatever it takes more than this pound is mere torture of its victims. In other words, a duty that covers the difference of the cost of production at home and abroad is protection. Whatever duty is less than this, they say, is not protection. And whatever is more than this, we may justly claim, is sheer bounty and tribute to monopoly.

Now let us see how they keep faith with the people when they arrange duties for the protection of their favorites. Heretofore both lawmakers and people have been dependent chiefly on such statements as interested parties chose to make before congressional committees or elsewhere as to the cost of production, and the comparative scale of wages here and in other countries.

Fortunately for us now the department of labor is carefully and methodically investigating these questions in some of our most important industries, particularly in the iron and steel and textile industries. Its sixth annual report is devoted to an examination of the cost of producing iron and steel in this country and abroad.

Let us first take pig iron. Taking the average of twenty-six blast furnaces in the northern district of the United States, the cost of all elements of production of run-of-the-mine pig was $13.94 per ton; in twenty-four furnaces in the southern district it was $10.75 per ton. In a typical furnace on the continent of Europe it was $11.03 per ton. The cost of producing pig iron in the south is thus somewhat less than upon the continent, and probably about the same as in England.

In the north it is about $3 per ton greater, yet the McKinley bill fixes the duty at $6.72 per ton, which, if we add $2 for ocean freight, insures a protection to the American producer of $8.72 per ton on his product; whereas, if he produces in the south he needs no protection whatever, and if he produces in the north he needs at most but $3 per ton, according to the rule laid down by both the Economist and Maj. McKinley and his colleagues.

Let us also take the Economist's own illustration—steel rails. The report finds that the actual cost of making standard steel rails in several of the largest establishments in the United States "is, and has been for some time, within a few cents of $22 per ton at the works," and that in Great Britain it is a "sum not varying much from $18 per ton." Accordingly, making all allowances, it says the "difference between the lowest cost of British steel rails of sixty pounds to the yard and the lowest cost of the same grade of rails in the United States is in the vicinity of $5 per ton."

Now, the McKinley bill, professing to recommend no duty above the difference in cost of production here and in the countries that seek our market, puts a duty of $13.44 per ton on steel rails, insuring, if we add ocean freight, a protection to American makers of $15.44 per ton on a product that costs but $4 or $5 per ton more to make here than in Great Britain.

It is well known that a combination exists among the less than a dozen rail mills in the country by which they keep up and dictate prices to purchasers. That combination is created and shielded by this protection, which is more than three times greater than the amount declared necessary by The Economist, and more than three times greater than the amount professedly given by the McKinley bill.

The $10 per ton in excess of the adequate protective duty as defined by the protectionists is the safe and sure margin within which they may and do establish the prices at which they will sell their rails.

These are not exceptional cases. They are but fair and average illustrations of the existing tariff law, and stamp that law not a protective but a monopoly tariff.

Who Pays the Tariff?

Those believers in a high protective tariff whose aim they say is to compel foreigners to pay our tariffs declare that tariffs do not raise prices. It will be well for them to turn their eyes toward France. On the first of February the new French tariff went into operation. The duties were raised on all foreign products, especially those coming from the United States, in retaliation for the McKinley bill. What has been the effect? This brief dispatch from Paris tells the story:

"PARIS, Feb. 4.—Prices are rising rapidly as a result of the new tariff. Pork and mutton have advanced two pence per pound. Italian and Dutch cheese has risen 100 per cent. and foreign soap 200 per cent. The extra cost to workmen for necessaries of life is estimated at one franc daily."

Our exporters are not aware that they are paying the duties, in fact they don't know what the duties are. But the French laborers realize now what it is to live under protective tariff which does not help but hurts them. An increase in the "cost of the necessaries of life of one franc daily" is the tribute which they pay to highly protected monopolies. Here is food for reflection for those who have been deluded into the belief that the foreign manufacturer, not the home consumer, pays the tariff tax.

—What a poor, miserable affair the McKinley tariff law must be even in the minds of its friends when a distinguished republican senator boldly declares that "the reciprocity feature was the part of the measure which had floated the entire act and was that part of the bill which kept it from being swamped!"

—Fresh proof that the McKinley tariff law was framed for the benefit of the poor, starving capitalist and against the wealthy mechanic was given recently. In New York Fred Vanderbilt's British built yacht was declared not subject to duty and in Pennsylvania glass blowers' wages were cut.

The Hill Raid in a Nut-Shell.

It is possible, but not certain, that the raid now made on the Democracy by Senator Hill for a Presidential nomination, may defeat the selection of Mr. Cleveland as the Democratic candidate; but there is no possible contingency in which Hill could effect his own nomination. The Democrats of the nation are not prepared to enter one of the most important contests of our political history with a candidate who would symbolize the purpose to nationalize saloon politics, with political theft as one of the jewels of the new political constellation.

We say that it is possible that the snap-judgment convention called by Hill in New York to assure a solid delegation for himself for President, may defeat the nomination of Mr. Cleveland, but it is not at all certain that it will do so. An overwhelming majority of the Democrats and Tariff Reformers of the country desire the nomination of Cleveland as against all others; and it is entirely safe to say that four-fifths of them, taking in the entire country including New York, very positively prefer Cleveland to Hill, while a very large percentage, and quite enough to control every debatable State, would vote for any reasonable candidate of any other party to defeat the election of Hill. This is not sentiment; it is the plain truth, and it should be presented in cold types for the study of the men who are active in the present Hill raid upon the Democracy.

New York Democrats of the Hill school have twice defeated Democratic candidates for the Presidency by deliberate perfidy. Hancock was sacrificed in 1880, and in 1888 Cleveland was deliberately betrayed to make Hill Governor. There is natural distrust, therefore, of the Hill leaders, and the only certain way of electing a Democratic President this year would be to nominate the strongest man, regardless of the heroes of political theft, and compel their support by teaching them that they are not necessary to Democratic success. They had the power to defeat the Democracy in 1880 and again in 1888. They have not the power to defeat Cleveland in 1892, if the people shall emphasize their devotion to honest government by nominating him as their candidate. Such is the attitude of the Hill Presidential raid given in a nut-shell.—Philadelphia Times.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

His condition was most lamentable, as his limbs were constantly in motion, and at table his hands could not hold knife, fork or spoon. The effect of the medicine was at once noticeable to all, and the boy himself remarked, "I know it helps me," and before the second bottle was used up, insisted that there was no necessity of taking more as he was entirely cured.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

Special Assessments and Single Tax.

Wherever the system of special assessments for streets and other local improvements obtains—and it exists in many Michigan cities—it affords an object lesson which can be used with great effect in pushing the single tax. Where this system does not already exist and where there is no constitutional objection (as in Duluth, Minn.)—and in Michigan there is none—no more effective work can be done in the interest of single tax principles than by vigorously insisting on such an amendment to the local charter as will enable the municipal authorities to assess the cost of grading, graveling or paving streets upon the abutting or adjoining property owners "in proportion to the benefits conferred by such improvements." Mayor Ilock, of Adrian, has done most effective work for the single tax in getting the old system so changed in that city that now near half the cost of street improvment is levied on the adjacent land-owners. But he should not rest until the entire cost of such local improvements is so levied and collected and doubtless he will not.

Grand Rapids has had this "special assessment" system for the improvement of streets and building of sewers ever since its incorporation; and, although numerous efforts have been made by interested parties to shoulder the payment of these taxes upon the city at large, the existing system is so just on the face of it that they have always signally failed. Only a year ago, when a general revision of the city charter was under consideration by a special committee of the council, a committee of the board of trade (representing, as its chairman said, some 360 men who paid half the city's taxes) urgently petitioned that the Detroit system of street improvements be adopted in place of the existing one. In Detroit the just improvement is assessed on the abutting property; after that all improvements, repairing, etc., are paid by the city at large. Now, although there isn't a single tax daily newspaper in Grand Rapids, there are plenty of single tax hired men on these papers. They clearly "saw the cat" in the board of trade meal, and although the word "single tax" was not once used in the discussion, these same newspapers at once jumped on the board of trade scheme "with both feet" and so riddled it with single tax logic that neither the board of trade committee, nor any body else, raised a voice in defense of the brazen project for taxing the many for the special benefit of the few favored landowners, and it was then and there killed.

One argument used was specially a clincher. The era of expensive pavements had just begun in this city. Canal street, 100 feet wide, had just been repaved with asphalt on concrete at a cost of near $3 a square yard, thus transforming this thoroughfare from one of the worst into the finest in the city. Rents had at once jumped up. The owner of one store, 20 feet front, for instance, at once raised his rent $250 a year—and got it, too—whereas his entire tax for the improvement was only $200, so that his increased rent for one year not only paid his tax but gave him a clear $50 profit besides. The newspapers made these facts prominent, pointed out that, under the new scheme, these greatly benefited Canal street owners would have saddled almost the whole cost of their improvements upon others, and pocketed, practically, all their greatly increased rents. That settled the business.

The one argument in favor of spreading street and sewer taxes on the city at large, instead of on a district especially benefited, was this—that the especial assessments for street improvements were a great hardship to workingmen and small home owners, often running as high as $2 a foot frontage, thus calling for the payment at once of $100 tax on a 50-foot lot, probably already mortgaged for all it would carry. But, as it was not proposed to put the cost of first improvements on the city, this argument did not help the board of trade scheme much, since these cheap homes are generally in the outskirts where, when the street is once graded, graveled, and the gutters paved, that is the end of the business. The raising of this argument however, had this good result. It was met by the proposition to spread these street and sewer taxes equally over five years, instead of collecting them in one lump sum, the city issuing 5 per cent. bonds running one, two, three and four years, in order to pay cash to the contractor on completion of the work. This amendment was incorporated in the charter last spring despite a good deal of "kicking" and the first $200,000 of these $50, $100 and $500 improvement bonds were quietly put on the local market August 1, books being opened at one of the savings banks, and in less than a week the subscriptions for them had reached $320,000. Under this new system the property owner whose street or sewer tax is $100 will pay $20 each year, with 6 per cent interest on the tax that remains unpaid. Saginaw, this state, has the same system in successful operation. And, wherever single taxers are pushing for the adoption of the special assessment system for improvements, I deem it quite important to success that the five year (or more) feature be adopted; otherwise the heavy tax, coming in a lump, will strongly militate against the special assessment and in favor of the city at large system.

The Grand Rapids special assessments are not laid strictly in accordance with single tax principles (limited), but there is no legal obstacle to prevent their being so laid whenever public opinion will warrant it. A word here as to the practical modus operandi. After the improvement is ordered, the contract let, and the exact amount of the cost is known, a special committee is appointed by the mayor "to make an assessment district" to pay for it. By a provision of the charter this is required to include such territory as is specially benefited by the improvement, and the district for the improvement of a street usually includes only 100 feet on each side of the improved portion, though in case of main thoroughfares it is sometimes larger. This committee reports a resolution designating by metes and bounds the district benefited, declaring also that it is benefited to the full amount of the cost of the improvement, and directing the members of the board of review and equalization to spend the whole cost on the property within the assessment district "in proportion to the benefits of the said improvement to each particular parcel." Should the committee find that the property in this district was not benefited to the full extent of the cost of the improvement, it would report a resolution putting the excess of costs over benefits on the city at large; but, as a matter of fact, these benefits are always found to equal the cost, so it is almost an unheard of thing for the city at large to be assessed for any portion of the cost of a street or sewer.

In laying these taxes three members of the board of review make no account whatever of buildings or other improvements. It is a tax on bare land only; but the practice has been to figure out the benefits received by taking the foot frontage and area combined, rather than the land values as a basis. In most cases this gives roughly the land values, but in other cases—as instance, a street running from near the business center to the outskirts, the foot frontage rule works a hardship to owners of cheap lots in the suburbs and in such cases there is a growing disposition to consider land values as a basis for estimating benefits. The fact, however, that in this city, and everywhere in Michigan, except Detroit, the assessing officers lump land and buildings all in together, makes these land values difficult for the board of review to ascertain.

The system, however, with all its conditions, is roughly just in its practical workings, and the justice of not considering buildings or their contents in laying this tax is recognized by every body. Consequently, when a Grand Rapids single taxer meets a man who denounces laying all taxes on land values as confiscation, he gently pilots him along until he gets him solidly committed to a defense of the street assessment system. Then he congratulates him on his conversion to single tax principles, and bids him good day. There's nothing like it for effective missionary work with that very large class which objects strenuously to all "new-fangled notions."—Wm. M. Hathaway, in the Standard.

Progress in Missouri.

L. P. Custer, writing to the Standard from St. Louis, says: As evidences of progress I cull the following from the editorial columns of the Republic, our great radical democratic organ. On the morning of the 25th of last month it devoted considerable space to comments on the formation of a movement in New York among the churches, synagogues, ethical societies and "all the rest of the agencies of superior disinterestedness" to "abolish the slums" by raising them to a higher level of civilization and morality, and among other things said:

If this movement results in teaching New York millionaires how to live; if it teaches New York churches to let go all real estate except that on which their churches stand; if it begins the work of reform by teaching those who are strong enough to be successful in the great game of grab to stop grabbing and to be satisfied with enough, then, indeed, the slums will disappear, for there is steam and electricity enough at work in the world to produce enough for everybody, so that no one need starve but for the game of grab.

Further along the Republic said:

How would it make New York a better place to live in if every person in the slums knew how to get the unearned increment from millions of real estate, as some New York churches do, or from watered railroad stocks and the watered stocks of protected trusts, as some of the members of their congregations do?

The St. Louis Evening Chronicle, one of the Scripps league papers, in referring to the alien land law, recently declared unconstitutional by the Texas supreme court, had this to say, editorially:

Perhaps the legislators did not do the wisest thing in enacting that only citizens of Texas should possess her soil; had they exacted that the annual rental value of all land within the state must be paid into the state treasury, they would have accomplished the exclusion of the non-resident landlord, and supplied a fund for public works that would have benefitted her people immeasurably. But the Texans are feeling their way slowly toward the turn in the passage where the light shall appear.

Yet there are men who profess to believe in the single tax that say they can not see any signs of progress under the present method of procedure.

When it is remembered that it has been but a few years since "Progress and Poverty" was written, and that we have all the power of corrupt politics to battle against, besides vested interests of untold magnitude to overcome, I think we are to be congratulated without stint on the evidences of progress, not only in our own country, but all over the civilized world.

Exempting Industries From Taxation.

Some years ago Allentown, Pa., obtained several industries by promising to exempt them from taxation for a number of years. No one had a right to make such a promise, and the authorities propose to enforce the law and tax the properties in question. It looks now as though the citizens who took upon themselves the responsibility of exempting the industries from taxation will have to pay the taxes out of their own pockets. We respectfully suggest for their consideration that the single tax would exempt all industries from taxation for all time; and that it would not compel anyone to make good the exemption except the landowners whose land is increased in value by the presence of the industries, and only in proportion to such increase.

AN AWFUL FATE.

Arkansas Lynchers Burn a Negro at a Stake.

He Assaults a Woman, Is Captured, Tied to a Tree and Saturated with Kerosene—His Victim Then Applies the Torch.

A FEARFUL DEATH.

TEXARKANA, Ark., Feb. 22.—Five thousand people stood on the public street Saturday afternoon and with sullen faces, unmoved by anything savoring of pity, watched while Ed Coy, a negro, was burned to death for criminally assaulting Mrs. Henry Jewell last Saturday. Mrs. Jewell is the young wife of a respectable farmer living 2 miles south of town, and since his crime Coy succeeded in eluding the officers until Saturday morning, when he was discovered at the home of Ed. Gaines (colored) 4 miles north of here. He had a mistress at the home of Gaines, and it was she who disclosed his hiding place.

After his capture by a posse he was conveyed to the Jewell farm where Mrs. Jewell, without hesitation, identified him beyond all doubt as the man who assaulted her. The trembling wretch was then returned to town and placed in a room with a number of guards. A heavy guard was also placed outside the building, it being resolved that he should not be disposed of until all the posses that were still out should be called in.

All the posses were in by 2 o'clock, and the leaders, after a consultation, decided to hang the negro to a telegraph pole on Broad street, at the state line, the most public place in the city. Coy was accordingly marched to this point with a view to carry out this programme, but when the crowd saw the rope and divined that hanging had been decided upon there were thunders of protests.

"Away with the rope! Hanging is too good for him! Burn him! burn him!" was the shout that went up from 5,000 throats. The leaders soon saw the futility of opposing the wishes of the mob, but begged that the deed should take place out of town, and to this the crowd agreed. Half trotting and half running the crowd rushed the doomed wretch along with them east on Clinton street, thence south on College Hill street until the Iron Mountain railroad track had been crossed. Here there is a beautiful grass plot of three or four acres void of timber or shubbery, save one tree, 18 inches in diameter and broken off at the top.

Coy was strapped to the body of the tree with iron fastenings and coal oil was poured over his entire person in liberal quantities. There was a moment of silence and then another shout went up:

"Let Mrs. Jewell apply the match! Let Mrs. Jewell set him off!"

Walking slowly, very pale but collected, the woman emerged from the crowd. Her appearance before them set the crowd wild, and a mighty cheer went up that almost shook the ground on which they were standing. The crowd fell back at her approach, making a pathway for the brutal negro's victim, who, leaning on the arm of a male relative on either side, walked unhesitatingly forward to where the negro stood pinioned, struck a parlor match and with the utmost deliberation fired the negro's clothes in two places.

The flames shot high above his head, curling in waves about his body and limbs. Coy set his teeth, and throughout the hideous ordeal made little noise, only uttering a few groans. He died in about twenty minutes after Mrs. Jewell set him on fire.

Friendly with the United States.

VALPARAISO, Feb. 22. — President Montt on Saturday held a reception in honor of the consular corps. In the course of a pleasant conversation with United States Consul McCreery the president said he was extremely glad the trouble between the United States and Chili had been settled. "I am hopeful," he added, "that it will be found practicable to maintain eternal friendship between the two republics."

Followed Deacon's Example.

MANCHESTER, Ia., Feb. 22.—At Manchester Saturday the coroner's jury returned a verdict charging Dennis Taylor with murder in the first degree. Taylor is a farmer residing near Manchester, and Friday shot and killed his hired man—Michael Kenna—who, he says, was criminally intimate with his wife. After killing the man Taylor hitched up his team, drove to Manchester and surrendered himself.

Foul Play Suspected.

JOLIET, Ill., Feb. 20.—Thomas Cameron was found on the track of the Santa Fe railroad near Lozenzo Thursday night. He had been run over by the cars, but owing to the fact that he was cold and that he was known to have had a big sum of money from the sale of cattle it is suspected that he was murdered and placed on the track.

Three Killed in a Wreck.

HOUSTON, Tex., Feb. 20.—A wreck occurred 6 miles from the city on the San Antonio & Arkansas Pass railroad Thursday afternoon, in which three persons were killed and three others wounded. A switch engine, on which several persons were riding jumped the track and turned completely over, carrying with it all on board.

Indians Dying of the Grip.

ARKANSAS CITY, Kan., Feb. 20.—The grip is playing havoc with the Cherokees just east of Osage agency. Within a radius of 10 miles of Skiatook twenty-two have died within the last six weeks. In one case an entire family, consisting of father, mother, sister and two children, died.

Will Go Abroad.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20. — Secretary Foster has finally decided to take an ocean trip for the benefit of his health and will sail from New York next Tuesday for Bremen on the North German Lloyd steamship Spree. He will return to this country in about three weeks.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

HIS ROYAL RECEPTION AND GREETING AT ANN ARBOR LAST MONDAY.

His Masterly Oration Before the Students of the University on Washington's Birth Day.

Last Monday was a gala day in the University city. It has been the custom for several years with the students of the law department to celebrate the anniversary of Washington's birth day, by public ceremonies of some kind. It has come to be regarded as their special prerogative to take charge of the institution on that day and see that it is properly observed. This year they obtained a promise from Ex-President Cleveland to visit Ann Arbor and deliver an address before the students on that day. As soon as his acceptance was made known, preparations began, to accord him a royal welcome, and the affair culminated in the largest crowd, and the grandest public meeting in the history of Ann Arbor.

Thinking it would be the best opportunity that might ever present itself to see the distinguished Ex-President, we concluded to pay Ann Arbor a visit on that day. Boarding the morning train on the Mackinaw, a ride of half an hour brought us to Dundee. Dr. Catlin and Wm. Gaston were among the Tecumseh passengers. At Ridgeway several more got on, including the Clarkson family and M. J. Martin. At Dundee a large crowd was added, among them Dr. J. B. Haines and C. H. Gainsley.

At Dundee we boarded a special train of six coaches on the Ann Arbor road, all crowded to their fullest capacity and an hour's run brought us to the Michigan Athens. It was nearly one o'clock when we arrived there, and the big parade had already taken place. There was an immense crowd in the streets at that hour, while every hotel and lunch room was overflowing and good judges and old residents claimed that Ann Arbor never before entertained so large a crowd as gathered within the city that day. Delegations were present from various points outside of Ann Arbor, special trains having been run from Grand Rapids, Lansing, Jackson, Detroit and Toledo, while all the towns of Washtenaw county seemed to have poured their population into the city.

The public meeting was held in University Hall at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The students were provided with tickets and the doors were opened for them at two o'clock. At fifteen minutes before three the big doors were thrown open for the admission of the general crowd. By three o'clock the vast auditorium was literally jammed. The hall will comfortably seat about 3500 people, and there were over 4000 within its confines that afternoon. The gallery was draped with festoons of maize showing the colors of the University; along the front of the platform was arranged a row of potted plants, and at the rear of the platform a mammoth American flag was hung in graceful festoons against the wall. The platform itself contained about one hundred chairs, which were occupied by the distinguished guests present. There were five governors and ex-governors present, the judges of the Supreme Court, members of the law faculty and other prominent citizens from all sections of the state. Among them were Gov. Winans, Ex-Governors Jerome, Felch and Begole of Michigan, and Ex-Gov. Campbell of Ohio, Don M. Dickinson and Judge Thos. M. Cooley, who were prominently connected with Cleveland's administration. While the audience was waiting for the orator, the army of students amused themselves in their characteristic manner—Cries of: "Michigan, Michigan, rah, rah, U. of M: Ruth Cleveland; How do you do, Cleveland; What's the matter with Grover, he's all right," echoed and re-echoed through the hall and when President Angell, followed by the orator of the day, and other prominent guests appeared on the platform, a deafening shout arose from the entire audience that fairly shook the foundations of the building. As soon as quiet was restored, President Angell introduced Mr. Cleveland in a few well-chosen words. As Mr. Cleveland arose and stepped to the desk, he was again greeted with generous applause. He read his address from manuscript, speaking in a clear, strong, well modulated voice, which penetrated every nook and corner of the vast hall. His subject was "Sentiment in Politics." It was an admirable subject for such an occasion, and was a model of excellence. It was exactly forty minutes long. The orator is a very easy, graceful talker, very sparing in his gestures and impresses his hearers with the deep earnestness and sincerity of every word he utters. At its conclusion President Angell introduced to the audience the governors and members of the law faculty, most of whom made a few remarks of acknowledgment. The gathering then broke up, many however tarrying awhile to shake hands with Mr. Cleveland. University Hall has held many notable gatherings, but we doubt whether a more brilliant audience ever before assembled within its walls.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTH DAY.

How the Anniversary was Celebrated by the Public Schools of Tecumseh.

In accordance with the suggestions of State Superintendent Fitch, that exercises be held in the schools throughout the state on Friday last, all departments of our schools acted on the advice and prepared programs. In the High school the exercises were held in place of the regular Lyceum. The life of Washington was given in three essays the Battle of Trenton graphically described by another, while others discussed Washington's abilities as a General and Statesman. Dr. Howell, President of the Board of Education, spoke in his usual happy manner on the World's Fair, and what he should expected to see and learn by his visit there. Patriotic songs helped to make the exercises entertaining as well as instructive.

The seventh and eighth grades spared no pains in decorating the room in which their exercises were held, and one might have thought it a military reception room, the black board design drawn by Miss Grace Hillman, being especially attractive, and if the decorations were beautiful and attractive, the exercises were no less so. The recitations were well rendered and each pupil entered into his part of the program with a spirit.

The fifth and sixth grades in the east branch united in their exercises, and as neither Miss Kyle, Miss Ross, nor the pupils in their respective rooms, do their work by halves the visitors present were highly pleased as well as entertained. The recitations "Historic Christmas Night," and "Washington's Birth Day," were especially well done while the song "Tenting to Night" rendered by seven boys called forth many favorable comments.

Mr. McKinnon entertaining the pupils as well as visitors, in his description of the World's fair, contributing very much to the interest of the program.

The pupils in Miss Jones's and Miss Chase's rooms to the number of ninety, left little space in the room they occupied for the sixty visitors that were so well entertained by their program. The Monument exercise, a recitation by twenty boys, "Father Time and his Daughter," and the Hatchet Song were especially well rendered, showing careful drill and training by the teachers.

In the west branch school the recitations and music were in full keeping with the nicely decorated room and the visitors expressed themselves highly gratified with the exercises, and felt that those who were absent were the only losers.

The north branch school combined their Washington and Longfellow exercises, and while few in numbers, made their program as entertaining and their decorations as attractive, as a larger school could have done.

The result of Miss Grayson's past two years' work in music is beginning to manifest itself, as the admirable manner in which the national hymns and songs were rendered, indicated.

The exercises throughout were highly entertaining and instructive and reflect credit on both pupils and teachers. The collection taken to assist in the educational exhibit at the World's Fair amounted to about $10.

A TOWERING GIANT HAS FALLEN.

Rev. Charles H. Spurgeon, the great London Preacher has passed away, and the Christian world is in mourning. In him the model Preacher, the Devoted Pastor, the beloved College President, the Voluminous Writer, the Successful Editor, the Napoleon of Holy Warfare is dead.

His big heart encompassed all creeds and all mankind. His Sermons and Writings have been translated into every language. His name is a household word in every Christian family throughout the civilized world. He was the best known and best loved man on earth.

For combined strength of character, reach of influence, practical common sense, knowledge of men, depth of piety, and earnest zeal, the World has never known his equal.

He belonged to no creed. His beneficencies have gone to poor ministers of all denominations and in all his public work, the breath of scandal never touched him.

Since the days of the "Son of Man," upon earth there has not lived a more simple, pure and stainless character.

His life is not one to be read once and laid aside, but as one of his former pupils who is now a great evangelist says "It will sharpen the intellect, feast the soul and quicken the whole man with the purest thought, keenest wit, richest experience and truest philosophy."

Every Christian family will want this book. It is full of intensest interest, pure and wholesome, spicy and rich from beginning to close. Mr. Spurgeon had the largest church membership and congregation of any living preacher. To attend his church was one of the "sights of London," which no tourist would miss.

The book is a mine of valuable information, and there are millions of people, clergymen, Bible readers, students and Christian families standing ready with $4.50 to pay for it. Published by E. R. CURTIS & Co, Cincinnati, O. See ad. in another column of this paper.

A MILLION FRIENDS.

A friend in need is a friend indeed, and not less than one million people have found just such a friend in Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs, and Colds. If you have never used this great cough medicine one trial will convince you that it has wonderful curative powers in all diseases of the Throat, Chest and Lungs. Each bottle is guaranteed to do all that is claimed or money will be refunded. Trial bottles free at J. J. Orr's drug store. Large bottles 50c. and $1.00.

ANOTHER PIONEER GONE HOME.

Francis A. Dewey, of Cambridge, one of the earliest settlers and most respected citizens of this County, died at his home in that township on the 13th inst., lacking but twelve days of having attained the age of 81 years.

The deceased was born at Three Rivers, Quebec, Canada, Feb. 25, 1811, and shortly thereafter his parents moved to Hanover, New Hampshire, where he received his youthful training. At the age of eighteen, in the year 1829, his family joined the immigration then flowing into the new territory of Michigan and located a home in the township of Tecumseh. Being a young man of rugged physical health and business ambition he soon found work enough to do in the wild west. He drove stage on the mail route between Ypsilanti and Tecumseh for six months and for two years he performed the same service on the route between Ypsilanti and Detroit. In June, 1833, he located 160 acres of land on sections 17, 18, 19 and 20 in the town of Cambridge. During the fall of 1836 he built a log cabin thereon, which he occupied as his first domicile on the 4th day of March, 1837. In the meantime he had driven stage between Tecumseh and Jonesville about two years. His first log house was erected near Dewey Lake in full view of that little sheet of water, surrounded by the primeval forest, and was a romantic spot in those early days. It occupied the site of the wigwam of the Indian chief, Mitteau. He added to this homestead from time to time by purchase, until he owned over six hundred acres of land, which was one of the largest and most productive farms in Lenawee county. During the year 1832, and while he resided at Tecumseh, he served as a drum major in the Black Hawk war.

On the 25th of October, 1836, he was united in marriage to Miss Mary Ann Smith, and at once began the erection of the log cabin in the wilderness which was to be their home. Six children blessed this union and he had three children by a subsequent wife. Of these, seven sons and one daughter, all grown to manhood and womanhood, survive him. The widow, eight children and a host of grandchildren and other relatives will mourn his death and cherish his memory. In 1865 he left the old homestead to his sons and purchased the Walker farm at Cambridge Junction, which he presided over with genuine pioneer hospitality until called to his final reward.

During his long and eventful life Mr. Dewey filled many offices of trust and honor. He was Supervisor of his township for two years, highway commissioner four years and served sixteen years as Justice of the Peace. Upon the organization of the Michigan Pioneer Society, March 11, 1874, he represented Lenawee county at that meeting and became one of the charter members of the State society. For several terms he served on the executive committee or as Vice President and one year he served as its President. He identified himself with the County Pioneer Society early in its history and served as President thereof for sixteen consecutive years, retiring in the summer of 1890. He was present at the last annual meeting held at Palmyra in August, 1891, and although feeble in body he enjoyed the day's program with all his old-time zest.

For many years he was a staunch member and liberal supporter of the Episcopal Church, and was generally a member of the vestry in some capacity. In politics he was not a partisan, but he adhered to the Democracy, having cast his first presidential vote for Andrew Jackson, and was a man of decided political convictions.

But age began to impress its marks upon him and the sands in the hour-glass of his life were running low. For the past year he had gradually and surely failed in bodily strength and health, although his mind remained clear and active to the last.

His long and earnest life typified in its fullest measure the experience of Michigan's pioneer citizens. He began without a farthing and by slow and earnest toil laid the foundations broad and deep for an ample fortune and lived to enjoy his competence, with his children and grandchildren around him, in the sunset of his earthly life. To such characters as his our commonwealth is indebted for its wealth and prosperity to-day. He has fought the good fight, he has finished his work, he has kept the faith, and we believe that he has entered into his eternal inheritance on high.

THE MARCH ARENA.

The Rev. Mr J. Savage, who has long occupied a foremost position among the ablest Unitarian ministers of this generation, contributes an extraordinary paper upon "Psychical Research" to the March Arena, in which he cites many marvellous, yet seemingly well authenticated psychical phenomena. The paper is remarkable in itself, and as interesting as fiction, but gains an additional interest when it is remembered that it comes from the pen of the foremost evolutionary thinker in the American clergy. Prof. Jos. R. Buchanan's contribution on "Full-orbed Education" is one of the most scholarly and practical papers on popular education that has appeared in months. Gen. J. B. Weaver writes upon the "Threefold Contentions of Industry," contending that monopoly in land, money, and transportation operates to make the poor man grow poorer, while a specially favored class necessarily grows richer. Henry Wood writes in a scholarly manner on "Revelation through Nature." Hamlin Garland discourses on the Farmers's Alliance Wedge in Congress." This article is illustrated with nine photogravures. It is an interesting and chatty paper, conveying an excellent impression of this little coterie in our present Congress. Hon. Walter Clark, L.L.D., Associate Judge of the Supreme Court of North Carolina, contributes one of the most powerful arguments in favor of governmental control of telegraph and telephone that has ever yet appeared. Wm. Q. Judge, who is at the head of the Theosophical movement in America, defends Madame Blavatsky, and Charles Schroder institutes a comparison between Christianity and Buddeism. Miss Will Allen Dromgoole furnishes another of her charming stories of East Tennessee, this one being entitled "The War of the Roses." Nellie Booth Simmons appears in a "Battle Hymn of Labor," a poem of great power. Mr. Flower contributes two editorials, one on "The Dead Sea of Nineteenth Century Civilization," and the other "Behind the Deed the Thought." The first paper treats on the many trials and privations of the very poor in our great social cities, and merits the careful attention of all persons interested in the great social agitation of the hour.

SETH P. SHELDON.

The death of this respected citizen, after a brief illness, has suddenly removed from our community a man of prominence and worth, whose ten years residence had secured general confidence and esteem. Throughout a wide circle of social, civic and religious relations, a host of sympathizing friends will share the sorrow that rests so heavily upon the afflicted household. A very large number of friends and neighbors attended the funeral services at the late residence on the 13th, inst., and followed the remains to their last resting place in Tecumseh Cemetery. The members of the church to which the deceased belonged were largely present, and the Grand Army Post signified their respect by attending in a body. Appropriate services were conducted by Rev. F. E. Arnold, assisted by Revs. F. Adkins and Jesse Boswell, the present and former pastors of the deceased. His death is a very heavy bereavement to the family circle, and to the community a real loss. Mr. Sheldon was of New England ancestry, born in Rupert, Vermont, Nov 20, 1838, the fourth child of Simeon Sheldon. In his native place he grew to manhood, and from there he went to the war at his imperilled country's call, having enlisted in Co. C. 14th Vermont Infantry, and serving in the Army of the Potomac. At the age of 27 he removed from his native place to Wyoming Co., N. Y., where he purchased a large farm. The next year, Jan. 30, '67, he was married to Miss Ella Stark, of Hermitage, N. Y., and on the farm of recent purchase in that vicinity laid the foundation of a home, which he enjoyed with his family for 16 years. In 1883 he disposed of the farm in New York, and removing with his family to Michigan, purchased a farm with convenient and commodious buildings in Clinton township, in the vicinity of Tecumseh. In this house he was to spend the last years of his life; and here it was his happiness to have his children around him, and to enjoy a deserved reputation for integrity, industry and thrift. In the midst of his years and of his prosperity, at the age of 53, he was stricken down, and after a brief and severe illness with the gripp and pneumonia, he passed away to his heavenly home on the afternoon of the 10th inst. Mr. Sheldon was converted to Christ soon after his marriage in 1867, and united with the Baptist church in Hermitage, N. Y., where he became an active and trusted worker and officer in the church, transferring his membership, upon his removal to Michigan, to the Baptist church in Tecumseh, in whose fellowship he continued until his death. He leaves a wife and three children, the eldest, Helen, now Mrs. Chas. McNeal, and two sons, Fred. and Louis. He was warmly attached to his home, sparing no pains to promote the comfort and welfare of those dependent upon him. In the severe bereavement which has thus fallen upon this home, the widow and the children have the heartfelt sympathy of very many kind friends, and the afflicted ones especially desire that in these lines of tribute to their dead, there shall be a cordial expression of their grateful appreciation of the many tokens of kindly sympathy which have been on all hands so freely bestowed. "The Lord deal kindly with you, as ye have dealt with the dead and with them."

F. A.

Death of Mrs. Lovett.

Another sudden death is to be added to the growing list, that of Mrs. L. M. Lovett, wife of the well known druggist, who was called away on Tuesday morning, after an illness of only three days. On Friday she was attacked with malignant erysipelas, which speedily caused blood poisoning and the victim was soon beyond the help of medical skill.

Mrs. Lovett, nee Miss Jennie Peters, of Adrian, Mich., was but forty years old and was greatly beloved by the large circle of friends she had made during her residence here. She leaves four children. The funeral services were held at the residence, 200 Lake street, on Wednesday afternoon, being in charge of Mr. B. L. Dodge and Mr. Edward Cook, Dr. Hoyt of the Congregational church, officiating.

The above notice is taken from the Oak Park Reporter of the 19th inst. Mr. Lovett will be remembered by many of our older citizens, as he was born and reared in the township of Raisin, who will deeply sympathize with him in his sore affliction. The wife and mother so suddenly called to the better land was a lady of fine accomplishments, and her death leaves a void in that family circle which time can never fill.

DIED: At Tecumseh, Mich., on Saturday, Feb 20th, 1892, after a brief but severe illness, Miss Mary Anderson, aged 18 years. Miss Anderson was born in Livingston county, N. Y., but was brought in her infancy to Michigan by her parents, who have lived in or near Macon for 17 years. She has passed away in her youth, deeply lamented by a large circle of friends who held her in warm regard. Her family have the sympathy of the community.

Puck's front-page cartoon this week (February 24th) tells a long story in a few words. That mischievous little Hill boy strikes with the dull-edged tool of his boom at the sturdy oak of Cleveland's popularity, unmindful of its firm-rooted tenacity.

During our visit at Ann Arbor last Monday we happened to meet both of Tecumseh's representatives at the University—Ernest Gamble, who is attending the Homœopathic medical school, and Miss Anna May Bailey, who is enrolled in the Literary department. In order that he might post himself to the smallest detail, regarding the disease, Dr, John Tuttle, of Clinton, has taken a turn with grip and is now posted to the "smallest detail." These minor experiences are a great aid to a doctor in making up his mind on a case. No doctor should be without this valuable experience: it would be a vast help to him—in sympathizing with others?—Adrian Press.

The HERALD force is making arrangements to erect a toll-gate between the HERALD building and Sutton's Opera house, and hope to have the same in place on the next legal holiday. The supposition is that saloons are closed on holidays, but the number of men and boys who aknow how to evade this illusion is such that the printers are of the opinion that a toll-gate on such occasions would be a bonanza financially.

The complete novel in Lippincott's Magazine for March, "A Soldier's Secret," is by Captain Charles King, who alone among living Americans has the secret of the military tale. What he does not know about army life in the West is not worth knowing, and what he knows he can impart with unsurpassed and unfailing charm. The post, the bivouac, the battle-field,—whatever goes on at these he makes to live again before us; for he has been a part of it all, and his heart is with the cavalry still. His last story has a very recent theme,—the Sioux war of 1890,—and will be found equal to any of his previous work.

Seldom has a larger or more brilliant audience been assembled in the Tecumseh opera house than gathered there on Monday evening to listen to the concert of the Lotus Glee Club. People who heard the club last year went there with high expectations, that is true, but the reality exceeded their anticipations. Nearly every number was encored, and Miss Marshall surpassed herself in her readings. The entire program was beyond criticism and was a fitting close to the most brilliant course of platform entertainments ever given in Tecumseh.

FROM WASHINGTON.

Record of the Work Done by the Fifty-Second Congress.

A Daily Summary of the Proceedings in the Senate and House—Bills Passed and New Measures Introduced.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—The bill to provide an income tax to pay pensions and salaries of postmasters was reported adversely in the senate yesterday. The urgent deficiency bill ($308,000) was passed.

WASHINGTON, Feb 18.—In the senate yesterday a resolution requesting the committee on foreign relations to inquire whether it was practicable to acquire certain portions of the republic of Mexico was reported adversely. A bill was passed requesting the president to return to Mexico twenty-one battle flags now in the museum of the United States military academy which were captured by the army of the United States during the war with Mexico.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19, — Senator Palmer (Ill.) spoke in the senate yesterday in favor of the election of United States senators by the people. Eulogies over the life and character of the late Senator Plumb, of Kansas, were delivered.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—The senate passed the bill extending for ten years the operation of the Chinese exclusion act. The bill in addition to reenacting the present exclusion laws which are about to lapse, contains a section intended to meet the difficulty treasury officials have encountered in returning Chinese to China through judicial decisions adverse to their right to return them further than to the country from which they entered the United States. Under this construction of the law the treasury returned a number of Chinese to Canada instead of to China, and they were soon again smuggled across the line, which it was impossible to guard at all times and places. Another new section provides severe penalties for the return to the United States of Chinese once sent out of the country. Adjourned to the 23d.

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—In the house yesterday, by a strictly party vote, the ways and means committee reported favorably the Springer free wool bill and the Bryan free binding-twine bill. Bills were introduced to repeal the interstate commerce law; authorizing railroad companies to grant reduced rates to commercial travelers, and to prohibit granting charters to national banks. A joint resolution was reported proposing a constitutional amendment for the election of senators by the people of the several states.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—In the house yesterday the time was occupied in considering the Indian appropriation bill.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—In the house yesterday a bill was introduced appropriating $10,000 for a monument in memory of the soldiers, to be erected in Washington. Mr. O'Neill (Pa.) presented a protest of the Philadelphia board of trade against free coinage. A bill for the exclusion of Chinese was reported by Mr. Gray (Ind.) from the committee on foreign affairs.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—In the house yesterday a bill was introduced providing for a survey of a route for a ship canal to connect Lake Erie at Toledo with the Ohio river at Cincinnati. The silver bill was discussed. Adjourned to the 23d.

HE WILL GO FREE.

A Michigan Man's Poor Memory Nearly Results in a Ten Years' Term in Prison.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., Feb. 19.—It now appears as if Coulter, the murderer who was sentenced to ten years for perjury, will not have to serve thirty days. He was convicted of having sworn at the murder trial that his father cut the horses' faces with an ax, which was a perjury. Coulter's lawyer on looking the evidence of the murder trial over Thursday discovered that Coulter did not swear his father cut the faces with an ax. Coulter told this story to his neighbors and was under the impression he swore to it. The prosecuting attorney now has no case against Coulter and he will be released.

Michigan Labor Report.

LANSING, Mich., Feb. 22.—The report of the Michigan state labor commissioner was issued Saturday. It shows, among other things, that women wage-workers average seventy-nine cents a day; that 207 persons own one-third of Detroit, with its 225,000 population, and that the city lots of the state, which cover about 100,000 acres, are worth as much as the 14,000,000 acres owned by the 1,199,000 farming population.

Japanese Losses by Earthquake.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 19.—The steamship Belgic arrived Thursday afternoon from Hongkong and Yokohama. Japanese advices state that up to January 15 $143,000 has been subscribed by Japanese for the relief of the earthquake sufferers. The Nageria chamber of commerce estimates that the loss from property destroyed and from the immediate effect on commerce will aggregate $1,740,000.

A Bank President Gone.

CARROLL, Ia., Feb. 19.—O. A. Kentner, president of the Citizens' bank, has disappeared, leaving debts aggregating $21,000. He sold mortgaged cattle and will be prosecuted when apprehended. He has always been considered straight, and the announcement of his downfall will be a surprise.

The Real Estate Men.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 19.—The real estate congress completed its permanent organization by the election of B. M. Weill, of Milwaukee, as president. Buffalo was selected as the place for the next meeting, in October.

To Be Closed on Sunday.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 20.—The New York world's fair appropriation bill has been amended in the assembly by a provision that the exhibit should be closed Sundays.

A BIG EXCURSION.

Congressmen Leave the National Capital to Visit Chicago.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—The world's fair special, comprising four of the most magnificently equipped and luxuriously furnished trains ever put on the road by the Pullman Palace Car Company, rolled out of the Baltimore & Ohio station at 2:30 p. m. bound for the city of Chicago. The distinguished passengers aboard the trains, who are to be the guests of the world's fair city for the next four days, are the senators and representatives of the Fifty-second congress, the foreign ministers to the United States and forty of the leading journalists of the national capital. Hon. Adlai T. Ewing, chairman of the citizens' committee of Chicago, has general charge of the party, but each of the separate trains is under the direct charge of an Illinois congressman, the representatives from the world's fair state having naturally constituted themselves, to some extent, a committee on entertainment during the journey. The several trains followed each other in succession, with intervals of fifteen minutes between the various sections in order to insure safety.

CHICAGO, Feb. 22.—The 300 distinguished Washington guests of Chicago, including congressmen, senators and foreign diplomates, with their wives and daughters, to inspect world's fair progress, have arrived safely and in high spirits in this city. The four gorgeous trains in which they rode pulled into the Grand Central depot, the first at 4 p. m., Saturday and the other three at intervals of fifteen minutes, the Baltimore and Ohio managers having staked and nearly maintained their reputation on the completion of the journey in twenty-four hours.

The prime object of this excursion is to give the members of congress a chance to note the progress in the world's fair enterprise which they authorized in April, 1890. The arrangements were made and the whole trip is being conducted by a committee of citizens who offer the freedom of the city and expect every Chicagoan to make the offer good.

The programme for today includes the visit to the world's fair grounds, addresses and banquets at the Auditorium and Grand Pacific hotels, and a reception to the ladies of the party at the home of Mrs. H. O. Stone. The trains will leave for Washington at 8:30 a. m. Tuesday.

THE WAGES OF SIN.

Edward Parker Deacon Kills His Wife's Lover in a Hotel in France.

PARIS, Feb. 20.—The shooting of M. Emile Abeille, formerly an attache of the French legation in Washington, by Edward Parker Deacon in Mrs. Deacon's bedroom at Cannes Tuesday night is the one great subject of conversation in the fashionable circles in Europe. All the parties in the case are so well known that it is impossible to enter a social circle without meeting some of their friends. Mr. Deacon is upheld on all sides, particularly among Americans, for killing his wife's lover, and very little if any sympathy is expressed for Mrs. Deacon.

It is almost impossible out of the many conflicting stories told of the shooting to get at all the exact facts in the case. The dead man, who was a brother of the deputy of the same name, had, it would seem, been carrying on an intrigue for some years past with Mrs. Deacon. Mr. Deacon had long been suspicious of his wife.

Mr. Deacon was taken by the chief commissaire to the Hotel de Ville at Grasse, where the details of the investigation were formally reported to him. Then he was set at liberty upon his own recognizances, although the judge stipulated he should reside in Grasse until the assizes. He will be indicted for the murder of M. Abeille and tried at the next Nice assizes at the end of March.

Warned to Avoid Meetings.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Feb. 20.—Gov. Hogg has issued a proclamation to be printed in the Spanish newspapers. It is addressed to the residents in the Garza districts of Texas and calls upon them to stay at their homes and avoid meetings of any kind. It appears that they have been terrorized by the presence of the United States troops and have huddled in bands for comfort, which bands are frequently mistaken for revolutionists.

French Ministers Resign.

Gentlemen.—It is with pleasure that we reply to your letter asking about the success with Dr. Fay's New Treatment for Consumption. Six months ago we gave our first order and since then we have sold eight times as much as our first order amounted to more than any other lung medicine we sell. Our customers after once using it want no other and they are always sure to recommend it to some other sufferer. It could not give better satisfaction and we have much faith in what it will do that we are not afraid to recommend it to any person in need of a lung medicine. With many wishes for your success,
Yours truly,

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I'm e'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent;
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory.

A RACE FOR LIFE.

A gun is heard at the dead of night,
"Life boat ready!"
And every man to the signal true
Fights for place in the eager crew;
"Now, lads, steady!"
First a glance at the shuddering foam,
Now a look at the loving home,
Then, together, with bated breath,
They launch their boat in the gulf of death.
Over the breakers wild,
Little they reck of weather,
But tear their way
Thro' blinding spray,
Hear the skipper cheer, and say:
"Up with her, lads, and lift her
All together!"

They see the ship in a sudden flash,
Sinking ever low,
And grip their oars with a deeper breath;
Now it comes to a fight with death;
Now or never!
Fifty strokes and they're at her side,
If they live in the boiling tide,
If they toss thro' the awful strife!
Ah, my lads, it's a race for life!
Over the breakers wild,
Little they reck of weather,
But tear their way
Thro' blinding spray,
Hear the skipper cheer, and say:
"Up with her, lads, and lift her
All together!"

And loving hearts upon the shore
Hoping, fearing, • • •
Till over the sea comes a cheer,
Then the clink of the oars you hear,
Homeward steering.
Ne'er a thought of the danger past,
Now the lads are on shore at last;
What's the storm to a gallant crew
Who race for life and win it, too?
Over the breakers wild,
Little they reck of weather,
But tear their way
Thro' blinding spray,
Hear the skipper cheer, and say:
"Up with her, lads, and lift her
All together!"

HIS FIRST PATIENT.

The Canine Charge That Made the Doctor's Reputation.

It is thirty years since I put my shingle up. I had a very little money, so had Matilda; we were desperately in love with each other—so much so that we really could not afford to wait; so Matilda and I got married. I lay in wait for patients behind my office door. Like a hungry tiger (figuratively speaking) I cried aloud: "Ducky, ducky darling, come and be killed." But they did not come. The ducks—I mean the patients — merely said: "Quack!" (figuratively speaking again), and passed me by. They evidently looked on my shingle as a danger signal. But I soon got a large practice among the poor, and those who could not or would not pay. They appointed me their body physician. I need hardly add that it was a purely honorary post.

Now, there was a rich old maiden lady who lived opposite us—she was an eccentric but charitable old woman, and her name was Glumper—Clarissa Glumper. There was no chance of a woman like that coming to me for advice. Dr. Dulle was her medical attendant. He seemed to be everybody's medical attendant that was worth attending. My blood used to boil within me with indignation whenever I was his mud-bespattered carriage and pair tearing about the neighborhood.

One afternoon, I saw Dr. Dulle's coachman pull up at Miss Glumper's door, and Matilda watched him through the blind.

"Jack," she said, excitedly, "he's only stopped five minutes; I timed him; and, oh, Jack! when he came out, he was as red as a turkey cock. Perhaps he's apoplectic," added Matilda, with a wistful sigh. "Oh, Jack!" cried my wife, after an interval of a few moments, "there's the footman going post-haste for the medicine," and then she suddenly clutched my wrist, her face grew ashy pale, and she hissed, in a hoarse whisper: "Oh, Jack! he's coming here. Quick—quick!" cried Matilda.

In an instant she had carefully regulated my cravat. There was a tremendous ring at the door. Of course, as ill-luck would have it, Mary, our servant, was out, so, my heart beating wildly, I opened the door myself, and tried to look as unconcerned as possible.

"You're to come across to the missus at once," said the pampered menial, in a patronizing tone.

"Is it very urgent?" I said, looking at my watch.

"It's a matter of life and death," said the man, with a vulgar grin, which I could not understand.

"I will attend to it immediately," I said.

I had been smoking, so I took some tincture of cloves, Matilda sprinkled my hair and whiskers with eau-de-cologne. I thrust my instrument case into one pocket and my emergency case into the other, and then I tried to walk across the street in a dignified manner, and, of course, failed miserably. The footman, who was awaiting my arrival, was still grinning maliciously; he ushered me at once into the drawing room, where, by the fire, sat an old lady in black, sobbing bitterly. It was Miss Glumper—the great Miss Glumper herself.

"Are you the young man of the name of Pestle?" she said.

"I am Dr. Pestle, madam," I replied, in my haughtiest manner.

"Quite so, quite so; I am sure I beg your pardon, Dr. Pestle," said the old lady, still sobbing copiously. "Dr. Pestle," she said, very solemnly, "are you a man of the world?"

A mystery—evidently a mystery. "Madam," I began, "I have never divulged a professional secret—"

"We are wasting precious time, Dr. Pestle," said the old lady, interrupting me; "I believe her to be sinking fast. She's all I have in the world, doctor. You won't mind seeing her, will you, as a favor?"

"Madam," I began, "as a matter of common humanity—"

"She isn't human," she said.

The old lady was in deep grief, and she carefully lifted a shawl which covered something that lay upon the sofa. On the cushion was a fat pug dog, panting convulsively.

"Dr. Pestle," cried the old lady, "only save my darling's life, and there's nothing I won't do for you! Is there hope?" she added, in a voice of agony.

"While there's life there's hope, madam," I said, oracularly.

I whipped out my emergency case and I attempted to administer a remedy to my unfortunate patient. The beast tried to bite me at once.

"That's a good sign, madam," I said; "a capital sign. She'll require care, great care," I added, "the greatest possible care; but we must do what we can for her. If, madam," I went on, "I can have her under my own eye, I might be able to do a great deal for her."

"We'll make up a bed for you, with pleasure," replied Miss Glumper. "I beg you'll not leave her for a single instant, Dr. Pestle. Expense is no object, I need hardly add."

"Madam," I said, in my best professional manner, "she needs absolute change of scene; rest, seclusion, and—er—the usual remedies," I added, vaguely. "If you will permit me to remove the little patient to my own residence, all that human skill can do shall be done for her; otherwise," I added, and I looked unutterable things, "success is well-nigh impossible."

Miss Glumper clasped her hands in agony. "It's so hard to part with her, doctor," she said.

"The matter is for your consideration, madam," I remarked.

"But may I come and see her?" exclaimed Miss Glumper.

"No, madam," I said, sternly; "the excitement of such interviews might prove fatal to the patient's life."

"Oh, Flora! Flora!" cried Miss Glumper, and she dropped upon her knees and kissed the patient's fat back. "Would you believe it, Dr. Pestle," cried the lady, excitedly, "that Dr. Dulle actually declined to prescribe for the little patient. I've lost all confidence in Dr. Dulle," she said; and then she rang the bell.

The footman answered it.

"Adolphus John," said his mistress, "you will take Flora to this gentleman's private residence; you will carry her with the utmost care. I will send my man every hour for tidings, Dr. Pestle," said the old lady. "I have trusted you, doctor," she said, tragically; "see that you do your duty," and then, overcome by her feelings, she hurried from the room.

I accompanied Flora and Adolphus John to my own house. As soon as the man had left I began to consider Flora's case seriously. I determined to call in a consultant at once. I knew nothing about dogs; but I knew a man who did. After dark a person of villainous appearance presented himself at my back door. No sooner did he see the unfortunate Flora than he pronounced her case hopeless. "I'd have her drowned at once, sir, if I was you."

"You're quite sure the beast won't get over it?" I asked.

"She's as good as dead already," said the man; "she's got the 'yallers,' and her liver's gone to nothing."

I had never even treated a case of "yallers!" He did not seem in any doubt about his diagnosis.

"I could get ye a better nor she for the matter of fifteen bob," he added. "I know of a dawg as is as like her as two peas; they might be twins, for the matter of that."

"If you'll bring her to-night and she suits me, I'll give you a sovereign," I said.

I gave him half a crown, and, with a wink of thanks, he departed.

In about an hour Flora had passed away. I buried her secretly in the back garden; I did not breathe a word of what had happened to a living soul. About midnight the dog fancier arrived, bringing another pug dog in a bag, the very image of the deceased, but it was not so fat.

"Answers to the name of Popsy, gov'nor," remarked the man, "and I wouldn't be seen with her in Camberwell if I was you. D'ye tumble?"

I hastened to assure him that I did tumble. I gave him his sovereign and let him out.

All that night the new dog howled continually. We tempted it with the choicest viands, but the brute would not eat.

"She must be better to make all that noise," remarked Matilda.

"There is a marked improvement, my dear. What we have to dread is a relapse. In cases of—er—malignant yellows, solution of continuity frequently takes place."

Matilda was perfectly satisfied. "How dreadful," she said.

My wife and I fed that beast for a whole fortnight as though we had been Chinese and were fattening it for the table. Each day I visited Miss Glumper and reported the patient's gradual improvement. "You'll find her much changed," I said; "the poor thing's terribly pulled down and the memory almost entirely gone. It has been a wonderful case," I said—"a wonderfully successful case; and, strange to say," I added, in a pathetic voice, "I've got to love the little thing as though she were my own."

Miss Glumper took my hand and burst into tears; her heart was too full for words.

Of course Matilda and I always addressed the brute as Flora; but it was some time before she would answer to the name. At length I brought home Flora to her expectant mistress.

"I shouldn't have known her," cried Miss Glumper, as she fondled the brute and fed it with slices of cold chicken. "Oh, Dr. Pestle, how shall I testify my gratitude to you? Pray let me know the amount of my indebtedness."

But I drew the line at taking her money. "Madam," I said, "I am only too glad to be of use to you."

"Doctor," replied the lady, "I'm eternally obliged."

For five-and-twenty years Miss Glumper's account was as good as a hundred a year to me. She left me a thousand pounds in her will; but she did more than that. "Dr. Pestle," she used to say to everybody, "saved a life that was very, very dear to me." Under the circumstances, it would have been my own fault if I had not, in course of time, managed to put together one of the tidiest little practices in the neighborhood.—English Paper.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

MICHIGAN COMPLIMENTED.

The Work Done by the State Board of Health as Viewed in Tennessee.

The last bulletin of the Tennessee state board of health, January, 1892, speaking of Michigan, says:

"This state, with Massachusetts, may justly claim a leading position in the public health movement. The people support their state board of health, which carries on the work, under the long-continued guidance of one who is perhaps the most eminent sanitary authority in the western world. A notable feature in the programme of this board has long been the holding of sanitary conventions from time to time in different parts of the state, small towns not being overlooked. Speaking of a recent one: The proceedings fill a closely-printed octave pamphlet of forty-three pages, and are able papers and discussions of the points in which the parties requesting the convention are directly interested, read and conducted not mainly by the officers and members of the state board of health, but quite as much by intelligent and cultivated citizens of Negaunee.

"Michigan, the university state of the northwest, is no less distinguished as a model for sanitary reform in all that vast region. Tennessee, the university state of the south, should not lag behind Michigan in sanitation. Especially should those cities and towns which are the seat of crowded institutions of learning, patronized by the people of many states, take the lead in this grand field of popular education."

Michigan Crops.

The Michigan crop report for February, issued by the secretary of the state, shows that the total number of bushels of wheat reported marketed by farmers in January was 981,048, and the total amount marketed from August to January was 9,850,695 bushels, which is 1,069,847 more than was reported marketed in the same months last year and 32 per cent of the estimated crop of 1891. Farm animals of all kinds were wintering well, their condition as reported ranging from 2 to 4 points below the average.

Says His Soul Is in Heaven.

William Coulter, the parricide, who, after a trial and acquittal on a charge of murder, confessed at a religious meeting that he had killed his father and afterward perjured himself to escape conviction, was arraigned in the circuit court at Sault Ste. Marie on a charge of perjury, pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment. Coulter is undoubtedly crazy. He says that his soul is in Heaven and that he cares not what becomes of his body.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health by sixty-one observers in different parts of the state for the week ended February 13 indicated that cholera infantum, typho-malarial fever and inflammation of the bowels increased, and scarlet fever, cholera morbus, diphtheria and erysipelas decreased in area of prevelance. Diphtheria was reported at twenty-five places, scarlet fever at fifty-two, typhoid fever at sixteen and measles at five places.

I feel it my duty to say a few words in regard to Ely's Cream Balm, and I do so entirely without solicitation. I have used it more or less half a year, and have found it to be most admirable. I have suffered from catarrh of the worst kind ever since I was a little boy and I never hoped for cure, but Cream Balm seems to do that. Many of my acquaintances have used it with excellent results.—Oscar Ostrum, 45 Warren Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Mrs. Frank Thompson died last Friday at 3 o'clock a. m. She had been a great sufferer for fifteen months and had been confined to the house since last summer. But through all her sickness she maintained a cheerfulness of disposition that at times seemed almost pitiful to those who knew how great her suffering was. She was a great lover of flowers and for nearly a year she has not been without them in her house, some sent from a distance, but most of them from friends here. A few days before her death she made the wish that she might be buried in flowers and her casket was literally a bed of Calla lillies, carnations, roses, Easter lillies, smilax and geraniums. There was also a beautiful cross and a basket, given by intimate friends and members of the family. Mrs. Thompson was confirmed by Bishop Harris in 1883 and has since been one of the most faithful and consistent members of St. John's church. She leaves a husband and son, who are joined by friends innumerable in mourning her loss. The funeral was held Sunday, at 2 p. m., from her home, Rev. Reeves, rector of St. John's church, officiating at the house, and Rev. Stone concluding the service at Riverside Cemetery, where she was laid to rest.

THREE MURDERERS EXECUTED.

Lehman Hanged at Custer City, S. D., and Two Negroes in the South.

PIERRE, S. D., Feb. 20.—Murderer Lehman, whose three trials, plea of insanity, application to the supreme court for a writ of error, appeal to the governor for a reprieve, and to the board of pardons for a commutation of sentence failed to save him from sentence of death, was executed at Custer City Friday morning.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Feb. 20.—Charles Cummings (colored) was hanged here Friday morning for killing David Williams (colored) in November, 1890. His neck was broken. The scenes just preceding the execution were intensely dramatic. The condemned man walked up and down the long corridor of the jail with a military air, singing hymns in a voice so loud as to be heard blocks away.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 20.—William Smith (colored), alias "Hot Bill," was executed at Gretna Friday. The drop fell at 12:49. Smith committed a most brutal murder, his victim being an old white man named Dominic Commerio, the difficulty having to do with nothing more than a little tobacco.

AGAINST THE SALOONS.

Michigan Liquor Law Interpreted by the Supreme Court of That State.

LANSING, Mich., Feb. 22.—The supreme court in two cases decided Friday held that any room in any way opening into a bar-room and used in any connection therewith during hours when the saloon business can be legally conducted is an adjunct of the saloon and cannot be kept open during prohibited hours. In both these cases the conviction of saloonkeepers for keeping their saloons open on Sunday was affirmed. It was held that it was not necessary that liquors should be technically sold in these rooms to make them a part of the saloon, the mere fact that liquors were dispensed and imbibed therein being sufficient within the contemplation of the statute. In the third case the court held that a bartender had no more right to go to his employer's saloon on Sunday to get a drink than has any other person.

A DARING THIEF.

His Bold Attempt to Rob a Central Hudson Express Car.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Feb. 22.—A man calling himself William Cross attempted to rob the American express car on the New York Central road between this city and Syracuse Saturday night. He shot Express Messenger McInerny and proceeded to ransack the packages when the trainmen discovered him. He shot at them and at Lyons he jumped on an engine, shooting as he went. After a hot chase he left the engine and forced a farmer to give him a horse. He was finally captured in a swamp and taken to Lyons jail. McInerny was not seriously hurt.

Boundary Line Dispute.

BENSON, A. T., Feb. 22.—The announcement is made by a prominent Mexican official of Sonora that the new survey of the international boundary line between Mexico and the United States will throw at least 60 miles of American territory under Mexican jurisdiction. Such a result would include the towns of Nogales, Tombstone, Tucson, Wilcox, Benson, Gila Bend and Yuma in Arizona, and San Diego, Cal., besides the entire line of the Southern Pacific in Arizona.

Mrs. Thos. Scott, Mrs. Matthew Yates, John Britton and family.

After a lingering illness of some months Grandma Britton passed away to that realm that knows no pain or sorrow, aged 86 years. Those boys who broke their bottle of whiskey in the entrance of the library Saturday night have been found out. For their parents' sake we will not give their names this time, but if they are not a little more careful how they conduct themselves hereafter, not only will their names be given but means will be resorted to whereby they will be provided with employment that will help them to spend their time more profitably.

Our citizens were somewhat surprised Saturday morning when the news went flying from house to house that Ed Baker and Marcia Kelly were married. They stole a march on their young friends and were united in marriage at Detroit on Thursday. Their lady friends cannot understand how it came about. The explanation is simple. It is leap year and Marcia was awake to the fact and improved her privilege. If you wish to possess a prize, young ladies, improve your days of grace before the years of old maidenhood are upon you. We, in behalf of their many friends, extend congratulations and wish for them a long, happy and prosperous voyage over the sea of time.

The L. C. S. will be held this week Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Frances Wiggins, south of the village, when the following program will be carried out:

Mrs. Dr. Perkins, of North-west Franklin, was taken sick with heart disease Monday evening and died in the night at 1 o'clock.

Whether or not necessity prompted the action we are unable to say, but Mrs. W. C. Witherell had conceived the idea of having a new carpet; and, desiring to make the task an enjoyable one, she invited the young ladies to come Saturday afternoon, and help transform the cast off garments into carpet rags. The young ladies, remembering it was leap year, informed the young gentlemen that they might come and spend the evening, and then take them—the ladies—home. The young ladies were by no means idle as they sewed some 15 pounds of rags. A bountiful supper well over with, music was the principal feature of the evening. The horn, flute violins, banjo, mouth organs and piano, and various songs made the house fairly ring until midnight. The rigid formality, which characterize so many of our evening assemblies, was forgotten; and when the hour arrived for departure all went home feeling deeply the truth that the place to enjoy ourselves is at an old fashioned country gathering.

A Monster Evergreen Nursery.

The annual catalogue of the Evergreen Nurseries, of Evergreen, Wisconsin, has been issued and this office has been favored with a copy. They now list fully three hundred varieties of coniferous evergreens. Some of them are very strange and unique in form and habit of growth. They have been to great pains and expense to secure seeds and plants of evergreens found native in all parts of the earth. If a man wants evergreens cheap but good, for screens, groves, wind-breaks or hedges, there is no better place to go in America. If a man is fond of the marvelous, strange and curious forms in nature, there is no other place in this country where his fancy can be satisfied with rare and beautiful evergreens. These nurseries are growing the plants in immense numbers, planting the seeds by the ton. They imported from one seed house in Germany last season 2300 pounds, besides all they gathered in this country, getting large quantities from Colorado, California, Washington, and all the western states and territories. It is well worth any man's while to send for their lists.

Can We Afford Water Works?

EDITOR OF HERALD:—It's a very easy thing to say, "Vote for the water works," and it is also very easy to vote to put in water works. A careful business man sits down to count the cost. We are all fond of luxuries and if we can afford them it's all right to have them. Let us look at this question candidly and fairly. Last year the levy of two and one-half mills on the dollar of assessed property in our corporation brought into our treasury about $3000. The present proposition, as I understand it, is to vote to issue bonds for $35,000, $3,000 of which is to be paid each year. Thus, you see, our tax must necessarily be just double what it was last year. The charter of our village will only allow a tax of five mills on a dollar for any one year. Thus, you see, to raise this $3,000 extra each year will require the full charter limit for at least twelve years to come. But this is not all. If we issue bonds now for $35,000, and can raise but $3,000 this year to apply on that debt, that leaves $32,000 still unpaid, upon which interest must be paid. Counting interest at five per cent it amounts to $1600, and as this interest must be paid annually instead of our having to pay $3000 the first year we must pay $4600.

Another point: You will find that this estimate of $35,000 is too low. That amount will probably put in the main pipes and furnish power and water supply, but when you come to treat all parts of the corporation alike and give them all equal advantages according to the tax they pay, you will find that $50,000 is not too light an estimate of total cost, saying nothing of interest, which will amount to about one half as much as the principal. Then, when we have the water works, in order to get anywhere near the full benefit of their use in water-closets, drains, etc., we must have a system of sewerage. The sewers would cost as much, or more, than the water works.

These things are very nice. Can we afford them at the necessary cost is the question for each voter to decide for himself.

Respectfully,
A. W. MILLS.

The Ladies' Home Journal.

The March number of The Ladies' Home Journal preserves most admirably the excellence which this popular magazine has accustomed its 700,000 readers to expect; the place of honor is given to the interesting and beautifully illustrated article by Ada Chester Bond entitled "A Royal Recluse," which deals with the life of seclusion led by the Ex-Empress Eugenie, at Farnborough, England. Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher continues her interesting reminiscences of her famous husband, and Miss Winnie Davis, daughter of Jefferson Davis, contributes her concluding paper on "The American Girl who studies abroad." Miss Davis writes entertainingly on a subject of which she has had practical and personal knowledge and makes a strong plea for American training for American girls. Mrs. Frank Leslie and Henri Junius Browne answer with decided negatives the questioned cousations "Are Women Inconstant?" Frederick Dolman gives an interesting sketch, illustrated with portrait, of Mrs. Charles H. Spurgeon, the widow of the famous London preacher, and Francis E. Smith an equally delightful one of Mrs. Gabrielle Greeley Clendenin. The first part of a serial, "A Brief Prelude," by Margaret Butler Snow, capitally illustrated by A. B. Wenzell, provides good fiction. Samuel Abbott and Harry Romaine contribute short poems, while the cover bears a poem to "March," by Ella Wheeler Wilcox. Rev. Dr. Talmage, Mrs. Lyman Abbott, Mrs. Margaret Bottome and Mrs. Scovil are found in their respective departments. Robert J. Burdette discourses pleasantly "From a New Inkstand." Ruth Ashmore continues her "Side Talks With Girls," and Foster Coates gives the boys much good information concerning trade schools, trade organizations and "Tradesmen Who Have Become Famous." The artistic is represented in the pages edited by Maude Haywood and Mary F. Knapp, the former of whom gives a special illustrated paper on "Artistic Ribbon Embroidery," as taught at the New York Society of Decorative Art. Mrs. Mallon writes of "Fashionable Visiting Toilettes," and Miss Hooper is as usual helpful to the home dressmaker. The juvenile subscribers are remembered in the full page of Mr. Palmer Cox's "Brownies," and the amateur gardener in Mr. Rexford's "All About Flowers." All together, the March number is of unusual excellence, and worth many times its modest price of ten cents. Published at one dollar per year by the Curtis Publishing Company, of Philadelphia.

A Level-Headed View.

The Philadelphia Times takes the following very level-headed view of the political situation as affected by Hill's mid-winter convention and the emphatic protest evoked by it:

It goes without saying that Senator Hill controlled the Democratic state convention at Albany yesterday in every movement it made, and that he will hold in his hand a united delegation, subject to his absolue orders, to appear at Chicago to nominate a Democratic candidate for President. He is absolute master of the situation in New York, and his will is to be the supreme law of the New York delegation acting under the unit rule.

It must be apparent to all the friends of Senator Hill who are safe from incarceration in a lunatic asylum, that Hill has no more chance for President than has Councilman William McMullin, of this city. Both are useful men in politics in their way. Both accept the same methods and they differ only in the degree of eminence they have attained; but while Hill is not in the race himself, he may be a great factor for evil and it is not entirely impossible that he may give the Republicans the next President, as his friends gave Harrison the presidency in 1888.

It is quite possible that Senator Hill himself does not appreciate the situation. Few men who have been suddenly elevated to the position of candidate for President, with a great state behind them, could take a plain, horizontal view of the political situation, and it is more than probable that Hill dreams of the possibility of his nomination and election to the presidency. Such a delusion may be measurably pardoned in Hill, but there are many men around him who must know that his candidacy for the presidency promises only incalculable evil to his party without even a silver lining of good.

If the New York delegation shall appear at Chicago disposed to confer with the leading Democrats throughout the country and to pay reasonable deference to the dominant sentiment of those who must elect a Democratic President, if one shall be elected this year, Senator Hill can not only be saved from the most conspicuous political suicide of modern times, but the Democratic party may be saved from defeat by perfidy within its own household. If, on the other hand, the New York delegation shall go to the national convention and demand the nomination of Senator Hill, the signs are unmistakable that the Democrats of the nation will assert themselves over and above New York and nominate Mr. Cleveland for President on the first ballot. It is not disputed that the overwhelming sentiment of the Democratic people calls for Cleveland's nomination and that sentiment will be invited to assert its omnipotence if New York shall appear at Chicago in the disgraceful attitude of demanding that a great party shall be prostituted to nationalize saloon politics.

If Senator Hill possessed half the wisdom that many of his friends assume that he possesses he would manfully give the vote of his state to Cleveland's nomination, lead the battle to Cleveland's election and thus prove that his leadership of the Democracy of New York means something more than political theft and personal aggrandizement. Thus far Hill's political policy has not even pretended to rise above the flavor of the saloon and the control of political power for purely personal ends. While he was Governor of New York that policy could be maintained for at least a season, but when such a policy is pressed upon a great party and a demand made that it shall be nationalized, it must mean either humiliating defeat to Hill or disgraceful defeat to the party that yields to his demands.

The next Republican candidate for President can be defeated only by the Democrats presenting a better man with better purposes and nobler aims than the Republican candidate. If the people shall not confidently expect better government from a Democratic President than from a Republican administration, they will not change the political control of the government, and if the Democrats should present a worse candidate than the Republicans, as would be the case with Hill nominated against any Republican who has been thought of for the place, the Republicans would win every debatable state and sweep the country by an overwhelming majority. Senator Hill possesses much power for evil, and the only question is to what extent he will exercise it; but however he may wield the power he possesses, the Democratic people of the nation will not be obedient to his will, nor would they, under any circumstances, accept him as their candidate.

IN 1855 AND NOW.

A Comparison of Prices Forty Years Ago With Those of the Present.

Are things cheaper than they used to be?

In answer to the above question we will say they are—very much cheaper—in material and construction and in many instances price: but it is safe to say that in wear and tear the common articles of every day use sold forty years ago were much cheaper to the purchaser, for the best is always the cheapest.

We have in our possession the books kept by Samuel N. Baker, who was the founder of the potteries now conducted by his sons in Rockville, and, who also kept a general store for some years before his death in 1860. Below is the account of a day laborer named Franklin Stuart:

1855.	Dr.
Oct. 3, to 1 paper needles	$ 1c
Oct. 6, to 6 pounds coffee at 12½c	1.0c
Oct. 3, ½ hand tobacco at 30c	2c
Oct. 6, ½ pound soda at 15c	3
Oct. 6, 4 mackerel at 6¼c	2c
Oct. 18, by 1 pair shoes	1.25
Jan. 22, 1856, 2 yards cotton and drilling	2c
Feb. 1, 1 check shirt	6c
Feb. 11, tobacco and comb	10
March 14, one hoe	3c
Total	$4 18

On page 12 of the ledger we notice an entry at James W. Beadle's account as follows:

Oct. 31, 1855, 1 pair suspenders per John 10c

Also we notice that O. J. Innis bought a rake on the 18th of April, 1856, for 25 cents.

Aside from all questions of superiority of goods sold thirty-five years ago, how much cheaper can the above items be bought in Rockville to-day? Some items may be purchased at a lower price, others will cost more. But it must always be remembered that there was not a railroad in Parke county thirty-five years ago, and every pound of goods sold in Rockville had to be hauled here in wagons. Then comes the important question of labor. In those days nearly everything was made by hand. Inventions have so cheapened the labor cost of articles that one man and a machine now does the work formerly done by 100 men. Goods ought to be sold to Rockville laborers at much lower prices than are now paid.

We also have before us a copy of the Terre Haute Journal, January 23, 1852, published just forty years ago to-day, and in the advertisement of the Prairie City store we read: "Now opened and scattering 10,000 yards heavy brown sheetings and shirtings, the price, 6 to 8 cents per yard."

F. Nippert, in the same paper, advertises to sell "calicoes of every quality, ranging from 5 cents to 12½ cents per yard." These records are worth more than all the "witnesses" who might be called to give testimony from memory.

On the single item of calico, Rockville prices at the same time show a marked difference. It can only be explained by the fact that none of the cheaper grades were sold here. In that event there is not much difference between the price of the hand-made goods of those days and the machine goods of to-day. We are told that the best calico has recently retailed at 12½ cents.

According to a writer in the Republican, labor about Rockville, measured from a standard of wood chopping, was paid 50 cents per cord in 1859. Exactly the same price is paid to-day, so in the matter of wages the laborer is no better off after thirty years of a national system of economy that has given two-thirds of the wealth produced in that time to one two-thousandth of the population. The county records tell the rest. The laborers of that day were on the tax duplicates as self-supporting property owners, paying on an average of over $300 of property each, and paying it. Their counterparts of to-day, if assessed at all, are listed only for poll tax, and as a rule this is delinquent.

The pauper expense of Parke county in 1860 was $1,131.59. In 1890 it was $13,262.76. Here are some interesting figures for those who argue that the day laborer is better off than he was in 1860.—Rockville (Md.) Tribune.

FOR FREE WOOL.

The "Wool Consumers Association" Petition Congress For Free Wool and Lower Duties on Woolen Goods.

To the Honorable, the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

The Wool Consumers' Association respectfully petitions the Fifty-second congress to change schedule K relating to wool and woolens, in the tariff act of 1890, for the relief of woolen manufacturers, and for the benefit of all consumers of woolen fabrics.

It is, of course, undesirable in general, to change tariff frequently, but the general principles of the act of 1890, as applied to wool and woolens, are the same as have been tried unsatisfactorily for very many years, except that it aggravates some of the worst and most oppressive features of former acts in relation to wool.

The act has therefore practically been tested by the trials of many years, and there is no occasion to test it by longer experience. It is not true that the act, in its present form, can work no harm to woolen manufacturers. It works the same injury to the makers of woolen and worsted cloth that the restrictions on the use of wool always have produced; and, in the case of the carpet trade, which consumes a very large proportion of all the imported wool, and it is the most oppressive act ever passed.

The wool schedule (K) of the tariff act of 1890 offers an exceptional opportunity, by amendments making wool free and relatively decreasing both the specific and ad valorem duties on woolen goods, to benefit immensely the woolen manufacturers by giving them free access to the supplies of wool of various qualities, such as all other competing manufacturing countries enjoy, and by reducing thus without injury to manufacturers the cost of their goods to them and to the consumers, while leaving sufficient protection. With free raw materials, the tax on imports of competing goods would be almost entirely for the protection of labor; and as free raw materials would greatly increase the consumption, there would be an increased demand for labor.

Neither is it true that no harm has come to consumers by the law of 1890. In the first place, the increased cost of wool, as compared with prices in Europe, has forced the use of cotton and other adulterants to a great and unusual extent; and, secondly, if woolen goods have not advanced, they might have been lower but for the duties on wool. There is no question among manufacturers that the act of 1890 was intended to advance prices, nor that it was well calculated to do so to the extent that consumers could afford. The almost universal fall in prices was caused in very small degree, if at all, by the tariff act of 1890. The tremendous losses in the Argentine republic and elsewhere, the failure of the Barings, the distrust caused by silver legislation, the low price of cotton in the south on account of an enormous crop, the failure of crops in the north and west prior to 1891, causing dull trade and reduced consumption, are the principal causes that brought distress and falling prices.

What those manufacturers and wool growers who arranged the wool schedule with the intention of increasing prices want is, no doubt, to be let alone, so that the tariff act may produce under more favorable auspices the results they expected and worked for. But the rest that the public needs is a permanent relief from taxes which oppress both them and manufacturers, which hamper the latter, as every manufacturer admits, and which largely increase the cost of woolen goods to the public. The readjustment of the tariff on the basis of free wool is perfectly simple; it needs but the removal of the duties on wool and a corresponding reduction of the duties on goods which were put on to offset the the cost of the wool duties. Here is a great boon to every manufacturer of wool and to every consumer.

The growth of the wool manufacture has undoubtedly been great during the past thirty years, for the country, with its vast natural resources and enormous immigration, has increased vastly in population and wealth; but the growth of the manufacture would be much more prosperous and much greater with free wool, and its growth and prosperity mean larger use of domestic wools and higher prices abroad for all competing wools.

It is clear from the statements of the National Association of Wool Manufacturers and from undoubted facts, emphasized by the vast increase in the imports of wool since the passage of the act of 1890 and by the falling prices of Ohio wool, that this country produces practically no carpet wool to supply the demand for nearly 100,000,000 pounds needed by the carpet manufacturers, and only a part of the cloining and combing wools needed; and it is further to be considered that the use of wool for so-called "woolens" would be much larger if the restrictions of the wool duties did not greatly reduce the consumption of wool and largely increase the use of shoddy and cotton in so-called woolen goods.

And this is the case after a long series of years of high duties on wool. In the theory of the "new protection," it is laid down as a principle that "the necessities entering into the daily life of the mass of the people which we cannot economically produce should be made free."

On this principle wool should certainly be made free. It is a most important article for all the people. It is produced in this country in inadequate quantities, and not in the necessary varieties and qualities. Some indispensable grades can be produced in this country only under conditions unfavorable as compared with those of other countries. High duties for a quarter of a century have failed to produce any carpet wool in this country, and have also failed to produce an adequate supply of the wools needed for the woolen and worsted manufacture. And, as wool can be made free with a large reduction in cost of goods and with very little disturbance of trade or of interference with sufficient protection, it is only reasonable that the changes suggested in schedule K of the act of 1890 should be made for the benefit of the whole people.

Some Wool Prices.

The following table of prices of domestic wool in 1891, compiled by the Boston Commercial Bulletin, shows how under the increased duties on wool imposed by the McKinley tariff the price of wool has steadily gone down:

	Jan. 3.	Apr. 3.	July.	Oct	Dec. 31.
Ohio xx	34c.	33c.	32c.	31½c.	30c.
Michigan x	30	29	28	27	26½
Maine ¾ combing	32	30	28	29	28
Fine warp Montana clean	65	67	65	64	64
Fine med. Wyoming clean	60	60	59	58	58
Good A sup. clean	58	60	60	53	52

In commenting upon this in a letter which he writes to the Wool Reporter a wool grower of San Antonio, Tex., says: "As the passage and becoming a law of the McKinley bill has had the effect of causing our domestic wools to decline in value from two to three cents per pound, it would seem but natural that to repeal this law would cause prices of wool to advance."

—The Mexican government has decided to place an export duty on silver-lead ore shipped to the United States, in retaliation for the duty of 1½ cents per pound on the lead contents imposed on Mexican ores by the McKinley tariff. A short time ago we showed how the imposition of this duty on the part of the United States cut down our production of lead from silver-lead ore and at the same time sent a great deal of capital to Mexico to be expended in the building of smelters there. Now that these have begun working, Mexico feels bound to help them as much as possible, and at our expense. Maj. McKinley can congratulate himself upon the fact that the tariff on lead ore has at least benefitted somebody—even if that somebody is the people of Mexico.

The Atlantic Monthly for March opens with an article by the Rev. Brooke Herford, the popular Boston clergyman, on "An Old English Township," in which he embodies, in a delightful way, the chances and changes of a settlement in Lancashire, Singleton by name, with which Mr. Herford is thoroughly familiar, and which shows him at heart to have all that true English love of the country which is almost a national characteristic. Mr. Crawford continues his serial of Italian life, "Don Orsino" and Miss Isabel F. Hapgood has a vividly written paper on Russian travel, called "Harvest Tide on the Volga." Miss Agnes Repplier contributes an interesting essay on "The Children's Poets, in which she demonstrates that it is not necessary for children to understand poetry to enjoy it; and that very often children do not understand precisely the infantile kind of poetry which is written for them, but prefer poems like Tennyson's "Lady of Shalott," which not all grown people comprehend. Joel Chandler Harris has a short dialect story, called "The Belle of St. Valerien,"—not a story of negro life, for St. Valerien is a township of New France. Edith Thomas, under the fanciful title of "The Little Children of Cybele," describes in a half-serious, half-fanciful fashion, the habits of the swallow, the squirrel, the tortoise, the chipmunk, and other dumb pensioners of nature, interspersed here and there with short poems, also by Miss Thomas. The most important article in the number, however, is "Why the Men of '61 fought for the Union," by Major General Jacob Dolson Cox (at one time Governor of Ohio, and Secretary of the Interior, and now Dean of of the Cincinnati Law School), which furnishes another of the principles involved in the contest between the North and South, and which will be read with interest by those who have enjoyed Professor Shaler's and Professor Gildersleve's views on the same subject. Another important article is by Professor George Herbert Palmer, of Harvard University, who writes on "Doubts about University Extension," a scholarly paper which will command the attention of the many persons interested in the work of university extension throughout the country. Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin's clever short story, called "A Village Watch Tower," gives liveliness to the number, and there are papers by Gamaliel Bradford, Jr., F. Blake Crofton, with some poetry, and several able reviews. This notice of the number, however, should not be closed without calling attention to "A Political Parallel, a fearless article introducing current politics. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston.

Officer A. H. Braley
of the Fall River Police

Is highly gratified with Hood's Sarsaparilla. He was badly run down, had no appetite, what he did eat caused distress and he felt tired all the time. A few bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla effected a marvellous change. The distress in the stomach is entirely gone, he feels like a new man, and can eat anything with old-time relish. For all of which he thanks and cordially recommends Hood's Sarsaparilla. It is very important that during the months of March April May the blood should be thoroughly purified and the system be given strength to withstand the debilitating effect of the changing season. For this purpose Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses peculiar merit and it is the Best Spring Medicine.

March April May

The following, just received, demonstrates its wonderful blood-purifying powers:

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Gentlemen: I have had salt rheum for a number of years, and for the past year one of my legs, from the knee down, has been broken out very badly. I took blood medicine for a long time with no good results, and was at one time obliged to walk with crutches. I finally concluded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and before I had taken one bottle the improvement was so marked that I continued until I had taken three bottles, and am now better than I have been in years. The inflammation has all left my leg and it is entirely healed. I have had such benefit from that I concluded to write this voluntary statement." F. J. TEMPLE, Ridgeway, Mich.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

About Competition.

ers' Union, writes me from Wagga Wagga, New South Wales, saying:

Socialism of the Bellamy brand is spreading here, and the only thing we have to offer here as an argument against their doctrine is an admission that the single tax will and must necessarily bring voluntary co-operation and less governmental machinery—less rule, or more law and less force—anarchy of a sort. Of course, there is no great fight between us, as Socialists admit the pooling of land values is the first step toward reform; but they set as much value on the nationalization of banks and capital as that of the land, and want to start right away to nationalize those things which we believe are not in their nature monopolies, and which would not be monopolies if land values were taken by the people. In short, they do not believe in competition and want to abolish it right away. If we stick to competition and regard it as almost a natural law, what about the waste involved in our present industrial system? Taxation of land values will not prevent the employment of labor uselessly in advertising, etc., etc., or will it? If so, how?

Answering Mr. Head's question in spirit rather than in letter, I would say: Yes; it will. For while the useless expenditure of labor in advertising or any other branch of effort could not be prevented without interefering with natural rights and without stifling useful effort I take Mr. Head to refer to that waste that goes on where three stores are started in a place where two would suffice, or where a hundred men are found in a business or profession in which sixty or seventy men could do, and would be glad to do, all that is needed. This waste of effort, which is very striking all over the civilized world, the socialists propose to prevent by abolishing competition—that is to say, by abolishing the liberty of men to dispose their efforts as they please. They would have the state manage and control all production and exchange, so that many men (and necessarily such and such men) should be assigned to this branch and place of effort, and so many men, (that is to say, such and such men) should be assigned to that.

On the other hand we, who for want of a better term style ourselves single tax men, but whose fundamental idea would be better expressed by some such term as equal rights men, or individual rights men, or natural order men, propose to get rid of this difficulty in a much easier and better way. Instead of abolishing competition, we would abolish restrictions on competition; instead of imposing more restraints on individual liberty, we would remove all restraints upon the liberty of any one to do any thing that did not interfere with the equal liberty of others. The reason for, and the efficacy of, our method will be seen when the cause of the waste of which our Australian friend is thinking is traced.

From what does overcrowding of businesses and professions proceed? Does it not proceed from that seeming glut in the labor market which causes the opportunity to labor to seem a boon, and reduces the wages of labor in the primary occupations to so low a point? And from what does this spring? Does it not manifestly spring from those restrictions which deprive men willing to labor of access to the natural opportunities of exerting labor? Is this not clear whenever we consider that the natural opportunities for the useful employment of labor offered by the globe on which we live are simply illimitable, and so long as desire continues for things that the exertion of labor produces there must always be an unsatisfied need for the useful exertion of labor?

What the taxation of land values irrespective of improvements would do, would be to make land useless except to the user; to make the mere monopolization of land unprofitable and impossible. And thus it would open to laborers the primary necessity and opportunity for all labor. At the same time, by taking for the use of the community the great sums that now go to non-producers, it would do away with taxes that greatly lessen earnings in all branches of productive effort, and remove the restrictions they impose. With land thus opened to labor, and with the products of labor thus freed from taxes, the one-sided competition that now shows itself in the seeming overplus of demand for employment, would be met and relieved by the demand for labor and the products of labor. This relief in the market for the primary forms of labor would necessarily show itself in all others, that is to say, in all businesses and professions, both by withdrawing the competition of those not needed there, and for whom better opportunities would be opened where they were needed, and by the increased demand for commodities and services consequent on the increased purchasing power of better employed and better paid laborers. Men would cease to push into places and vocations where they were not needed, for the simple reason that places and vocations where they were needed would be open to them, and would pay them better. And the play of this free competition would have the effect of determining, through the free will of individuals, what number of men, and what men, should devote themselves to each of the multifold branches of industry, in order to secure for society at large the most economical use of the productive forces, and the largest result in desired satisfactions. But it can not be said that this would absolutely end useless effort, for the reason that, as to many things, what will be useful and what useless can not be determined without experiment. All new inventions, discoveries and adjustments involve experiment and the liability to useless effort; but to stop this would put an end to progress. Thus, effort may be wasted in advertising, where a man thinks that the public will want a thing which the result proves that they do not. But to prevent this would be to prevent the public being apprised of things that they do really want.

And where the conditions of equal freedom are fulfilled, where all men are placed on an equal level with regard to natural opportunity, and with regard to the benefits of an advancing civilization, the freedom of individuals to do what they choose (provided, of course, that they do not infringe the equal freedom of others) will result in the greatest benefit to society at large.

And here is the difference, and it is fundamental and irreconcilable, between the socialists and single taxers. They propose to cure the evils that have come of restriction by more restriction. We propose to cure the evils that have come of restriction by giving freedom. And a man can not favor the socialistic scheme and the single tax scheme at the same time, any more than he can go east and west at the same time.—Henry George.

Jerry Simpson on Forts and Land Grabbing.

Congressman Jerry Simpson, in an interview with Henry George, jr., published in the Sunday Advertiser, of New York, makes some eminently sensible observations regarding the bill now pending in congress for the expenditure of $100,000,000 to fortify seaports. "Who's to be defended?" asks Mr. Simpson. "Who's to be attacked?" Of course there is no answer, and Mr. Simpson, justly replying to his own questions, says: "The fact is, this fortification business is a humbug from beginning to end." He then proceeds:

What we out in Kansas want—and the great farmer class throughout the country are like us—is not to be taxed for the building of fortifications. We want a chance to plow the ground; a chance to sow and reap; a chance to sell our products; a chance for some reciprocity with people who want our things and have things we want, whether those people are in another state or in another country. We want a chance to trade and want friendly relations everywhere, and we don't any more need fortifications around the United States than we need them around the state of Kansas. Wars don't blow up in a night. We'll have plenty of time to get ready to receive our friends if they should want to try to invade us."

Changing the subject, Mr. Simpson said: "We are about to open up for settlement 6,000,000 acres of land in the Cherokee strip and in the Cheyenne and Arapahoe countries. I presume, in doing so, we shall witness another Oklahoma struggle. Yet I hope congress will adopt some preventive measures. To my mind, the way to prevent the land from being seized by speculators and to preserve it for actual users, as was the intention of the homestead law, but which that law has failed to accomplish, is for the people, through their government, to retain title in the land and lease it to the occupants, as was done by the state of Nebraska most successfully with its school lands. I am informed that a rental of $7 an acre was obtained from some of that land. This charge upon land, while it would bring in revenue and keep land speculators out, would make taxes upon improvements just that much less. But if the barriers are simply thrown down, then we'll have the Oklahoma business over again—the speculators will ride in on fleet horses and seize upon all the choice spots, while the real farmers, burdened with their families, will toil behind, and find on arriving only undesirable parts of the new country left. It is quite apparent that it won't do to homestead this new territory. That means handing a large part over to speculators, and putting the remainder under mortgage, which is the same thing in the end. There is a feeling in congress that something should be done to prevent this, but whether there is a clear idea of this remedy I speak of I can not say.

"I would give the settler the right to sell his improvements, but not the land. Everything that he produces upon it should be his, but the land should belong to all the people, and he should have only the right to use it, and he should pay the people for the privilege. The land should be appraised periodically, so that the rental should have its proper relation to any change in the value. How, or by whom, this should be done would be details to be settled by territorial legislation."

Farmers as Land Owners.

The Dallas (Ore.) Chronicle criticises the East Oregonian for its advocacy of the single tax, sneering at the proposition to save the farmer from paying an unjust tax by taxing him more. To this superficial criticism the East Oregonian bluntly replies:

"Land, regardless of improvements," this dull and bigoted editor of the Chronicle imagines to be entirely owned by farmers, while, in fact, the farmers is seldom in possession of land which is not highly improved; therefore the benefit to be derived from taxing land in this way would, to a great extent, go to the farmer.

Those who attempt to tax the products of labor, with the vain, foolish idea that such taxation is just taxation, are those who would prefer a crooked to a straight path in reaching their goal. Simpler the methods less the expense, and nearer the equality of burden; and this is so in matters of all other kinds, as well as in taxation.

What Are They Good For?

In every community there are men who owe such wealth and importance as they enjoy to the general growth and prosperity, rather than to their own business abilities or efforts. The fortune s they have acquired belong almost entirely in that classification of value which Henry George calls the "unearned increment." That is to say, they have grown rich largely through the development of the community, of the rapid increase in values due to the public spirit, the energy and enterprise of their fellow-citizens.—Minneapolis Times.

FOUGHT WITH A MOB.

Riot in Indianapolis Due to the Street Car Strike.

An Attempt to Run the Cars Under Police Protection Proves Unsuccessful —Savage Fights Upon the Streets —A Number Hurt.

UGLY STRIKERS.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 29.—The crisis of the street car strike came Saturday and for nearly five hours the principal thoroughfares of the city were in possession of a howling, hooting mob, and scenes of disorder were enacted that have never had a parallel in this city. The police were attacked with stones and clubs, the drivers and road officers of the company were dragged from the cars and beaten, the cars were overturned upon the streets and several men were carried wounded and bleeding from the scene.

In one sense it was a drawn battle, with neither side the victor, but as the whole power of the police was exerted to run the cars, and this power was insufficient, the strikers have secured a place in the fight which encourages them to continue it and blood will doubtless flow before the company can hope to have peaceable possession of the streets. The mayor is no less determined than the strikers, and when the fight is renewed to-day the police will be augmented by hundreds of special officers who have been sworn in.

The strike has now been in existence since Sunday last, when the entire street railway system was tied up through a disagreement between the men and President Frenzel, of the company, over the meaning of the verdict reached two weeks ago by a board of arbitration. On Monday and each succeeding day this week the company made a feeble effort to run its cars, but the mayor declined to order the police to protect the company, and the strikers easily prevented the running of cars. In the meantime the business men of the city began to complain, and all property owners saw in the mayor's action a menace to their property and business and loud complaints were heard from many of that class. Others, however, sympathized with the strikers and encouraged them to persevere in their battle course.

The police, finding that they could not protect the cars, turned their attention to the ringleaders of the mob and soon had a dozen or more under arrest. These were taken to the station-house but were soon bailed out by respectable citizens and in a half hour were back in the crowd ready to lead another attack.

Capt. Dawson was nearly felled to the ground by an earthenware vessel which struck him on the head, being thrown from an up-stairs window. Such actions as these precluded all possibilities of further leniency.

The closing battle of the day occurred at 12:30 o'clock, on South Meridian street as cars 81 and 91 were going south. The police were massed around the cars and in greater force than on any previous occasion, but the mob was not in the least daunted, and rushed to the attack as if eager for the fray.

At a signal from the leaders of the mob a hundred men surrounded the first car and hurled it from the track. The mules were unhitched and turned loose and the attack turned upon the second car, which was also ditched. This made eight cars that were off the tracks, and it was useless to attempt to bring out any more.

There were eighty-three arrests during the day, and of these sixty prisoners have been bailed out. The majority of those arrested were outsiders, who had no interest whatever in the strike, but were as active as the strikers themselves. Mayor Sullivan announces that he will give ample protection to-day, and that the cars will run if there is power enough in the city to hold the strikers in check.

TECUMSEH HERALD

Issued Every Thursday Morning.

TECUMSEH, MICH., MARCH 3, 1892.

THE LEAP YEAR PARTY.

It has passed into a proverb that the young ladies of Tecumseh never do anything by halves; and this proverb was never more emphatically proven than on the occasion of the Leap Year Party last Tuesday evening. It had been whispered around for some time among the young gents that a leap year party was on the tapis which would eclipse anything ever seen in these parts, but nothing definite could be gathered until the invitations became public property. When these unique invitations were sent through the postoffice it threw all the ladies into a flutter and they vowed to attend the party anyway if they could find a beau.

They were not the ordinary form of printed invitation but were written in a neat, business-like chirography, on a heart-shaped folder, ornamented with hand-painted flowers of various kinds.

It was the gents' turn now to be in a flutter and the way many of our fascinating young men were for several days hanging on the ragged edge was a caution. The more fortunate ones, who received a bid, relapsed into a state of composure, concluding that the party would be a stunning success. The less fortunate ones who received no bid concluded that a leap year party was simply turning the natural order of things topsy-turvy and smothered their chagrin by investing in a spectator's ticket to the gallery.

No sooner were the invitations out than the preparations for the party began and the outcome of the affair demonstrated that the committee of arrangements was admirably made up. This committee consisted of both married and single ladies as follows: Miss Burlingame, Mrs. Tiffany, Miss Blymyer, Miss Hartbeck, Mrs. Patterson, Miss Hayden, Mrs. Tribou, Miss Hosmer, Miss Wood, Mrs. Ham, Mrs. Orr, Miss Grace Heesen, Miss James. The work was allotted to sections of the general committee, and each subcommittee faithfully performed its part. It is needless to say that the arrangements were perfectly carried out in every detail and a splendid party was the result.

The hall decorations were exceedingly elaborate and tasty. Long strips of bunting were hung from the dome in the ceiling to the sides of the room. The front of the gallery was trimmed with pictures and bunting hung in festoons. The front of the stage was trimmed in a similar manner. Rich curtains were hung at all the windows, at the entrance door and the exit doors leading to the stage. The parlor shift scene was set, leaving room enough in front for the orchestra, and the portion back was transformed into a lunch room. Curtains and bunting, carpets and rugs, Japanese ornaments and rich upholstered furniture had turned this room into a miniature paradise, and refreshments were served therein during the entire evening. The menu consisted of coffee and ice cream, properly sandwiched with cakes and salads. The table committee consisted of Miss. Kate Anderson and Mesdames Chas. Bidwell, L. I. Bidwell and C. D. Bills. The time spent tarrying in the lunch parlor, enjoying the rich viands so elegantly served, was one of the pleasantest features of the entertainment.

The music was furnished by Wolff's celebrated Toledo orchestra, which is all that need be said on that point. There were eight men in all, seven musicians and Mr. Calish, their favorite caller. At eight o'clock the galleries were well filled and the orchestra gave a fine instrumental concert, favoring the audience with some new classical music that was highly appreciated. At nine o'clock the dancers, numbering fifty couples, filed upon the floor for the grand march. The march was led by Miss Olive Blymyer and Mr. Will Hayden and was finely executed, some new charges being introduced which added much to its beauty. The galleries crowded with spectators, the elegant costumes of the ladies upon the dancing floor, the exhilerating music of the orchestra, all brightened by the rays of the electric light, combined to form a picture of rare brilliancy and beauty. The grand march, however, must come to an end; it soon melted into the opening waltz and the dance was fairly begun From that time until the "wee sma' hours" of the morning Terpsichore reigned supreme within those walls.

Fifty-three dance tickets in all were sold. Our home dancers were well represented, many of our younger married people gracing the affair with their presence, while there were several guests present, both gentlemen and ladies, from abroad. Although the expenses were quite heavy, the generous attendance afforded sufficient receipts to meet them all. Tecumseh's young men may as well doff their hats to the superior management of Tecumseh's young ladies. It was an elegant social event from first to last. In fact, it is no exaggeration to say that it was the nicest, gayest party which Tecumseh has seen since—well, since the last leap year dance.

Clara: Do you see how the shape of this gown could be improved? Maude: You might get some other girl to wear it.

THE ELECTION LAW.

An Important Opinion by the Attorney General—It Applies to Local Elections and Township Meetings.

LANSING, Mich., Feb. 24, 1892.

EDITOR OF HERALD.

DEAR SIR: There are so many questions asked by local officers of various townships, incorporated villages and cities, relative to the application of the general election law to be held in the spring of 1892, that I desire to say to such officers, through the medium of your paper, that:

Act No. 190 of the public acts of 1891, known as the general election law, as limited by act No. 194, of the public acts of the same year, applies to all local elections held in the various cities, villages and townships of this state. That such elections must be held according to the provisions of said general law, so far as the same are applicable thereto. It is provided among other things, in section one of act No. 194, that, "all the provisions of said general law relative to the board of election inspectors, the arrangement of polling places (which would include the providing and arrangement of booths,) the manner of voting and receiving of votes, and the canvass and declaration of the result of such election, are made applicable to such municipal and township elections;" but the time for opening and closing of the polls shall not be affected by reason of act No. 190.

The time for opening and closing of the polls in township elections is controlled by section 704 of Howell's statutes, which provides that:

"The polls shall be opened at 9 o'clock in the forenoon, or as soon thereafter as may be, and shall be closed between the hours of 3 and 6 o'clock in the afternoon, and the inspectors shall cause proclamation to be made at least one hour before the closing of the polls, that the polls of the election will be closed at or within the specified hour, naming it."

Section two, of act No. 194 provides that:

"The township board of each township, and such persons as shall be elected therefor by the common council of the cities and villages of this state, shall be the board of election commissioners for such township, city or village respectively, and shall perform such duties relative to the preparation and printing of ballots as are required by law of the board of election commissioners of counties, and the like duties and privileges as are enjoined and granted by the laws governing general elections, upon the various committees of the different political organizations, are hereby prescribed for the city, village or township committees, in elections held pursuant" to said act; except that no vignette or heading for the ballot, other than the name of the party shall be necessary.

It will be necessary to hold the caucus for the nomination of candidates at least five days before election day, as section three of the act provides "that the names of candidates shall be given in by the committees of the various political organizations, to the board of election commissioners of such municipality, not less than five days before election, and the proof copy of the ballot shall be open to the inspection of the chairman of each committee at the office of the township clerk, and city or village clerk or recorder, not less than two clear secular days before such election."

The ticket must be printed in the same form as is provided in the general law, and the board of election commissioners for the township, city or village, must furnish the ticket. They can get the printing done at such place as they choose.

The words "political organizations" or "political party" used in this act, must be construed to mean any respectable body of citizens who are electors of any township or election district, and who assemble themselves together in the manner provided by the law, and hold a nominating caucus or convention.

Hence it is only necessary, in order for a person to have his name printed upon the ticket, that he should be nominated by a respectable body of electors properly assembled, who are entitled to vote for him at that election.

Any person who is not nominated, or who is placed in nomination by persons who reside outside of his election district, would not be entitled to have his name printed on the ticket.

It is not intended, however, that any person who desires to run for office shall be prohibited from furnishing slips, or seeking, within the provisions of the law, to have his name written or pasted on the ticket by electors when they are preparing their ballots in the booths. All such votes and the votes for any person, when on the ballot, should be counted under the same directions as govern the counting of votes for regular candidates whose names are printed on the ballots.

By section 4, of Act No. 190, it is provided:

"No election district or voting precinct under the provisions of this act shall contain more than five hundred electors according to the poll list of the last preceding general election. When any election district or voting precinct shall contain over five hundred electors it shall be the duty of the township board in townships, and the city council in cities, to divide such voting precincts into two or more election districts."

In case the division is made in a township or incorporated village, the provisions of chapter eight of Howell's Statutes, are to apply to and govern such division.

If the division is made in cities, and there are no special provisions in the charter existing relative thereto, then the division, the election commissioners and the election inspectors, and all matters arising by reason of the division, must be provided for by ordinance of the common council. The common council has power to make all necessary rules and regulations in connection therewith, to fully carry out the provisions of the law.

In all voting precincts in cities where there are special provisions in the charter for designating inspectors of election, in cases of division of voting precincts, such inspectors should be designated as directed in the charter, and would be the inspectors of election under the law.

A. A. ELLIS, Attorney General.

VOTE FOR THE WATER WORKS.

The corporation election to be held on Monday next will be the most important election, fraught with the largest measure of good or ill to this community, that has ever taken place in the history of the village. On that day a Common Council will be chosen as usual to administer the affairs of the village during the coming year. Tecumseh has been exceedingly fortunate in the character of her municipal officers. We have never been annoyed with official scandals of any kind. We have never been afflicted with a Tammany ring. Politics have been kept out of our village elections entirely, and the city fathers have been chosen solely with reference to their fitness for the position they are called upon to fill. The election of a new Council therefore, is a matter of small practical importance as we are certain to have a good Council in any event. But the question of bonding the village for the construction of permanent water works is a matter of vital moment to this community.

The question of the utility and advantage accruing from such a system admits of no argument. There can be no doubt whatever on that point. The only question for serious discussion is this—whether the advantages will compensate for the cost of the works. In a money point of view, will it pay? A few facts and figures on this point may not be out of place. Our corporation taxes at present are very moderate and our finances have always been very economically managed. The village is out of debt and has a good balance in the treasury. No more opportune time could be chosen for levying a tax to promote some permanent public improvement. The village taxes last year were $2.50 on each $1.000 assessment. Take the case of an ordinary mechanic or laborer, having a home assessed at $1.000. He now pays $2.50 village tax. The extra sum to be raised would be $3.000 per year and the necessary interest for a period not exceeding twelve years. As the expenses of the fire department would be very much reduced, the tax for current expenses would be less than now. We consider this a liberal estimate and one entirely within bounds. The man paying $2.50 tax now would pay $2.00 next year for current expenses and not to exceed $2.00 more for the water works tax, making $4.00 in all, instead of $2.50 as at present. Is there a mechanic or laborer in this village who could afford to vote against the water works for the sake of saving $1.50 in taxes per year for ten or twelve years?

When we consider the interests of the business portion of the community, the advantages to all our manufacturing industries, the increased facilities for fire protection, the question hardly admits of any discussion. The immense advantage to all of these interests of a first class system of water works is a self evident fact; it needs no argument to prove it.

But would the works entail a heavy expense upon the corporation to keep them in running order? This is not at all likely. In fact we believe that within five years time the system would be a source of actual revenue to the village. The experience of Hudson in this regard would undoubtedly be duplicated here. The Hudson works cost about $80.000. Users are charged from $5.00 to $8.00 per annum. Their running expenses last year amounted to $1.799,94. They received from permits $825, and from water rates $1,050, a total of $1.870,00. Thus their receipts exceeded their expenses during the first year of the operation of the works. We have no doubt whatever that in five years time the system would net a nice little revenue to the village over and above all expenditures.

In public matters of this kind the HERALD is neither a pessimist, nor an optimist. We do not believe the town would go to "rack and ruin" without the water works, nor that it would become a second Detroit with the water works. But progression is the order of the day in this age and generation. The town that stands still is going backward. We must keep at the head of the procession or be lagging in the rear. There is no middle course. A public improvement of this character is not for a day but for all time. We must adopt a public policy which will draw emigration to the village and not drive emigration out of it; which will encourage new manufactories to start here; which will hold those that are already established; which will send the fresh blood of life and activity through the arteries of business and trade. In short we must wake up and hustle ourselves, if we would grow in population and business importance.

OBITUARY.

Many hearts were startled and saddened by the death of Mrs. John Fisher. Less than a week before her death, which occurred on the evening of February 18, 1892, she and her husband had gone from their home to Harper Hospital Detroit that she might receive treatment, hoping thus to prolong her life and keep her health and strength. The surgical operation was passed with good prospect of recovery, but she had not strength to rally, and the fourth day she calmly went home. Conscious to the last, when told that her earthly hours were few, she said, "Well, I'm ready," and soon passed over the river. Very many sorrowing friends and neighbors gathered in the church she loved on Sabbath the 21st ult., to join in saying farewell to her whom they had respected and trusted. Services were conducted by Rev. F. Arnold and Rev. C. E. Conley, of Detroit, a former pastor, whose privilege it was to be with her as she entered the dark valley to cling to the glorious home. Loving friends brought many of the beautiful flowers she loved to surround her casket.

Mrs. Zoraida M. Fisher was the daughter of Dr. Robert Henderson, and was born in New York, June 17th. 1832. The family came to Michigan when she was three years old, and lived near Ann Arbor. Her father soon died, leaving several children in the care of their mother who early taught them habits of frugality and thrift. Preparing herself thoroughly, she became an efficient teacher, serving at three different periods of her life very acceptably. Her heart was early given to the Saviour. Uniting with the Baptist church her Christian life was marked by steadiness of purpose and firm faith. In July 1868 she was married to Mr. John Fisher, and for nearly twenty-four years she has been the grace and inspiration of his beautiful home on the well-known farm near Tecumseh. How true a mother she proved to his three motherless children is beautifully illustrated by the remark of the eldest of the three, Charles, when after several years the Master called him home: the new mother in trying to comfort him said, "You will soon be with your own mother," his quick answer came, "You have been a mother to me." Busy, ever busy was her life. Solomon's description of a virtuous woman was remarkably appropriate to her: "She looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness." Yet her life was not all given to toil. Her evenings at home were usually spent in reading current news of the day and country, standard magazines, choice books interested and fed her mind, helping her in forming the tastes of her home, in adding strength and wisdom to the farmers' club of her own neighborhood, which she much enjoyed, and in giving force and character to the church and society of which she was a member. At different times quite a number of orphan children have been cheerfully sheltered and reared in her home, and no one of them has not been thus intimately cared for by her who has not been led to Christ by her influence. She has peculiar gifts in training children to virtue and usefulness. To the graces of her home life she added abounding hospitality, never seeming more truly herself than when entertaining guests. For twenty-three years she has been teacher of the primary class in the Baptist Sunday School of Tecumseh, guiding the little ones wisely and well, helping some to Christ, and strengthening the good in many childish hearts.

Two sisters only survive her; with these, and with the stricken husband who safely trusted in her these many years, and the two children, dear almost as her very own could be, we all deeply sympathize. They can only wait and murmur not, remembering that the Lord has taken the one who would not let herself rest here, to the rest that remaineth for the people of God.

A. D. A.

Mrs. Mary Ann Winder was born in Lancashire, England, March 10, 1819 and died at Ridgeway Feb. 20, 1892, of pneumonia, superinduced by grippe, aged 72 years, 11 months and 10 days. She was married to William Winder in 1841. To them were born four children, two sons and two daughters, of whom only one son, now in England, and one daughter at Ridgeway are living. Her husband died in 1869 and since then she always made her home with her youngest daughter, at whose home she died. She had always been blessed with good health until within the past two years, when she gradually failed in strength. She joined the Congregational church when quite young, but when in Ridgeway united with the M. E. church. She was always ready to help or give all in her power to others and would deny herself for them. She bore her last sickness with Christian fortitude and when told that she had not long to live was calm and resigned to the will of God and made the expression that "all is well." Her daughter, who was her constant companion, feels her great loss keenly but bears her affliction heroically and can say "Thy will be done."

The Jackson Concert Company.

A company of Jackson professionals and amateurs have formed themselves into a troupe styled the Jackson Concert Company, and have made arrangements to furnish music—both vocal and instrumental—at different places of amusement throughout Southern Michigan. The company is composed of Prof. G. E. Boos, Frank Boos, W. E. Munger, Frank M. Smith, Miss Clara Cowheld and Mrs. Kate Helmer-Smith. It is safe to say that it would be a difficult matter to select in Jackson a sextette of greater musical talent than the above. The company will delight the people of Tecumseh on the evening of March 8.

A memorial was introduced praying congress to adopt a national alphabet for phonetic spelling. A favorable report was made on the Oates' naturalization bill which makes some radical changes in the existing law. The most radical of these are an abolition of a declaration of intention and a requirement that naturalization proceedings shall take the form of a court trial, in which five years' residence, ability to read the constitution and absence of certain moral disqualifications to the citizenship must be proved.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—In the house yesterday the urgency deficiency bill ($428,664) was passed. Andrew Stewart, of the Twenty-fourth Pennsylvania district, was unseated and Alexander K. Craig, the democratic contestant, was given the seat. A concurrent resolution was introduced that after March 31 no further bills shall be introduced during the present session except such as shall be reported from committees.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 29.—In the house on Saturday a favorable report was made on a resolution substituting December 31 for March 4 as the commencement and termination of the official terms of senators and representatives in congress and providing that the annual meeting of congress shall be held on the first Monday in January; and also substituting April 30 for March 4 as the date of commencement and limitation of the terms of president and vice president. ANOTHER MILLION.

John D. Rockefeller's Generosity to the Chicago University.

CHICAGO, Feb. 26.—John D. Rockefeller has given another million dollars to the University of Chicago. This makes the donor's total contribution to what promises to be one of the greatest educational institutions of the world the great sum of $2,600,000. None of this last $1,000,000 is to be used for current expenses, but is an endowment to so remain forever. The gift is in the shape of 1,000 bonds of the par value of $1,000 each and bearing 5 per cent. interest. Mr. Rockefeller will deliver his splendid gift to the trustees of the university March 1, with accrued interest from December 1. As the university does not open until October 1, the total addition to the first year's income will amount to $91,666.66. To say that Prof. Harper and the trustees are greatly elated by Mr. Rockefeller's last gift expresses but mildly the great gratitude which fills their hearts.

Mr. Rockefeller formally made known his intention of making this new addition to his previously princely gifts in a letter received by the trustees Thursday morning. It was dated at New York, February 23, and was as follows:

"TO THE TRUSTEES OF THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO, THOMAS GOODSPEED, D. D., SECRETARY, CHICAGO, ILL. GENTLEMEN:—I will give to the University of Chicago 1,000 5 per cent bonds of the par value of $1,000,000, principal and interest payable in gold.

"The principal of this fund is to remain forever a further endowment for the university; the income to be used only for the current expenses and not for lands, buildings or repairs. I reserve the right to designate at my option the expenses to which the income shall be applied.

"I will deliver these bonds March 1, 1892, bearing accrued interest from December 1, 1891.

"I make this gift as a special thank-offering to Almighty God for returning health. Sincerely yours, JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER."

BOGARDUS IS BEATEN.

He Is No Longer the Champion Shot of America.

VIRGINIA, Ill., Feb. 26.—The much talked-of match between Capt. Bogardus, of Lincoln, Ill., the champion wing-shot, and George Rexroat, of this city, took place here Thursday and drew a large attendance from all over central Illinois. The captain was defeated by a score of 92 to 83. Mr. Rexroat's best shooting was forty-two straights to the captain's eighteen. One hundred live pigeons a side and five traps were used, 30 yards rise. The result is a great surprise to many and there is great rejoicing here over Mr. Rexroat's victory. Master Henry Bogardus gave an exhibition of fancy shooting at the conclusion of the contest. The shooting was for a purse of $100, the Capt. Bogardus medal and gate receipts.

A NEW PARTY.

Another Political Combination Formed at St. Louis.

It Will Cooperate with the People's Party in Nominating a Candidate for the Presidency on the Fourth of July.

THE INDUSTRIAL CONFERENCE.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 25.—A mammoth new political combination is in existence for the coming presidential campaign. So at least the delegates to the big national industrial conference which ended here last night believe. All the efforts of Miss Frances Willard for a juncture with the prohibitionists were snuffed out by the convention at the last moment.

The net result of the convention as figured by the people's party men, who are chiefly from the northern tiers of states, is that they have by magnificent strategy effected a complete capture of the political strength of the Farmers' Alliance in the south.

July 4 was the date agreed upon for holding a national convention, the place to be chosen by a sub-committee. The platform committee's report starts out with a lengthy address to the people.

It declares that "the nation has been brought to the verge of moral, political and material ruin. Corruption dominates the ballot box, the legislatures, the congress, and touches even the ermine of the bench. The people are demoralized. Many of the states have been compelled to isolate the voters at the polling places, in order to prevent universal intimidation or bribery. The newspapers are subsidized or muzzled; public opinion silenced; business prostrated; our homes covered with mortgages; labor impoverished, and the land concentrating in the hands of capitalists. The urban workmen are denied the right of organization for self-protection; imported pauperized labor beats down their wages; a hireling standing army, unrecognized by our laws, is established to shoot them down and they are rapidly degenerating to European conditions.

"In this crisis of human affairs, the intelligent working people and producers of the United States have come together in the name of peace, order and society, to defend liberty, prosperity and justice.

"We declare our union and independence. We assert our purpose to vote with that political organization which represents our principles.

"We assert that a political organization, representing the principles herein stated, is necessary to redress the grievances of which we complain.

"We charge that the controlling influences dominating the old political parties have allowed the existing dreadful conditions to develop without serious effort to restrain or prevent them. Neither do they now intend to accomplish reform. They have agreed together to ignore, in the coming campaign, every issue but one. They propose to drown the outcries of a plundered people with the uproar of a sham-battle over the tariff, so that corporations, national banks, rings, trusts, watered stocks, the demonetization of silver and the oppressions of usurers, may all be lost sight of. They propose to sacrifice our homes and children upon the altar of mammon; to destroy the hopes of the multitude in order to secure corruption funds from the great lords of plunder.

"In order to restrain the extortions of aggregated capital, to drive the money chargers out of the temple, to form a perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare and secure the blessings of liberty for ourselves and our posterity, we do ordain and establish the following platform of principles:

"1. We declare that the union of labor forces of the United States, this day accomplished, permanent and perpetual. May its spirit enter into all hearts for the salvation of the republic and the uplifting of mankind.

"2. Wealth belongs to him who creates it. Every dollar taken from industry without an equivalent is robbery. If any will not work, neither shall he eat. The interests of rural and urban labor are the same; their enemies are identical.

"3. We demand a national currency, safe, sound and flexible, issued by the general government only, a full legal tender for all debts, public and private, and that without the use of banking corporations, a just, equitable means of circulation, at a tax not to exceed 2 per cent, as set forth in the sub-treasury plan of the Farmers' Alliance, or some better system; also by payments in discharge of its obligation for public improvements.

"4. We demand free and unlimited coinage of silver.

"5. We demand that the amount of circulating medium be speedily increased to not less than $50 per capita.

"6. We demand a greater income tax.

"7. We believe that the money of the country should be kept as much as possible in the hands of the people, and hence, we demand that all national and state revenues shall be limited to the necessary expenses of the government economically and honestly administered.

"8. We demand that postal savings banks be established by the government for the safe deposit of the earnings of the people, and to facilitate exchange.

"9. Your sub-committee upon land plank beg to submit to your approval the following: The land, including all the natural resources of wealth, is the heritage of all the people, and should not be monopolized for speculative purposes, and alien ownership of lands should be prohibited. All lands now held by railroads and other corporations in excess of their actual needs, and all lands now owned by aliens should be reclaimed by the government, and held for actual settlers only.

"10. Transportation being a means of exchange and a public necessity, the government should own and operate the railroads in the interest of the people.

"11. The telegraph and telephone, like the post office system, being a necessity for the transmission of news, should be owned and operated by the government in the interest of the people.

"12. We demand that the government issue legal tender notes and pay the union soldiers the difference between the price of the depreciated money in which he was paid and gold.

"Resolved, That we hail this conference as the consummation of the perfect union of the hearts and hands of all sections of our common country; the men who wore the gray and the men who wore the blue meet here to extinguish the last smouldering embers of civil war in the tears of joy of a united and happy people, and we agree to carry the Stars and Stripes forward forever to the highest point of national greatness."

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 26.—The joint committee in whose charge the matter was placed by the industrial conference just ended here met Thursday and after an all-day session selected Omaha, Neb., as the place of holding the nominating convention of the newly born third party. July 4 had been selected as the date, and that action was reaffirmed.

Faster Than Ice Boats.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—The Empire state express on the New York Central road, which runs a mile a minute, is too much for the ice yachts on the Hudson river. Several races have occurred and the ice yachts invariably got the worst of it.

Starved to Death.

MOUNT ZION, Ill., Feb. 29.—Mrs. Abram Greenfield died of starvation at her home here yesterday, aged 88. She fasted for forty-five days and could not be induced to take any nourishment of any character.

WEARY WAITING.

Oh, the agony of waiting in anxious, dread suspense,
When pulses throb at fever heat, with heart-strings strained and tense,
When speech waits on expression—waits an undeveloped word,
Waits the knock that never cometh, the footstep never heard.

When at evening "would 'twere morning," when at morning "would 'twere night,"
When the eye is strained to aching and aweary is the sight;
When the ear grows dull from listening for comings long deferred,
For the knock that never cometh, the footstep never heard.

When the voice grows weak and husky, when the breath comes faint and slow,
When the soul oppressed and saddened for what it longs to know,
When hours grow from moments and eyes with tears are blurred
For the knock that never cometh, the footstep never heard,

Oh, weary, worldly waiter, on the seeming laggard pace
Of the watched-for, longed-for moment, wait with becoming grace,
On the promise of fulfillment made in His Sacred Word,
That patient waiting will have record when His knock and step are heard.

THAT RARE ENGRAVING.

A Story of Mr. and Mrs. Clever's Wedding Anniversary.

"Beautiful!" said Mr. Clever, ecstatically.

"Exquisite!" echoed Mrs. Clever, standing on tiptoe, to peep over her husband's shoulder.

"Who's the artist?" said Mr. Clever, putting up his eye-glasses.

"Donnavetti, of Rome," responded some one who chanced to be nearer the sight-line than he himself was.

"And what's the subject?" demanded Mr. Clever, who, being a business man, was not quite posted in poetic lore. "A lady divinity?"

"'Ophelia!'" interposed Mrs. Clever, briskly.

"Oh!" said her husband, "from Shakespeare? 'King Lear,' ain't it?"

"'Hamlet!'" corrected Mrs. Clever.

"Oh! yes, 'Hamlet,'" nodded her husband. "I knew it must be in some of those comedies."

"It's a tragedy!"

"What's the difference? It's all one in the end. But really, that picture's something different from the common. I wonder if I could get the artist to paint one for me like it?"

"Hardly," said a connoisseur, who was standing near.

"I don't mind the expense," asserted Mr. Clever, loftily (which wasn't strictly true, for he did).

"Yes, but unfortunately Donnavetti, of Rome, died twenty-odd years ago."

Mr. Clever's countenance fell.

"Oh!" said she. "I was rather struck by the picture—that's all."

"So was I," said Mrs. Clever; "such a sweet face—and the shadows on the water so perfect! And only look at the blue-flags and rushes along the shore."

"I think there are one or two engravings of it, yet extant," remarked Mr. Poulett, the connoisseur. "And a steel-engraving is next best to an oil-painting, you know."

"Any chromos?" said Mr. Clever, pricking up his ears.

"'Chromos!'" scornfully echoed old Poulett. "Of Donnavetti, of Rome?"

"Horrid!" chimed Mrs. Clever. "Why, I got a chromo yesterday, with a trial pound of tea that I bought—a mere red-and-yellow daub. Nobody tolerates chromos nowadays."

So Mr. and Mrs. Clever went home from Mr. Moldore Million's picture-gallery—opened for a week to the public, to help along some limping charity—on artistic thoughts intent.

"I never saw Mr. Clever so interested in a picture," pondered the lady. "I'll surprise him with one of those engravings for our anniversary present, if it can be obtained. Although I did not really fancy it."

"Maria was perfectly fascinated with that sprawling woman in the water," reflected Mr. Clever. "Tastes differ. Give me a good, red-hot battle-piece or a landscape with plenty of sunshine. But if money 'll buy the 'Ophelia,' it shall be Maria's on the anniversary of our wedding-day."

Mr. Clever dealt in hides and leather on Spruce street—a lucrative business, although not an aristocratic one—and just around the corner an old Jewish picture-dealer lurked, like a human spider in his den. To Mr. Ezra Eliassen our hero hastened, and explained his wishes.

"Yesh, yesh, I understhand," nodded Mr. Eliassen. "Dere is one at Mentoni's, but it coshts—ah, mine faith, it coshts its weight in gold! It ish rare—very rare. And dere ish only one in de country."

"What would it cost?" asked Clever, with his hands in his pockets and one foot tapping the fender.

"Sheventy-five dollarsh," said Mr. Eliassen, after a hurried calculation that the engraving might possibly cost him twenty.

"Order it, then, and don't let a soul know what your order's for. Mum's the word."

"I understhand. I understhand."

Mrs. Clever made haste to her friend, Mr. Poulett.

"Mr. Poulett," she said, "I must have that engraving—by What's-his-name, of Rome. I want to surprise my husband; but it must be a pro*found* secret from him."

"It'll cost money," said Mr. Poulett, clicking his penhandle against his teeth, for when he wasn't an art critic for the newspapers he was paying-teller in an up-town bank.

"I don't care what it costs," said Mrs. Clever.

"Sixty dollars at least," said Mr. Poulett, whose conscience was less elastic than that of old Eliassen.

"Then let it be secured at once," said Mrs. Clever. "It will take the whole of my month's allowance, but the grocer and baker and other tradespeople will all trust me, I know."

So Mr. Poulett wended after banking hours to Mentoni's.

"Can you get that proof of Donnavetti's 'Ophelia?'" said he.

"We had one?" responded the clerk, "but it's just been ordered."

"Ordered?"

"Yes. By old Eliassen."

"How much did he give you?" questioned Poulett.

"Twenty dollars."

"Put him off, can't you? I'll give thirty."

"Well," said the clerk, dubiously stroking his chin, "I'll try and see what can be done; but Eliassen's a crusty fellow to deal with. I can write him a note, though, and say old Mentoni himself had sold the picture without my knowledge."

Eliassen trudged around that same evening, in a rage, and bade still higher, so that M. Mentoni's veracious clerk gravely informed Mr. Poulett that, though sorry to disoblige a customer, they could not really resell a picture which had once been ordered. It was contrary to their principles.

"Come," said Poulett, "that's all talk! If I give you forty dollars for it—"

"Quite out of the question," said the clerk, who had been offered the same sum by Ezra Eliassen.

"Fifty, then. It's more than it's worth, but my friend rather fancies it."

The clerk stroked his chin again.

"Well—if it's a possible thing to import in time another for old Eliassen."

"How soon does he want it?"

"By the third of February, without fail."

"Very singular," said Mr. Poulett. "My customer named the same day. I say, Jackington, I must have it at any price. Come! I'll give you seventy-five down for the picture, possession to to be given at once."

And Mr. Jackington closed the bargain. The picture, neatly packed, was delivered to Mr. Poulett, who immediately informed his fair client that the "Ophelia" could not be bought for less than a hundred.

"A hundred dollars? Oh my!" said Mrs. Clever. "A hundred dollars for a mere engraving."

"But such an engraving, ma'am," bowed Mr. Poulett. "One of the finest specimens of art in the country. It will be a gem, a perfect gem."

"Well," said Mrs. Clever, recklessly. "I'll take it. Not that I should ever care to look at it twice—but it's Clever's taste."

Old Ezra Eliassen shook his head, when Mr. Clever came around the next day to see if he had purchased the "Ophelia."

"Mentoni's copy is sold," said he; "for a hundred dollars!"

"Sold! Oh, hang it!" bawled Clever. "But there's one thing, whoever paid a hundred dollars for that thing was a full-sized fool."

"I could import one like it for the same money," said Eliassen, watching his customer's face.

"Could you, though? By the third of February?"

"I guessh sho!"

"Import it then! I'll not be balked," said Mr. Clever, bringing his clenched hand down on the rail of old Eliassen's desk. "It's more than I can afford and three times what the thing is worth, but Maria likes it, and Maria shall be suited for once in her life. But mind, it must be on the spot by the third of February, or not a red cent do you get!"

"There shall be no mishtake," nodded Ezra Eliassen.

The third of February came; and Mrs. Clever radiantly awaited her husband's appearance in the breakfast-room, with a brown paper package all-twined and sealed on the table. Enters Mr. Clever with a ditto package under his arm.

"Dearest," said Maria, "this is the tenth anniversary of our bridal-day! Accept this memento of love."

And she gave him brown paper parcel Number One.

"Hello!" said Mr. Clever. "And I've got something for you, Maria," handing her brown paper parcel Number Two.

"Oh, a thousand thanks!" sighed Maria.

"Much obliged, I'm sure," said Mr. Clever. And they both went to work with scissors and penknife at the twine and paper. And out of both wrappings emerged — the same fair, floating "Ophelia," in the same glassy stream, with the same blue-flags blossoming along its edge.

Mr. and Mrs. Clever looked at each other, and then at the "Ophelias."

"I meant to surprise you, love," gasped Mrs. Clever. "And you've thought of the very same thing. How kind of you!"

"By Jove, I am surprised!" said Mr. Clever, blankly. "Two of 'em! And each one uglier than the other!"

Mrs. Clever began to cry. Mr. Clever put his hands in his pockets and whistled. And just then in bustled Uncle Chipley, who always breakfasted with them on their anniversary day.

"Hallo!" said Uncle Chipley, who was rather a dabster at the fine arts. "Donnavetti's 'Ophelia,' eh? But you've got two of 'em. A bargain, eh? Or at auction?"

"I gave a hundred dollars for mine," whispered Mrs. Clever.

"And I gave a hundred for mine!" exclaimed her husband, dragging savagely at his mustache.

"Then you were both great fools," mildly remarked Uncle Chipley. "I saw half a shop full of 'em in Paris, when I was over there last, for ten dollars apiece. American money! They're a regular drug in the market, over there!"

"Of course, I appreciate the attention, Maria, and all that sort of thing," began Mr. Clever, "but I don't want this gushy thing on my walls!"

"And I am sure it would give me the nightmare to have that drowning face in any room," retorted Maria, crisply. And she jerked out of the room in a manner not at all befitting a wedding anniversary.

And if anyone wants a proof engraving of Donnavetti's "Ophelia" he may find two of them at the establishment of Mr. Ezra Eliassen, who bought them of the Clevers for five dollars apiece, and is prepared to sell them for whatever he can get.—Amy Randolph, in N. Y. Ledger.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

Against the Saloons.

In the supreme court at Lansing convictions were affirmed in three cases against saloonkeepers, the court holding that adjoining rooms which on week-days are used in connection with the saloon business, though no bar is located in them, are properly a part of the saloon in the meaning of the statute and should be closed Sunday. It was held that a bartender has no more right to go into a saloon in which he is employed to get a drink of liquor on Sunday than has any other person, and where he is permitted to do so the saloon must be held to be open.

They will also engage in wholesale farming, and will clear 2,000 acres and build a dozen farm houses next season. It is a new departure in Lake Superior lands and will, it is said, be a success.

Three Children Burned.

A store building at Ironwood, the second story of which was used as a residence by Charles de Longchamps, was burned, and three of his children, Albert, Marie and Charles, aged 7, 6 and 2 years, respectively, were burned with the building. Henry Watterson.

The next great event in Adrian will be the lecture by Henry Watterson next Monday evening. He is on his return from a western tour and will stop at only two points in this state. Mr. Watterson comes here under the auspices of Adrian tent of the Maccabees, who have taken this means of replenishing a treasury somewhat depleted by reason of the expenses incident to fitting up their new quarters, furnishing a two-fold reason why an immense audience should meet the talented gentleman. He is one of the foremost men of the nation and an orator of the very highest order. Mr. Watterson has appeared at the front on all occasions of public interest, has served in Congress, presided over national conventions, and has distinguished himself variously as an orator and a writer of commanding powers. His great speech at the late banquet of the army of the Tennessee and the unveiling of the Grant statue at Chicago, carried all hearts with it. Of this the Chicago Times said:

"The occasion will be historic. The vast audience rose to its feet. Men leaped on tables, ladies on chairs, and for many minutes a scene of the wildest enthusiasm prevailed."

The newspaper notices of his "Money and Morals" all speak of it in the highest terms as an intellectual treat, and as furnishing a delightful evening entertainment.—Adrian Times.

BURNED BY FIENDS.

Terrible Fate of a Handsome Young Woman in Austria.

VIENNA, Feb. 27.—The details of a most horrible story have been received in this city telling of a fiendish act committed, it is alleged, to avenge another terrible crime. A band of masked men, whose features were completely concealed, collected during the night in the small village of Minin, in the province of Bukowina. They went to the house of a handsome young woman named Mary Leppers, forced their way into a bedroom occupied by the woman and bound her securely with cords. They then poured a large quantity of petroleum over her, thoroughly saturating her clothes with the fluid. A match was then applied to the oil-soaked garments and in an instant the unfortunate woman was enveloped in flames.

The poor victim's shrieks and cries were blood-curdling, but the terrible agony suffered by the woman as she was roasted to death had little effect in arousing pity from her assailants, who watched the woman's cremation. The band stood gazing on this horrible spectacle until the woman's convulsive struggles had ceased. Not one of them stirred from the spot until nothing remained of the woman's body but a black and distorted mass. The murderers then left the place as secretly as they had arrived.

The awful affair has caused much excitement among the people in the vicinity. The motive assigned for the outrage is that the woman was suspected of having murdered her husband, and it is thought that those who took part in the burning of the woman were friends of the dead man.

TERROR IN BERLIN.

Riotous Mobs in the Streets Dispersed by the Police.

BERLIN, Feb. 27.—Conflicts between the police and a mob of 3,000 workmen continued in the Rosenthaler strasse until 10 o'clock Friday night. The police attacked the rioters with their sabers, striking them with the flat side of the weapons. The mob was at length routed and dispersed into the side streets, where scattered bands began the work of looting the shops of butchers and bakers.

It was remarked Friday that the police were less self-controlled than they were Thursday. They attacked the mobs in a more violent manner and did not scruple to use the edge of their sabers in putting their opponents to rout. The result of this is that the number of persons wounded in the various conflicts Friday is much larger than on Thursday.

A strong force of police are guarding the palace and patrolling the streets, and every precaution is being taken to meet with further outbreaks from the rioters. The press of all shades of politics appeals to the public to remain indoors. The fact that many innocent persons were injured in the melees is likely to lead to the exercise of more discretion on the part of the police.

Some time between the hours of 10 p. m. of Thursday, March 3, and 7 a. m. of March 4, thieves forced open the back window of the store of W. Lenardson & Sons and helping themselves to numerous articles, such as boots, shoes, clothing, etc., decamped. Two or three strangers were noticed about town Thursday afternoon, but nothing of a suspicious nature was attached to them till the following morning, when the robbery was discovered. Officers were immediately telegraphed to but as yet nothing of any consequence has been developed.

After a long, lingering illness of months, from an attack of influenza, Norman S. Post departed this life Friday morning last at 7 o'clock, aged 28 years and 3 months. He leaves a wife, mother and two children, aged about 8 and 4 years respectively. Mr. Post came to Britton in the winter of '91 from Hillsdale county, where he was born, and during his two years' residence among us won for himself and family many warm friends, who deeply sympathize with his bereaved widow and children in their hours of loneliness and trouble.

$25.00 REWARD!

For information that will lead to the arrest and conviction of the thief or thieves who forcibly gained entrance to the store building occupied by W. Lenardson & Sons and took therefrom articles of merchandise, consisting of boots, shoes, clothing, dry goods, notions, etc., I will give $25. JOHN GIBSON,
Dept. Sheriff Lenawee Co.

Prohibition County Convention.

The Prohibitionists of Lenawee County held their convention at Adrian on Monday last. There was a good crowd out and an interesting session was held. The following resolutions were passed:

1. We, the Prohibitionists of Lenawee County, in convention assembled, reiterate our former declaration in favor of the suppression of the liquor traffic for beverage purposes, and propose to fight it out on that line if it takes a lifetime.

2. We favor giving proper consideration to the industrial questions now before the people, and respectfully suggest that whatever platform may be adopted by the Prohibition party in Michigan, that the campaign should be conducted on the whole platform.

Since the Prohibition party has placed itself in position to consider all questions of national importance, we suggest that it will be appropriate to change the name of our party to that of the National party.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, March 4, 1892.

The fate of the Bland free coinage bill will practically be settled by the vote of the House, next Monday, on the resolution reported from the committee on rules, setting aside March 22, 23 and 24 for the consideration of the bill. How will the House vote? That is the question of questions with both the silver and the anti-silver men, and there are several reasons why it is difficult to answer it definitely. Firt, no one knows how many members will be absent that day—it is said that pressure is being brought to bear upon those democrats who are known to favor free coinage, but who are willing to have it postponed until after the Presidential election, to get them to be off of the city that day. Second, no one knows what attitude the republican members will take on the resolution. There are a few of them committed to free coinage, but at least 50 of them are opposed to it, and Ex-Speaker Reed, Representative Burrows and other influential members of their party are said to favor their not voting at all. Representative Bland says he has made a careful canvas of the House and that the resolution will be passed whether the Republicans vote against it or decline to vote. If he be right, and, barring the absentees, the chances are largely in his favor, the free coinage bill may be considered as having already passed the House.

The serious illness of Representative Springer necessitated a change in the plans of the Ways and Means committee concerning the three tariff bills reported to the House early this week, and the postponement of their consideration until next week. The [illegible] to be called up will be the [illegible] wool on the free list, to be followed in due time by those for free [illegible] twine and free cotton-ties and cotton bagging.

Members of the labor organizations who have long recognized the deplorable condition of the Government Printing Office building, within the walls of which—mighty shaky walls they are too—some three thousand employes perform the labor incidental to the largest printing establishment in the world, are beginning to ask why it is, if all the Senators and members of Congress [illegible] as they all say they do, that Congress does not provide for a new building? As yet the question is very quietly asked, but if it is not soon answered the tone will grow louder and louder until it will be heard in every section of this country where there is a branch of organized labor. Talk has had the floor long enough. Action is what is wan[illegible]

The Senate and House committees on Immigration went to New York today, to make the preliminary arrangements for the joint investigation of the recent introduction of typhus fever by Russian Hebrew immigrants.

The Senate Finance committee has at last found a financial measure that it did not report unfavorably. It is the bill which recently passed the House forbiding the loan of money by National banks to their own officers, without the approval of a majority of the board of directors or executive committee. Besides reporting favorably on the bill the committee added an amendment authorizing the banks to enlarge their circulation to the full par value of the U. S. bonds deposited to secure the same.

A convention representing the lumber men of the country was held here this week. It adopted a resolution protesting against the bill introduced by Representative Bryan, of Nebraska, removing the duties from imported lumber.

The friends of Mr. Claggett, the contestant for the seat held by Senator Dubois, of Idaho, were loud enough in their speechmaking, but not numerous enough when the vote was taken, to unseat Mr. Dubois.

The House this week passed the Indian appropriation bill and is now considering the District of Columbia appropriation bill.

The Democratic managers of the House are having a great [illegible] on account of the persistency of the Democratic members in absenting themselves. Their majority is so large that many of them appear to think they can stay away as much as they please. The result is, the Republicans have it in their power to break a quorum by refusing to vote, whenever they are so disposed.

PRICES OF CUTLERY.

How the McKinley Bill Favors the Manufacturers of Cutlery.

The association of American manufacturers of cutlery asked permission of the ways and means committee to propose a schedule on cutlery for the McKinley bill. Their request was granted, and the duties which they wanted were enacted into law. These duties, compared with those of the tariff of 1883, are as follows:

Cutlery	McKinley Bill
Value [illegible]	[illegible]
50 cents per doz.	10	35 per cent. & 30 per cent.
50c to $2.50	50	50c per doz. & 35 per cent.
$2.50 to $4	93	$1 per doz. & 35 per cent.
$4	50	$2 per doz. & 35 per cent.

How this trust by association, as they politely call themselves, has taken advantage of the new duties is shown by the following letter of a cutlery dealer. To the Editor of the Evening Post:

"Sir—I notice in your issue of the 8th inst. a letter from X and Y, relative to a statement which appeared in the Press that 'no one has heard of any advance in prices of cutlery in consequence of the McKinley bill.' It is a well-known fact that about the time this bill went into effect the association of American Manufacturers of Cutlery was holding frequent sessions in New York with the view of regulating prices, and as a result of their conferences I submit some figures giving the details of a few patterns of American knives as follows, the prices I paid for them prior to October 8, 1890, and that which was fixed by the association at various times afterward:

Price [illegible] to	Oct. 8, '90.	Oct. 10, '90.	Oct. 18, '90.	Jan. 26, '91
$1 65 per doz.	$1 75	$2 00		$2 25
2 91 per doz.	3 10	3 47		3 75
3 70 per doz.	3 95	4 65		4 80
4 25 per doz.	4 30	5 13		5 70
7 65 per doz.	8 45	9 00		10 00

"These are no special cases, but a similar advance took place over the whole line of several hundred patterns, and as the McKinley bill became operative October 6, 1890, it is significant that within four days a marked increase in American goods was announced. When they reached the January prices I had but little interest in them, as I was convinced that the burden-bearing consumer would rebel and either make the old knife whittle a little longer, or go without, if asked to purchase at the retail prices which would pay the dealer a profit on the above costs.

"As an indication of the 'we-are-on-top' position, which the Association of American Cutlery Makers assumed, I will add that I was solicited to purchase goods at the advanced prices, with the guarantee that, if within a reasonable time I could buy from any member of the association at less price, I should be reimbursed any excess I had paid. CUTLER."

GERMAN RECIPROCITY TREATY.

It Will Not Materially Help Our Trade—Some Tariff Buncombe.

Now that the president has proclaimed the new reciprocity treaty with Germany in all its details, there is sufficient material at hand to fairly estimate its value. In consideration for the free entry into the United States of raw sugar grown in Germany, the [illegible] of which in 1891 amounted to [illegible], this treaty admits free or at reduced rates the following list of articles. To show the reductions made we give the old duties and the value of the various products affected which were exported to Germany in 1891:

Articles	Old rate duties per [illegible]	New rate duties per [illegible]	Exports to Germany from United States, 1891

Total exports, 1891			$ 6,545,317

In 1891 we exported to Germany $91,684,981 of domestic merchandise. Of this, only $6,545,317, or 7.14 per cent., consisted of articles affected by the new treaty. The only articles which were formerly subject to duty but are now free are bed feathers, anise, caraway and cumin seeds, bark for tanning and oleomargarine and similar oily substances.

The duties on wheat and flour, which were under the old law 5 and 10.50 marks respectively, are now 3.50 and 7.30 marks. The old duties were nearly prohibitive under ordinary conditions. Since equal reductions are made on wheat and flour imported from Austria-Hungary, the advantages which the latter have over the United States on account of her close proximity to Germany will give her the bulk of the trade. This applies equally to rye and oats. Under these circumstances, we cannot expect to materially increase our exports of these products to Germany.

To say nothing of the duties imposed, the character of our barley, malt and hops is such that, as in the past, we will export none of these products to Germany. In fact Germany, besides supplying her own markets, has a large surplus of these articles to European British and other markets.

The small reductions made in the duties on [illegible] and other prepared articles are so [illegible] will have very little favorable effect on our exports. The only reduction made in the duty on live animals is that upon oxen; but our exports of oxen cannot be large, as [illegible] year of [illegible] 970 of all kinds of cattle were exported to Germany. The duty on fresh meats, except pork, has been reduced five marks. In 1891 we did not export a pound of fresh meat. The reduction of a little over half a cent per pound in the duty will not build up any considerable trade.

Germany removed the prohibition from American pork on the assurance of the United States that no diseased pork would be exported. The high prices prevailing before American pork was allowed to enter, equal to about twelve cents per pound, stimulated our trade for a time until the German farmers reduced the price when it again fell off. The high duty, coupled with the fact that Germany is a large producer of pork, gives natural protection against importations. Our prepared meats, except bacon, and by this is meant all meats, whether salted, pickled or canned, the reduction is one-third of a cent per pound. This may have some favorable effect on our exports, but the increase cannot be large. The duty on lard remains at the old rate of twenty marks.

On the whole, therefore, the reductions [illegible] on less than $6,545,317 of our products, in consideration for the free admission of over $72,891,000 of German sugar into the United States, are not [illegible] as a gift to be made. The government was doubtless [illegible] informed that the feeling prevailing among the people of the United States against the reimposition of the duty on sugar was so strong that our government would not attempt it, and, according granted the slight reductions noted above. In view of the heavily increased duties imposed by the McKinley law upon German products, which in the case of woolens, hosiery, [illegible] frequently ranged 50 to 60 per cent, it was useless to expect any great concessions from that power. Mr. Blaine was, therefore, forced to accept what he could get. In other words, so far as Germany is concerned, the "reciprocity club" was not effectually worked by the United States.

The list of articles prohibited in the proclamation of the president includes many things on which no change in the duty has been made. Thus raw flax, brain, horsehair, agricultural products not [illegible] tables, charcoal and wool are free of duty without regard to the country from which they are imported. Spices, [illegible] fruits and nuts, buckwheat, [illegible] and live animals, except [illegible] are admitted at the same rate when imported from the United States as when imported from other countries. The only [illegible] conceivable for including these products in the "reciprocity" treaty was doubtless to create a favorable impression here by a large showing. This is nothing but "bunkombe," pure and simple. The failure on the part of Mr. Blaine to secure a more favorable treaty was not his [illegible]. It has been hampered by the [illegible] imposed by the "reciprocity" [illegible] latest example of its [illegible] has often been asserted, it [illegible] units, that as a means [illegible] our trade abroad the [illegible] a failure. What our [illegible] needs is a greater [illegible] which to make trades.—N. Y. Commercial Bulletin.

The Success of a Trust.

In reviewing the steel rail trade in 1891 the High Tariff Manufacturer says:

"The past year has been a quiet period in the steel rail trade, but the year has been marked by at least one event of great importance, namely, the removal of the most formidable antagonist of the rail combination. As the result of long continued negotiations, which several times threatened to miscarry, the Scranton Steel Co. was consolidated with the Lackawanna Coal & Iron Co. last spring, and the actuating spirits of the Scranton Co. were placed beyond power of opposing the combination for a period of ten years. It cost a nice snug sum to do this, but it was evidently considered as worth what it cost.

"One year ago the rail trade was in a disorganized and demoralized condition. The combination was in a state bordering on collapse, and rails were selling at $28 per ton at eastern mills, with a slow market. It took two or three months to dispose of the Scranton Steel Co. and straighten matters out, and then all was plain sailing, with $30 as the fixed and unalterable price. Until within the past three months, trade has been very quiet, but the last quarter brought liberal purchases by the leading railroads, and the trade may now be regarded as in a very satisfactory condition, considering the low price of pig iron and the very fair price of rails."

Since the cost of making steel rails is less than $22 per ton, the trust which sells its products at $30 per ton, making a clear profit of $8, will be ready to raise another campaign fund to keep the protection duty on steel rails from being cut down.

How Reciprocity Discriminates.

The total exports of the United States to Great Britain and Ireland during the last fiscal year amounted in value to $441,599,897. This is $30,009,030 less than the value of the exports to Great Britain and Ireland in 1881. Yet this country's exports last year to the United Kingdom amounted in value to more than its exports to all the world besides.

While throwing every tariff obstacle in the way of this great trade, the brilliant policy of the administration is to bully or beg commercial favors from countries which, in the nature of things, can have little or no trade with the United States. It is considered a stroke to obstruct commerce with Great Britain and Ireland, whose people draw upwards of fifty per cent. of the exports of the United States, and to negotiate a treaty of reciprocity with Venezuela, whose imports from this country amount to one-half of one per cent. of its total export trade.

The McKinley organs made a great cackle over a reciprocity treaty with Brazil, when the exports of the United States to all South America, Central America and the West Indies combined do not equal in value the exports to Germany, against whose trade with this country the McKinley tariff wages a malignant war.—Philadelphia Record.

HILL STOCK IS FALLING.

One cannot fail to gather from the remarks heard at the Arlington that Hill stock has rapidly fallen in the sections where it was apparently strong a few weeks ago. Many who formerly sung his praises are now silent. The cold fact is that Hill has disgusted the mass of Democrats by his "cheeky" course since he left Washington to manipulate the New York primaries. No such spectacle has been given the country by any other politician, and it has operated to impair what chances he had of getting the nomination. When he first came to Washington he made a very favorable impression. If he had staid here and attended to his duties, arranged to have the State Convention called at a reasonable time, and shown that he was willing to make a fair fight for the nomination, he might have strengthened himself throughout the country. By his present course he has added force to the opposition to his pretensions and frightened the anti-Cleveland men with his effrontery.

Tammany's move for an uninstructed delegation is regarded as good evidence that the Wigwam leaders believe Hill cannot get the nomination. The declaration of Commissioner Gilroy that Tammany would support Mr. Cleveland if he were nominated is also accepted by the anti-Hill men as fresh proof that he is not a Tammany idol. The question that Hill's opponents are now asking is this: If David in one month has succeeded in arousing the determined opposition of the mass of New York State Democrats what will be his status by the time the national convention meets? What state will be foolish enough to instruct its delegates for Hill in the face of the fact that the Democrats of his own State are known to be in revolt against him?—Washington Letter.

Mr. S. G. Derry

Of Providence, R. I.,

Widely known as proprietor of Derry's Waterproof Harness Oil, tells below of his terrible sufferings from Eczema and his cure by

HOOD'S Sarsaparilla

"Gentlemen: Fifteen years ago I had an attack of inflammatory rheumatism, which was followed by eczema or salt rheum, breaking out on my right leg. The humor spread all over my legs, back and arms,

A Foul Mass of Sores, swollen and itching terribly, causing intense pain if the skin was broken by scratching, and discharging constantly. It is impossible to describe my suffering in those years of agony and torture. I spent in futile efforts to get well, and was discouraged and ready to die. At this time I was unable to lie down in bed, had to sit up all the time, and was unable to walk without crutches. I had to hold my arms away from my body, and had to have my arms, back and legs bandaged by my faithful wife twice a day.

Thousands of Dollars

"Finally a friend who was visiting at our house, urged me to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. I began by taking half a teaspoonful. My

Stomach Was All Out of Order

But the medicine soon corrected this, and in six weeks I could see a change in the condition of the humor which nearly covered my body. It was driven to the surface by the Sarsaparilla, the sores soon healed, and the scales fell off. I was soon able to give up bandages and crutches and a many many days I had been taking Hood's Sarsaparilla for seven months, and since that time nearly two years, I have been free from all eruptions whatever and my legs and arms are sound and well.

The Delight

of myself and wife at my recovery it is impossible to tell. To all my business friends in Boston and over the country, I recommend

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT

Practical Application of Single Tax.

The following extract from an editorial of the Detroit News, one of the leading papers of the West, shows at once the forward drift of single tax sentiment in Detroit, and the effect of practically applying single tax methods as far as existing laws permit:

"To watch the gradual shifting of taxes on land values in Detroit, in spite of the law demanding the equal taxation of all kinds of property—though property in land is very different from property in what results in human exertion—is an interesting study. Not long ago the assessors here held to the notion that 'unproductive property,' which was generally land held out of use, should be more nominally assessed. From the mistaken idea that the owner would be imposed upon if made to pay on its true value. But to-day the assessors hold the contrary view. Now if improved and unimproved land in the same vicinity are assessed the same amount per foot and though the city's burden are yet far from being equalized, still there is seen in the assessors's books many an attempt in this direction."

Take the assessment rolls in this city for the past four years. The tax on land values independent of all improvements have been:

ASSESSED LAND VALUES.

1888, $68,183,950; 1889, $70,077,060; 1890, $75,154,980; 1891, $86,074,380.

From 1888 to 1891 the increase is $17,890,430. From 1888 to 1889 the increase was $2,406,650; from 1889 to 1890 it was $4,487,380; and from 1890 to 1891 it was $10,909,400. And all this is land value alone. No labor of any kind enters into it. It arises from increase in population, from increase in business through increased ease in finding a market.

Now take a look at the [illegible] ations for the same years, mind that during that period been not less than $20,000,000 on new edifices, and the [illegible] of others sufficiently, probably, to replace the natural decay that comes to all the products of man, and that commences from the moment they are completed. That is the law of nature from which there is no escape. The building valuations for 1888, 1889, 1890 and 1891 are as follows:

ASSESSED BUILDING VALUATION.

While land values were advancing $17,890,430, building valuations advanced from 1888 to 1891 $5,395,910—less than one-third of that value which attaches to land because of location. It paid better to buy a piece of land and hold it out of use, than to take the same amount of money and put it into business that would give employment to labor.

Of course it is understood that this increased assessment of buildings is not the full value of this kind of property erected. The assessors know, now, if they never knew it before, that they can be deceived as to the value of buildings. A gaudy one may be assessed too high, a more modest looking one may be assessed too low, or vice versa. So they have taken to low assessments for buildings, and to knocking off figures where heretofore the custom was to treat the building as appreciating in value as well as the land—a manifestly absurd practice. An alderman in the Sixth Ward complained a few years ago, of the increased assessment on his house. The assessors excused themselves on the plea that he had removed the fence in front, and that made the house look better!

In a growing community personal property keeps pace with the increase of land values. Thos. G. Shearman puts it down as an axiom, almost, that the value of the land reflects the value of what is on the land. That is, on valuable land will be found equally valuable things, the product of human labor. For example, on Woodward avenue, where the frontage is worth $2,000 a foot, will be seen stately buildings, and in these buildings will be found the most costly products. In the first and second wards the assessed value of merchandise is $9,341,080, and of machinery, stocks, money and other personal property $12,467,167. The assessed building values in those wards are $18,859,580. This makes a total of $39,847,820, which is a little more than the assessed land value. Taking the value of Detroit, the assessed values of personal property is less this year than in 1888. The figures are:

ASSESSED PERSONAL PROPERTY VALUES.

1888.	1889.	1890.	1891.
$39,558,840	$39,052,650	$37,436,990	$38,808,670

The loss on personal property in four years is $750,170. How this personal property is represented on the assessors' books is interesting. Were the accounts differentiated more, if they told just how much diamonds were assessed, how much household furniture was figured at, how much pictures were valued at, how much jewelry was guessed on, they would be still more interesting. Here are all the accounts as shown in the official assessment rolls:

ITEMS OF PERSONAL PROPERTY.

Cattle	$ 6,340
Horses	463,176
Carriages	426,590
Household furniture, watches, diamonds and jewelry	3,515,580
Merchandise	15,750,160
Machinery, stocks, money and other property	21,311,010
	$39,472,856
Less street railway property exempt	$ 615,000
	$38,857,856

The assessors' books say, then, that the people who own personalt property in Detroit are $750,170 poorer than in 1888, the people who own buildings are $5,391,910 richer, and the owners of land are $17,890,430 better off. This is not all true. The people who own any kind of property are much better off than the figures show. What is true, is, that land values, which have heretofore escaped their just share of taxation, are gradually being brought up to something near the true figures, and that the search for hidden personal property has been abandoned.

Equalizing Wealth.

A. M. Rich, of Sebago Lake, Me., writes to say that in replying to his question as to the equalizing of wealth, we did not understand him. He has no desire to equalize possessions regardless of service, but believing that Barnum and Stewart collected more wealth than they had produced, he felt that somebody had been impoverished, and he asks how the single tax can afford a remedy for such cases.

In this way: General demand for labor products is the employer of all labor. Land is the storehouse to which labor must resort to obtain labor products. Land is now largely held out of use. This appropriation gives a scarcity value to land, and labor is forced to pay for access, even to the poorest. Thus all labor is impeded and many laborers are completely locked out. That condition forces laborers to seek employers who can unlock nature's storehouse by paying the price to its owners. This in turn makes such a glut in the labor market that labor is cheapened. The demands of laborers being a very large proportion of the general demand for labor products, the cheapening of labor materially diminishes the effective demand of laborers for labor products. This falling off of demand for products causes a falling off of the demands of employers for labor. Laborers, nevertheless, need employment, and the competition for opportunities to work becomes keener, still further cheapening labor, and consequently still further lessening the effective demand for products. There is, therefore, a downward tendency of labor value, which enables such like Barnum and Stewart to get rich, just as Mr. Rich sees it, through the impoverishment of their employes.

Now, if the single tax were applied it would be unprofitable to own land except to use it. Hence, unused land would be put to use, which would increase the demand of employers for labor or be abandoned, which would widen the opportunities of laborers to employ themselves. The first effect of that would be an increase of employers wanting to hire labor, a decrease of laborers wanting to be hired, a consequent rise in wages, and a resulting increase of demand for labor products. This increase of demand for products would still further increase the demand for labor; that would further increase the price of labor; and that would make renewed demands for labor products.

The action and reaction, now, certainly tend to lessen wages and decrease demand for products. Under the single tax the action and reaction would constantly tend to raise wages and increase the demand for products. And just as now the Barnums and the Stewarts get rich through the impoverishment of their employes, they and their employes together would get rich under the operation of the single tax; for competent men would not sell their services below their value, which would tend constantly upwards. The probability is that in such cases every employe would have an interest in the business commensurate with his contributions to its success—in other words, would employ himself.—The Standard.

Single Tax in England.

Look at the proposals which have put my lord the duke of Westminister and my lord Weymss into such a pother. It is actually suggested in cold blood that the ground landlords of London, who draw some 15,000,000 sterling per annum from London, and do absolutely nothing for it, should be made to contribute so much on the pound to the rates which are expended in these improvements and that local government which give their property its value. Did you ever hear such a socialistic proposal? My lord the duke turned pale with rage when it was whispered to him that it was proposed to make him pay five cents in the pound on the value of the land which had been covered with houses by other men, and in regard to which the paving and lighting and sweeping were paid for out of rates to which he had not contributed.

The old admiral who declared every day that the service was going to the dogs was nothing compared to those who declare through the Liberty and Property Defense league that the country is going to—well, his satanic majesty by reason of the monstrous spoliation which is openly advocated in these fid de siecle days. They have banded themselves together in a sacred league; they have sworn death and destruction to these municipal pirates, and when the election of the county council comes to pass, in March of the coming year, they will use all their power and influence to prevent the return of those who are pledged to meddle with their millions. But to my mind they might as well imitate the courtiers of Canute, and tell the mighty sea to roll thus far and no farther as endeavor to stem the stream which is settling so steady towards the haven they dread.—Cor. Philadelphia Telegraph. (Tory.)

Single Tax Congressmen in Chicago.

The Chicago single tax club intends to take advantage of the congressional visit to that city, in connection with the world's fair, to celebrate Washington's birthday with a meeting at which the single tax members of congress are to appear. Congressman Tom L. Johnson has agreed to speak, and in arranging for the appearance of his associates of the single tax faith on the occasion. The meeting will be an important one, both in regard to our movement and in its effect on the coming political campaign. There are a large number of single tax men in congress, and it would be well if their single tax constituents wrote them, urging acceptance of the invitation, which is general and intended to include all who embrace the faith, whether personally invited or not. Mr. Bailey and his associates will spare no pains in making the meeting a success so far as it is within their power to make it one; but in the sense it is a national meeting, and single tax men everywhere should as far as possible contribute their aid.

BURIED IN THE DEEP.

Awful Fate of Forty Newfoundland Sealers.

Of the 200 or More Driven Out to Sea Two Score Lost Their Lives—Many Fishermen Drowned on the Portugal Coast.

UNFORTUNATE SEALERS.

HALIFAX, N. S., March 3.—A dispatch from St. Johns, N. F., gives details of the recent shocking disaster to Newfoundland by which at least forty lives were lost. Saturday last 200 men went out sealing in boats from Trinity bay. While they were on the lookout for seals the thermometer fell to zero and a terrific snowstorm came on. The sealers struggled hard for port, but were unable to cope with the wind, snow and an angry sea. They had no extra clothing and their small boats furnished no shelter. Some were blown far out to sea, while others were frozen upon the ice where they were taking the seals. Many died in their boats.

Most of those who were lost were fathers of families. There is great lamentation along the shores of Trinity bay. The legislature has adjourned as a mark of sympathy.

FISHERMEN DROWNED.

OPORTO, March 4.—The recent gales that have prevailed along the coast of Portugal have been productive of great loss of life, more particularly among the fishermen. Among those who lost their lives in the storm of a few days ago were eighty-three married men, in addition to a large number who were not married. The eighty-three widows have now thrown upon them the care and support of 283 children. They are miserably poor, and unless something is done to aid them they will all suffer severely.

BOSTON, March 5.—According to an official estimate 105 fisherman were drowned in last Saturday's storm.

BASEBALL.

The National League Championship Season to Open April 12.

NEW YORK, March 4.—The National league baseball magnates ended their labors at 5 o'clock Thursday, having completed and adopted the schedule for the season. The championship season is divided into two divisions in consequence of the increased number of clubs in the new organization. It was at first proposed to divide the series so as to make the first consist of eighty-six games and the second of sixty-six, but this was found objectionable to many, and consequently each division consists of seventy-seven games. The winner of each series will play together at the end of the season for the championship. The season opens on April 12.

FLIGHT OF A BANKER.

A Mount Pleasant Financier Departs in a Very Mysterious Manner.

MOUNT PLEASANT, Pa., March 7.—Hugo Kail, president and owner of the Slavinsky bank and general steamship agent, is missing. The Slavs and Huns of this region have been depositing their savings with him, and he is said to have $8,000 of their money in his possession. When the announcement was made that Kail was not in town a crowd of angry foreigners surrounded the bank and threatened to break down the door. They were only prevented from carrying out their threats by the police.

VETERANS QUARREL.

Old Colored Men, Each Over 70, in an Affray Over Politics.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., March 5.—A fatal stabbing affray occurred at the soldiers' home Friday night. Peter Thomas, a 76-year-old inmate, is an ardent democrat, and James Johnson, who is 70 years old, is an equally enthusiastic republican. The two began a political discussion in the basement on the third floor, and it became so spirited that Thomas drew a knife and plunged it into Johnson. The latter will die. Both are colored veterans.

BURIED UNDER THE DEBRIS.

Five Workmen in the Niagara Falls Hydraulic Tunnel Missing.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., March 5.—Five men have been missing since the recent accident in the Niagara falls hydraulic tunnel, and their bodies are supposed to be under the debris. One of them is Charles Boggs, a negro, and the others are said to be Italians and Hungarians. It will be several days before the part where the bodies of the five workmen are supposed to be buried is reached.

Death of Dr. Porter.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 5.—Dr. Noah Porter, ex-president of Yale college, died at his home in this city yesterday, aged 81 years. The greatest progress made by Yale in the entire period of its existence was during Dr. Porter's presidency from 1871 to 1886, when he resigned.

The Failure Record.

NEW YORK, March 5.—The business failures occurring throughout the country during the last seven days numbered 240, as compared with 230 last week and 205 for the same week last year.

Nine Farms Burned Out.

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., March 4.—On Thursday fire destroyed a block in the central part of the town, burning out nine business firms and rendering a dozen families homeless. The entire loss is about $150,000, with $85,000 insurance.

Brought the Last Slaves.

MOBILE, Ala., March 5.—Capt. Timothy Meaher, a veteran steamboat man, died in this city yesterday, aged 78 years. He imported the last cargo of slaves brought to the United States.

Crushed His Father's Skull.

SIMMS, Ill., March 5.—In a quarrel at the family home Thursday night Fred Laffin struck his father with a club, crushing his skull. The son claims that he acted in self-defense.

ROBERT HENRY HENDERSHOT.

The Plain Facts as to the Drummer Boy of the Rappahannock.

LODI, Cal., Jan. 28.—To the Editor—Merely making an assertion over one's signature is not always proof. When coupled with an apparent desire to shun the truth and make falsehood lead in an attack against the honorable record of one who served his country to the best of his ability, it shows a littleness of character always found in the make-up of a coward or bounty jumper.

Henry A. Ford, in the National Tribune of Sept. 24, 1891, takes upon himself the task of trying to belittle the record and standing of a worthy comrade of the Grand Army, and who served honestly and honorably as a drummer boy and private in the Union Army and whose right to the title given him can not be taken away by the jealous mouthings of a perpetual kicker and self-admiration, personal glory seeking newspaper correspondent. Mr. Ford asserts this and that with regard to the drummer boy of the Rappahannock, and Robert Hendershot in particular, but does not produce an iota of evidence to prove that one of his assertions regarding Hendershot is more than the promptings of jealousy, and an innate desire to be seen in public print. As one who put in over three years of service at the front, one who smelt powder, not in imagination but in reality, I propose to give to the fair minded public a little of what I know about Robert Henry Hendershot, so well known, and truthfully and honestly as the drummer boy of the Rappahannock.

Robert Hendershot lived at Jackson, Mich., at the commencement of the war in 1861. He came to the Ninth Michigan Infantry at Fort Wayne, near Detroit, with Captain C. V. Deland and Kirk Purdy. He made himself useful while there waiting on the officers of Companies C. G. and B. At that time he was quite a good drummer, and Captain O. C. Rounds, commanding Company B, promised to take him with that company as a drummer. I was a member of this company and have a distinct recollection of the circumstances. When the regiment left Detroit young Hendershot went with it. The regiment, enroute for Louisville, passed through Jackson, and I well remember how thoroughly the whole Hendershot family searched among our men for Robert, and how, when the engines whistled off breaks, and moved from the depot, Hendershot crawled out of the tool-box on the locomotive and ran back over the box cars to the rear of the train and waved his cap to his relatives and friends, and to the crowd assembled to say good-bye to Company C., the Jackson company. Threats were made to send Hendershot home, but he became more useful every day as a drummer, and also as a forger, so the boys decided that he should remain with them, and he did so until we were captured at Murfreesboro, on the morning of the 13th of July, 1862. When we were attacked, about 4 o'clock in the morning, Robert Hendershot beat the long roll. He then took a musket and stood with us from 4 to 11 a. m., loading and firing during that time until he could hardly raise the musket to his shoulder. When the order was given to fix bayonets, our drummer Hendershot, not then twelve years of age, was at the head of the company, ready to charge, had such an order been given. At different times our Hendershot was ordered back by members of our company, including myself, from the dangerous position taken by him. He replied that he was no better to be shot at than the rest of us. At about 11 o'clock the Third Minnesota and Ninth Michigan surrendered. We were marched to McMinnville and paroled. We were then sent to Camp Chase, Ohio, where Hendershot received his discharge from the Ninth Michigan Infantry. He then went to Detroit and re-enlisted in the eighth Michigan Infantry before he was exchanged. This act made him liable to the penalty of death should he be recaptured, so he enlisted in the Eighth Michigan Infantry under an assumed name, Robert Henry Hendershot. He did this by request of Capt. Hogan, who was desirous of having a good drummer in his company. A large number of men re-enlisted under assumed names before being exchanged, myself among the number, and I for one can see no harm in so doing. He was with Captain Hogan on recruiting service in Detroit. The Rev. George Taylor, chaplain of the Eighth Michigan Infantry, was about to join the regiment, and Hendershot, always restless, desired to be at the front again, so, with the chaplain, he joined the regiment a short time previous to the battle of Fredericksburg, Dec. 11, 12 and 13, 1862. It was here that Robert Hendershot won the name that will live in history long after such men as the so-called Captain Ford have passed from all remembrance. History itself tells of young Hendershot's bravery at Fredericksburg. Men of worth and standing like Chaplain Taylor vouch for the truthfulness of that history as it has been written. Horace Greeley was possessed of rare good judgment and common sense. He sifted the facts as to Robert Hendershot being the "Drummer Boy of the Rappahannock" H. O. Eastman, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., searched into his record and was so well satisfied with it that he joined with Horace Greeley in giving the boy a start in civil life. Hendershot's whole life since the war has been such as to give those who knew, a firm belief that he was all he claimed to be. His success as a drummer has created a jealous desire on the part of less capable, less brave, and less honest men to covet the honors and applause given him by comrades everywhere, and in their lack of other means to lessen his popularity and kill him professionally, they resort to the dirtiest weapon, calumny, falsehood and blackguardism.

Robert Henry Hendershot won the fame accorded him honorably, and no man should stoop so low as even attempt to lessen or take from him what is rightfully his. Weak minded, fanatical, jealous cranks, even though they be members of the Grand Army, should be taught that such attacks as made by Capt. Ford will not be tolerated.

L. P. BROWN,
Company B, Ninth Mich. Infantry.

NEWAGO, Mich., Jan. 30, 1892.—I was a member of the Ninth Michigan Infantry and know Robert Henry Hendershot. I heartily indorse Comrade L. B. Brown's letter. W. H. OSTROM.

THE VILLAGE ELECTION.

The village election held last Monday was hotly contested. Although but one ticket was in the field, there was a warm contest over the question of bonding the corporation to construct permanent water works. A very full vote was polled, the tally sheet showing 492 votes cast. Sixteen of these were thrown out for informality and hence did not appear in the count. 295 votes were cast in favor of the water works and 181 votes were thrown against the project, leaving a majority of 114 in favor.

There were two voting precincts instead of one, as formerly. The arrangements heretofore in use in the council room were utilized for the east side precinct. For the west side the room in the rear of Alf. James' insurance office was used. Four booths were fixed up and the necessary railing to separate the election board from the crowd outside. The west precinct cast the most votes. It was a bright, beautiful day and the voters were out in force as soon as the polls were opened in the morning. People were continually discussing the great question at issue and there were several times during the day, when nearly half the voters in the village were congregated on the sidewalk between Lilley's bank and Strong & McNair's corner. Some pretty hot disputes were indulged in during the day, but were generally of a friendly character. It was evident from the opening of the polls that the friends of the water works had the call and they held their advantage throughout the day. When the count was finished in the evening and the result became known, the boys turned out in force, lighted bon fires and held a general jollification.

We believe that a permanent system of water works will be a great benefit to this community, and now that the mooted question is settled we hope to see all unite and work together for the business prosperity of the village.

Below is the ticket chosen which is an excellent one from top to bottom:

President—Oscar P. Bills.
Recorder—Walter C. Burridge.
Trustees—Chas A. Wright, Hudson W. Conkling, Henry Smith.
To fill vacancy—Wm. Bresic.
Assessors—Horatio Keyser, Horace Weller.

This Campaign Year.

Everybody must have a reliable newspaper. The "Twice-a-Week" St. Louis Republic will be a complete history of the important political events that will follow one another in quick succession from now on, until the fate of the great political parties is decided at the polls in November. The indications all point to a political revolution in the government, unequalled since the election of Andrew Jackson in 1828, or that of Abraham Lincoln in 1860. All who desire to keep fully informed of the successive steps by which this impending revolution is wrought out, and means by which the coming Democratic victory is won, will find The "Twice-a-Week" Republic indispensable. It is issued on Tuesday and Friday of every week, and its readers in every State of the Union will get the important news at least half a week earlier than any weekly paper can furnish it. At the same time, it challenges comparison with any weekly in its literary, agricultural and other special features which go to make up a complete family paper, yet the price is only One Dollar a Year. Subscribe now, or send for free sample copies. Address The Republic, St. Louis, Mo.

Dr. H. D. BAKER.

The following is clipped from the Fort Scott Daily Monitor. Dr. Baker's old Macon friends will be glad to learn of his prosperity:

The citizens of Fort Scott will hereafter miss the genial and accomplished Dr. H. D. Baker. For the last ten years Dr. Baker has been a familiar figure in the councils of the faculty in this city, as well as at the homes and firesides of its citizens. As a practitioner of the allopathic school of medicine, Mr. Baker was a complete success, and stood high in the list of the entire profession. A few years ago Dr. Baker attended a course of lectures at one of the most eminent schools of opthalmy in the city of Chicago. At the same time he had a large and varied experience in the various institutions of that city, where all manner of diseases of the eye, ear and throat were successfully treated. Upon his return from Chicago he connected himself professionally with Dr. A. L. Burson, and the firm of Burson & Baker monopolized the entire business of this city and surrounding country. Fort Scott society regrets to part with him, but knowing that he will be well received, not only by the medical faculty, but by the whole people of Springfield, Mo., they console themselves with the thought that what is Fort Scott's loss is Springfield's gain.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health by sixty-six observers in different parts of the state for the week ended February 27 indicated that dysentery, measles, diphtheria, scarlet-fever, typho-malarial fever, and inflammation of the kidneys increased, and cholera infantum, cholera morbus and remittent fever decreased in area of prevalence. Diphtheria was reported at twenty-six places, scarlet-fever at fifty-one, typhoid fever at fifteen and measles at ten places.

Singular Phenomenon.

W. A. Hopkins, a Mount Morris farmer, discovered a singular phenomenon on his farm. While he was walking in the woods in the new fallen snow he discovered a large area within which the snow had a curious crimson tinge. Upon investigating it he found the snow alive with wrigglers three-eighths of an inch long, and as brilliant in color as cochineal. He took a number of them to town for scientific examination.

Schoolboys Go Armed.

At the Townsend Street school in Lansing a teacher punished a 10-year-old boy, Guy Cottington. He pulled a revolver and said if she struck him again he would shoot her. The teacher succeeded in taking the weapon from the boy before it was discharged. A census of the school was made and fifteen boys of tender age were found who carried revolvers.

Michigan Patrons.

The Michigan Patrons of Industry in session at Grand Rapids elected the following officers:

President, A. S. Partridge, Flushing; vice president, Thomas Pickett, Shepherd; secretary, F. H. Bathy, Smith's Creek; treasurer J. J. England, Caro; guide, C. H. Estes, Traverse; sentinel, W. K. Frantz, Leroy; members of the executive board, H. O. Daniels, Elva; publisher of Patron's Guide, F. M. Vanderzook, St. Louis; lecturer, Mrs. M. J. Kutz, Rockford.

Didn't Marry for Love.

A most remarkable marriage took place in Jackson. William H. Plumb, aged 21, of that city, was married to Mrs. Amanda Bentley, aged 61, of Grand Rapids. There is a romance connected with the match, as it was a business matter and brought about to perfect the heirship to valuable property in Canada.

Short but Newsy Items.

A people's party has been organized in Tuscola county by the labor organizations of that section.

The Plymouth Congregational church just organized at the junction in Jackson starts with a membership of sixty.

Charlie Reitz, a Manistee 13-year old, was scalded to death in a boiling vat connected with a sawmill.

A blind girl named Eva Sovey, aged 7 years, was burned so badly at Bay City that she died in a few hours.

Oliver Reartme was killed and six other men were hurt while experimenting with dynamite in Detroit.

The harbor at Muskegon has not been closed a day this winter, not even the channel, by ice drifts.

As George Charlo, of Vassar, was chopping wood his ax glanced, striking his right foot and cutting it nearly off.

Beulah will be the post office name of Crystal City hereafter.

Gov. Winans nominated George H. Barnbour, of Detroit, as a member of the Michigan world's fair commission.

Jacob Dash, a 50-year-old expressman, committed suicide by hanging in a barn in the rear of his house in Detroit. He was suffering with the grip.

Kalamazoo college has raised the $100,000 it needed so badly.

William Reid's six-story stained-glass warehouse at Detroit was destroyed by fire, the loss on the stock being $85,000, and on the building $25,000. Insurance, $125,000.

La grippe is a malevolent fiend. It seeks its victims only among the old and the good. There have been over 300 cases in the state prison at Jackson, but not one funeral.

Jerome Carpenter, for twenty-five years a prominent business man of Newaygo, died from the effects of a paralytic stroke.

Mrs. A. C. Mead, of Williamston, scratched herself with a needle, blood poisoning set in, and now she will lose a finger.

Here's a real freak. Richard Eades has been a G. & G. T. depot policeman at Fort Gratiot for thirty years, has never been reported, fined or suspended, doesn't drink, hasn't used tobacco for twenty years and is trustee of a church. He is said to answer all questions civilly and doesn't think he owns the road.

PLANS ALL FIXED.

The number for March begins the seventh year of The Forum, and, for its seventh year several new enterprises in periodical work are announced: First and foremost, the Silver Question. The discussion of the silver question has reached its acute stage in Congress and is, in consequence, before public attention in a more serious form than ever before. The March number contains two papers on it—one by Mr. Bland, who makes his best argument for silver, and the other by Mr. Leech, Director of the Mint, who writes to show that in case of free coinage, Europe would dump its silver on us. In the following months The Forum will publish the most thorough discussion of this subject that has been made, by the foremost writers of both continents. These articles will be a special feature of forthcoming numbers.

The National Democrat, which was started at Fairfield, has resumed publication. The first number, under date of March 1st, is a rattling issue and is evidence that the paper will be conducted all right. Mr. E. L. Teeple, our new photo artist, is doing some very superior work in his line. He believes in the use of printers ink, and is circulating some elegant folders recently issued from the HERALD job rooms.

We crave the indulgence of our readers for our unusual tardiness in issuing the paper last week, but it was unavoidable. We have now perfected a temporary bridge which will probably carry us over the trouble.

A heavy extra bill of expense has been saddled upon us by the accident to the office boiler. All subscribers who are yet in arrears will confer a favor by making a note of it and calling around as soon as possible.

Dr. C. M. Woodward, who went to Hudson last Thursday to perform a surgical operation on Art Retan, was very successful. One year ago Dr. Woodward amputated Retan's left leg near the knee and the other day he amputated the right leg midway between the knee and ankle. He was assisted in this last operation by Dr. Nelson, of Ridgeway and Dr. Eaton, of Hudson. The patient is doing finely and will undoubtedly recover. A card from Art's father received Tuesday says he is getting on splendidly.

The following item, taken from the Fremont, Neb., Flail, shows that the old Tecumseh boys are still forging to the front:

"Prof. Potter, who for a long time has been engaged in the Business College, departed to day for Chadron, where he enters the academy there. The scholars of the Business College, headed by Prof. Hamlin, accompanied Mr. Potter to the train and when it pulled out they gave him a parting salute. The professor goes from this city with the kindest of wishes of our citizens and the hearty "God bless you" from the pupils of the Business College."

The Jackson Concert company gave a very fine entertainment at the opera house Tuesday evening. Although it is quite discouraging to sing to a row of empty chairs, still they went through with the program entire and it was an excellent one from first to last. The troupe contains some fine vocalists, in addition to the instrumental talent. The affair was not properly advertised. That fact together with the horrid roads caused the meagre attendance. We hope the troupe will visit Tecumseh again under favorable auspices. We can bespeak for them a good house.

The North American Review for March is filled with thought and suggestions on affairs of moment by men high in the counsels of the Nation. The temperance rally at Grange Hall, Macon, Friday, was a grand success. Although the audience was small yet the address given by the Rev. J. J. Gulick was a splendid production and was listened with a great deal of interest by those that were present. At the close of the meeting it was resolved that we meet again in two weeks, Friday, March 19, a. two p. m., and the Rev. Mr. Yager, of Ridgeway, be invited to give an address. The following persons were chosen as delegates to attend the convention at Adrian: Mr. and Mrs. James Hatch, Rev. J. J. Gulick and wife, H. C. Miller and wife. Let there be a full attendance at the next meeting. Everybody is invited.

The following item, taken from the Addison Courier, is equally applicable to this latitude: "Once in a while some of our friends who have a good conception of the fitness of things hand in an item that some friend is visiting them or that they or their family are about to make a visit to distant friends. We have stated before but it will do to repeat, that we appreciate thoughtfulness of this kind. The mission of the local paper is to record the goings and comings of your friends; you know when these things happen. The editor is not omnipresent and very often he misses these items. It is only the trouble of a moment to hand them in or let us know, and when done, those at a distance who get our paper feel that a letter from home had reached them—made so by the multitude of little items that so many can furnish.

SUFFERING IN VIENNA.

A Terrible Condition of Affairs in the Austrian Capital.

LONDON, March 5.—A special agent of Reuter's Telegram Company, who is inquiring into the distress in Vienna, paints a terrible picture of the destitution that prevails in that city. There are many houses, he says, whose splendid exteriors give no suspicion of their miserable interiors. Cellars in such houses, he affirms, are crowded with starving persons who are out of work and others who are earning only a mere pittance. Hundreds are unable to pay rent and exist in daily fear of eviction. But in spite of all this misery there is a total absence of evidence of vice among the sufferers.

A SLAVE NINETY YEARS.

Lucy Ridley, an Old Colored Woman Dies at the Age of 117 Years.

NEW YORK, March 4.—In the basement of dingy looking house, 78 Greenwich street, lies the body of a very old a colored woman. She died there Tuesday morning, and they say she was more than 117 years old. Her name was Lucy Ridley and she was born on the plantation of James Downey, near Oxford, N. C., December 22, 1774. For nearly ninety years, her granddaughter Rebecca says, she was a slave.

SHOT BY HIS SPOUSE.

Desperate Deed of a Prominent Detroit Woman—Two Fatal Bullets Fired.

DETROIT, Mich., March 4.—Mrs. C. K. Ayers, one of the most highly connected women in the city, on Wednesday night shot her husband twice in the lungs, and he now lies dying at Harper hospital of the wounds inflicted. Mrs. Ayres began suit for divorce against her husband some months ago, and, pending the result, obtained an injunction preventing the husband from visiting their home. The supreme court on Wednesday quashed the injunction, and Ayers at once went to his house to remove some of his more valuable belongings. Mrs. Ayers met him on the doorstep, and before he could prevent her she pulled a 44-caliber revolver and fired two shots into his breast. Ayers fell mortally wounded, and cannot survive the night. His wife was at once locked up, but refused to make any statement.

COMPROMISED.

Timothy Hopkins Accepts the Sum of $3,000,000.

NEW YORK, March 5.—Timothy Hopkins, the adopted son of Mrs. Mark Hopkins-Searles, has compromised his suit against Edward F. Searles for $3,000,000. The twenty-four or twenty-five relatives of Mrs. Searles have been placated, and now this case is ended forever. Both sides claim a victory. Wilhemus Mynderse, of Butler, Stillman & Hubbard, triumphantly said that Timothy Hopkins had found it advisable to now accept what Mr. Searles had offered him last year, while Russell J. Wilson, the counsel for Timothy, fully acknowledged that the other side had compromised the case. More than a year ago Timothy Hopkins was offered $5,250,000 to give up his claim on the estate by Mr. Searles, but sent back word through his lawyer that he would not consider such a meager offer for an instant.

MADE A RICH HAUL.

Burglars Secure $30,000 from the Coldwater (Mich.) Bank.

COLDWATER, Mich., March 4.—Experts blew open the safe of the Coldwater national bank Wednesday night and secured $24,000. The noise of the explosion was heard half a mile away, but the people thought it was thunder.

The robbers took all the cash, including bills, silver and pennies, they could find. They also secured $40,000 of Philadelphia & Reading railroad bonds, a private deposit. The burglars gained access to the bank by prying up an outside window.

The concussion shattered the wooden shelves inside the vault and scattered the contents of the safes and the shelving about the floor. There was no one sleeping in the bank. The discovery of the robbery was not made until the bank was opened in the morning. There is no clew to the robbers.

DESERVED THEIR FATE.

Two Burglars Lose Their Lives by an Explosion of Gasoline.

ST. LOUIS, March 5.—At 3:15 o'clock a. m. a tremendous explosion occurred in the storehouse of Marks B. Cohn, No. 3721 Chouteau avenue. The massive doors were hurled across the street and the building considerably shaken. At the same time a great burst of flames bulged out from the store windows and enveloped the building. Marks B. Cohn and his brother Abraham were in the store at the time of the explosion and were burned to a crisp. The police say the men were setting fire to the store in order to secure the insurance, which amounted to $5,000. Gas and gasoline were the inflammables used.

Report That Egan Will Return to the United States in April.

VALPARAISO, March 5.—Minister Pedro Montt has cabled from Washington his resignation of his post on account of his election as a deputy for Petorca, in the province of Aconcagua. Petorca is about 85 miles northeast of Valparaiso. The Chilian government will probably ask him to retain his post until his successor has been appointed. It is stated on good authority that Minister Egan will probably return to the United States in April.

BURNED TO DEATH.

Awful Fate of H. H. Niles, a Two Rivers Undertaker.

TWO RIVERS, Mich., March 5.—H. H. Niles, undertaker and furniture dealer, was burned to death about 10 a. m. He rushed from his shop enveloped in flames and hurried toward the river, but dropped dead before he reached the water. The shavings in the shop were found ablaze and a smell of varnish pervaded the interior, but there was no indication of the cause of the fire.

In Honor of Minister Reid.

PARIS, March 7.—The farewell banquet to Mr. Reid, the retiring United States minister, has been fixed for March 24, and will be held in the salle de fete of the Hotel Continent. The American banker, Mr. Harjes, will preside. The farewell address, engrossed on parchment, will be read by Consul General King.

A Fatal Explosion.

PORT HURON, Mich., March 7.—The boilers in White's sawmill exploded Saturday, killing Frank Moran and fatally scalding five others. Moran was thrown 700 feet. Pieces of the boiler were blown 40 rods. The building was demolished.

Killed by a Landslide.

BERLIN, March 5.—A landslide occurred at Bensheim Friday, the mass falling upon an express train from this city that was passing at the time. The train was wrecked and three persons on board were killed, a number of others being injured.

Sugar Bounties.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—A statement prepared by the commissioner of internal revenue in regard to sugar bounty shows that 2,523 claims for bounty, amounting to $6,914,654, have been received, and that 925 claims, amounting to $2,952,020, have been paid.

MAY BE TROUBLE.

The Behring Sea Situation Regarded with Alarm.

Unless Salisbury Withdraws His Refusal to Renew the Modus Vivendi We Will Undertake Alone the Protection of the Seals.

GETTING SERIOUS.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The Behring sea situation still continues to be the chief topic of gossip. The return of the president seems to be accepted as an indication that a firm stand will be maintained. The matter is generally regarded as very serious and no predictions are made as to the outcome.

The action of Lord Salisbury in refusing to renew the modus vivendi, while at the same time approving the treaty of arbitration, is considered in the nature of a direct insult, and his suggestion that a closed zone be observed around the Pribyloff islands is regarded as a mere quibble. It is generally regarded that to submit the whole matter to arbitration and leave the sea entirely open to fishers for a whole season would be absurd on the face of it, inasmuch as by the time the question came to be settled there would be literally nothing left to arbitrate, for the reason that there would be no seals extant. An open season, as proposed, it is thought would mean the utter annihilation of the species.

There need be no fear that the policy followed will be lacking in vigor or will fail to uphold American rights. Intimations have been received that Lord Salisbury did not fully estimate the irritation his refusal to renew the modus vivendi would cause. It has been hinted that Minister Lincoln has received information in the nature of an "explanation" of just what the British foreign office meant by the suggestion of a 30-mile limit around the Pribyloff islands.

The Canadians who have fostered the seal-poaching industry are plainly hopeful that they will get another season's unrestricted poaching in this they are badly mistaken. Unless the modus vivendi is renewed by the British government the arbitration treaty will not be ratified by the senate. The treaty may be sent in by the president with a recommendation for an amendment, requiring the renewal of the modus vivendi. If Great Britain is not willing to consent to this, then the United States will undertake the protection of the seals alone and will act on the assumption that its jurisdiction is complete.

KILLED EACH OTHER.

A Duel with Knives in Alabama in Which Both Principals Are Killed.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 4.—Just over the Alabama line Thursday morning Ed Russell and Al Robinson fought like fiends with knives and killed each other. The row was the result of a family feud of years standing. Their custom has been to ride into Athens occasionally, load up on whisky and make the town wild with their sprees. Thursday morning they met, and Russell's mule having thrown him, he went up to Robinson and ordered that worthy to dismount and give him his purse. Upon refusal Russell rushed at Robinson who leaped to the ground, and a hand-to-hand duel was fought, resulting in the death of both the participants.

Michigan Schools and the Fair.

JACKSON, Mich., March 7.—On February 22, Washington's birthday, the school children throughout the state were asked to contribute one cent apiece, teachers and school officers ten cents and principals fifty cents, in order to aid Michigan's educational exhibition at the World's Columbian exposition. The projectors of the scheme report the receipt of over $10,000 up to date, with a number of localities yet to hear from.

Frenzel in Control.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 5.—Judge Taylor has discharged President Frenzel on the charge of contempt and turned the property of the street car company back to him. President Frenzel will discharge all men who deserted the company during the strike, but the strikers are under obligation to abide by the company's judgment in its discriminations. Another strike is not probable, but is possible. President Frenzel's victory is complete.

Two Men Asphyxiated.

CHICAGO, March 7.—Ludwig Bilineier and Felix Green were found dead in bed at Spangler's livery stable on Fourteenth street Sunday morning. The gas jet was turned on full and the two men met death together by asphyxiation. Whether it was accidental or suicide is not known, but in all probability it was the former, as the thumb-piece of the gas jet is so loose that it can readily be turned either way by a slight touch.

Fell 300 Feet Into a Mine.

CENTRALIA, Pa., March 4.—Frank Cheshal, a miner, has met with a terrible death at Pig Mountain colliery. While walking about the breaker near what is known as the manway, he slipped and fell headlong to the bottom, a distance of 300 feet. He was found an hour later with almost every bone in his body broken.

Will Remain in Receiver's Hands.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., March 5.—There will be no settlement of the affairs of the American Wheel Company, as outlined in the recent Indianapolis meeting—creditors representing $300,000 refused to agree to the terms, and the company will remain in the hands of the receiver.

Perfect Peace.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—An official cablegram contains the information that the national assembly of Guatemala has opened its ordinary sessions and that complete peace prevails throughout the republic.

Field Jurors Couldn't Agree.

NEW YORK, March 7.—The jury in the M. Field insanity case announced at 11:30 Saturday night that they could not agree and were discharged.

HIS UNLUCKY PLANET.

It Proved to Be a Lucky One After All.

"Oh, yes, I know it's all my own fault," Charley Cleve said. "Whose else should it be? But I'm disinherited, all the same. I've no more chance of coming into that fertile farm land than—than yonder Italian organ-grinder, who is turning the crank so perseveringly under deaf Squire Homer's back-kitchen window."

"Oh, Charley!" said Bess, clasping her hands despairingly together.

"I didn't expect much else," went on Mr. Cleve, in a rollicking, light-hearted sort of way. "I was born under an unlucky star, Saturn, or Mars, or one of those planets that never bring a fellow any good. You can't expect a star to reverse its order on my account, can you?"

"But, Charley—"

"Just wait until you hear the full account of my atrocities. I wasn't so much to blame for treading on the cat—anyone might have done that. I don't think she laid that up against me. And when I broke down the old cherrywood chair that had belonged to her grandfather—that was a mere question of weight. And I mended it for her, too. But when the broiled ham for breakfast had such a queer taste to it and I had to confess that I had been smoking up the chimney where it hung—"

"Oh, Charley!"

"How was I to know that she made a store-house of the back-room chimney? Folks in Philadelphia don't do that sort of thing. And she wouldn't tolerate tobacco in any shape—she let me know that, at the very outset!"

Bess shook her head mournfully.

"You know I told you, Charley—" she began.

"Yes, my dear little guardian angel—but I give you my word, I'll confine myself to cigarettes for the future, and never smoke one within a quarter of a mile of the house. But listen. The next thing I did was to upset her whole churning of cream. It hung half way down the well, don't you see, and when I came home, famished with thirst, and jerked the bucket down—well, the first thing I heard was Cousin Sarepta screaming like mad. 'Is it burglars?' said I, seizing my blackthorn stick, 'or is it fire?' And I had plunged into the house, and put my foot—literally, not metaphorically—into the old lady's baking of custard pies, that she had set on the cellar floor to cool, before she could make me understand. But the last straw that broke the camel's back was the old gray goose."

"'The old gray goose,' Charley! Surely, nothing has happened to that!"

Mr. Cleve shook his head.

"The very worst has happened," said he. "I've shot it!"

"Oh, Charley!"

The young man laughed bitterly, and spouted the lines:

"'Why look'st thou so? With my crossbow
I shot the albatross.'"

Yes, I did. Out wild duck hunting in the marshes. I thought it was rather a mammoth specimen, when I leveled the trigger; and when Don brought it to me my heart sank to the very soles of my boots. I had half an idea of burying the creature out among the salt grasses, and saying never a word. But that would have been a sneaking sort of dodge. The Cleves can do plenty of shabby things, but they never lie outright. So I brought it home with the string of wild birds. 'I'm very sorry, Cousin Sarepta,' said I, 'but I've shot your old goose. I'll replace it with the finest pair to be had in Salt Inlet.' 'Replace it!' says she; and then, to be sure, there was a scene. She set a good deal of store by that old gray goose, you know."

"Yes, I know," said Bessie, resignedly. "It was nearly twenty years old. She raised it herself in a basket by the kitchen fire, and it ate corn daily out of her own hand. She wouldn't have taken twenty dollars for that old goose. No, nor fifty, I do believe."

"So," added Charley, with a particularly expressive shrug of the shoulders, "she has turned me out of doors. She called me a loafer and a shiftless ne'er-do-weel, and I dare say she was right. I couldn't contradict her, so I didn't try. She recommended me to go about my business, so I did. And here I am. I've telegraphed to Philadelphia for the taxidermist. That was all I could do. Do you suppose, Bess, your father would take me to board for eight days? I've just eight days left of my vacation, and there'll be such a lot of questions asked if I come home in advance of time. I wouldn't advise you to have a word to say to me. I dare say I shall set fire to the house, or poison the family, or shoot somebody by mistake. What can be expected of a fellow that was born under an unlucky planet?"

Bess Warden laughed cheerily.

"Father will risk it, I am sure," said she. "We haven't a great deal of spare room, but mother will make you up a cot bed in the room with the boys, and if you can put up with our plain way of living—"

He stopped her mouth with a kiss.

"You are an angel, Bess!" said he.

The kindly Warden family did their best to console old Miss Sarepta Smith's discarded relation and to make the last portion of his vacation a trifle pleasanter than the first had been. But Dr. Warden shook his frost-white head.

"I don't like long engagements," said he. "And Bess can't marry a man on any twelve dollars a week."

"But, father, Charley will do better in time."

"If it pleases the unlucky planet," interpolated Charley.

"Well, wait until the better times come."

"Oh, we don't mind waiting!" cried Bess.

"Speak for yourself, if you please," murmured Charley.

"We've a lifetime before us," asseverated Bess; "and, in the meantime, Charley, we'll go out duck shooting to-morrow, and I'll row you through the Silver Channels to the best ground on all the coast."

On the night before Mr. Cleve's time was up, the lovers, talking to each other late in the autumnal starlight on the porch, saw a red glare in the sky above the privet hedge.

"It's a bonfire," said Charley.

"It's Miss Sarepta Smith's house!" shrieked Bess. "Help! Help! Fire! Water! Oh, why don't somebody come!"

"Call your father and the boys!" said Charley, flinging off his coat. "I'll jump the fence and take the short cut. She's all alone in the house, poor thing!"

At Salt Inlet they had neither steam fire-engines nor patent extinguishers. By the time the volunteer company had dragged the rickety old engine and hose-cart out of their shed, and hoisted them up the hill, the ancient house where Sarepta Smith had been born was in ruins; and the old woman herself, carried in a big chair over to the Warden house, was lamenting herself that she, too, had not gone also.

"Seems like I couldn't live nowhere else," said she. "And I'm an old woman—a very old woman."

Bess Warden gave up her own room to Miss Sarepta. Every one did what he could to make her comfortable, but the only sign she evinced of pleasure was when Charley Cleve brought in the old gray goose, stiffly mounted on an imitation of mossy ground. Her dim eyes lighted up.

"I am glad you saved that, Charles," said she.

"I found it among a heap of other things," said Charley. "And I thought you'd like to have it. See, here are your spectacles too, and the old Bible, with the leaves all right, and the cover only a little charred!"

Miss Sarepta looked feebly from one relic to another.

"I'm glad," said she, "very glad. It was thoughtful of you, Charles. I'm sorry I called you them names. I take 'em all back."

"Oh! never mind the names," said Charley. "At all events, you can't lay this fire to me!"

"No," said Sarepta, "it was the mice playin' on the closet shelf where I kept the matches. I'd laid up to set a trap, but I forgot. And I should ha' been burned in my bed if it hadn't been for you, Charles. I allays dreaded a death by fire!"

Old Miss Sarepta lay very quietly for a day or two, with the gray goose folding its wings at her bed head, and the Bible and spectacles on a stand beside her pillow.

"Charles shall have the gray goose," said she, one evening. "It'll help furnish his house. And it'll show I don't bear no malice on account of his shootin' it. And the specks and the Bible Bess must keep. An old Bible brings every one luck!"

She died before daybreak. If there was any will—and Miss Sarepta was always believed to be a well-to-do, business-like woman—it was destroyed in the flames. The old place—three-and-forty acres—went to a cousin nearer of kin than Charley Cleve.

"My unlucky planet again," said Charley, with a grimace. "Well, never mind, Bess; it's only waiting a little longer. We've got a Bible and a pair of spectacles, after all."

"And a stuffed gray goose," said Bess.

"Oh! hang the goose!" said Charley. "It's neither useful nor ornamental. Let's shy it out into the orchard;" and he seized it by one leg.

"Oh! stop, Charley!" cried thrifty Bess. "Let's save the feathers for a pillow."

"They're full of arsenic and such stuff."

"All the better for keeping out moths," retorted Bess. "I'll pack them into a bag, and— Oh! Charley, what is this?"

A piece of the old gray goose's epidermis had come off with the first handful of feathers. Underneath it was something like dull-green paper packed in layers.

"Hello!" said Charley. "Why—they're bills! They're money! Look here! Am I dreaming?"

It was true. The old gray goose was stuffed full of new, crisp greenbacks. Sarepta Smith's eccentricities had not ceased with her death. There had been method in her words when she gave Charley Cleve this memorial of his own blunder, as a peace offering.

"Five hundred dollars!" said he. "I say, Bess, isn't it almost enough to get married upon? We'll do it very quietly, you know."

"Don't talk nonsense, Charley."

"But look in the old Bible, Bess. Who knows what may be hidden there?"

Nothing was hidden there. Apparently Miss Sarepta had confined her savings bank idea to the old gray goose.

Charley Cleve considered deeply.

"Five hundred dollars won't go very far in the city," said he; "and in the Trust company, where I'm clerking it, a fellow may grub away for twenty years without any chance of promotion. I'll cut city life, Bess, if you say so, and invest this money in the first payment on a little fruit-farm out here at Salt Inlet."

Bess' face lighted up.

"Close to my old home!" she cried. "Oh, Charley, I do say so!"

And ten years after their wedding-day, when the great railway vein had throbbed through their land, and the "little fruit farm" was cut up into village lots, the thriving young farmer looked at his wife with a smile.

"It all comes of the old gray goose, Bess," said he.

"The unlucky planet was a lucky one after all," laughed Bess.—Clara Green in N. Y. Ledger.

—A man who was preparing a series of recipes for a cookery-book, engaged the services of a celebrated chef as clerk and copyist of his work. One day he submitted to the chef a recipe for lemonade which ended with the direction: "Then sit on the stove and stir constantly." The chef twirled his thumbs, and said: "It strikes me, that's rather a useless direction; for, if you sit on the stove, you are bound to stir constantly."

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health by sixty-six observers in different parts of the state for the week ended February 27 indicated that dysentery, measles, diphtheria, scarlet-fever, typho-malarial fever, and inflammation of the kidneys increased, and cholera infantum, cholera morbus and remittent fever decreased in area of prevalence. Diphtheria was reported at twenty-six places, scarlet-feyer at fifty-one, typhoid fever at fifteen and measles at ten places.

Singular Phenomenon.

W. A. Hopkins, a Mount Morris farmer, discovered a singular phenomenon on his farm. While he was walking in the woods in the new fallen snow he discovered a large area within which the snow had a curious crimson tinge. Upon investigating it he found the snow alive with wrigglers three-eighths of an inch long, and as brilliant in color as cochineal. He took a number of them to town for scientific examination.

SchoolBoys Go Armed.

At the Townsend Street school in Lansing a teacher punished a 10-year-old boy, Guy Cottington. He pulled a revolver and said if she struck him again he would shoot her. The teacher succeeded in taking the weapon from the boy before it was discharged. A canvass of the school was made and thirteen boys of tender age were found who carried revolvers.

Didn't Marry for Love.

A most remarkable marriage took place in Jackson. William H. Plumb, aged 21, of that city, was married to Mrs. Amanda Bentley, aged 61, of Grand Rapids. There is a romance connected with the match, as it was a business matter and brought about to perfect the heirship to valuable property in Canada.

He is said to answer all questions civilly and doesn't think he owns the road.

The house owned and occupied by Mrs. T. C. Adam came very near being destroyed by fire one day last week. Mrs. Adam was smoking ham in the woodshed adjoining the house and in some way the fire caught in some kindling wood, running from there to the side of the house, and had a good start when discovered. Prompt action and plenty of water saved the building but its occupants were pretty much frightened.

Patrick McDermott died Sunday, at six o'clock a. m., of heart disease. He had been afflicted with this disease for some time but his death was not looked for until quite recently. He had been a very industrious, hard-working man and by strict economy had been able to save several hundred dollars, but through one or two unlucky investments this was swept away, and since that time Mr. McDermott had gradually failed in health. He leaves a wife and two sons to mourn his loss. The funeral was held at St. Dominic's church Tuesday at 10 a. m. Less than twenty-four hours had passed after the death of Patrick McDermott when the community was saddened by the death of his brother James. He had been very sick since the latter part of December but his life had at no time been despaired of until a few days before his death, when he said himself that he knew he could not live. His death was caused by an abscess on his right side. The deceased had spent the greater portion of his life here and was well known and universally respected. The community has lost a good citizen and expresses heartfelt sympathy for the widow and the eleven children that he has left. The funeral services were held at the M. E. church Tuesday, at 2 p. m., Rev. Stalker officiating.

The Magazine of American History continues with each monthly issue a vigorous illustration of its unmistakable wealth of resource, as well as of the scope of this leading historical publication of the United States, which is as broad as the continent itself. The March number is, as usual, handsome and attractive and contains a mass of desirable information on timely topics. The opening paper is by President Charles Kendall Adams, L.L.D., entitled "Some Recent Discoveries Concerning Columbus," and nothing could be more welcome to students, specialists, and the intelligent public, particularly at this retrospective period of our country's affairs, than this essay. President Adams demonstrates very clearly how Columbus sailed around Watling's Island and landed from the west rather than from the east, and thus entered the New World on the Chicago instead of the New York side; he also gives the reader the latest and most authentic information as to the recent discovery of the burial place and remains of Columbus. There has been no end of controversy on this theme, but Rudolf Cronau a German traveler and historical critic, reviewed the whole question in 1881, and has now established the fact, beyond doubt, that the remains of Columbus are still lying in the cathedral at San Domingo. The paper of President Adams embodies all this, and much more, in the most concise, forcible and conclusive manner.

The TRIBUNE ALMANAC for 1892, just out, is a wonderful book. We can hardly spare the space to enumerate the whole list of contents of this admirable volume of reference. Our readers can send to the Tribune for a circular giving them full information, and we advise them to follow this course, if they are in doubt. They can be sure, however, that the Almanac contains all the statistical information they are likely to want, including some specially valuable new features. The country is discussing currency questions now, and the Tribune gives in this Almanac two tables of immediate interest: One is the Coinage of the U. S. for every year since 1793. The other is the circulating medium (money and its substitutes) per capita for each year since 1857. There is a Perpetual Calendar, copyrighted, of great value; and a great mass of other exceedingly useful tables and statements. The great Tribune Almanac for 1891 had an enormous sale. The book for 1892 is likely to do even better. Price 25 cents.

Husband's Mistake.

Husbands too often permit wives and parents their children, to suffer from headache, dizziness, neuralgia, sleeplessness, fits, nervousness, when by the use of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine such evils and its results could easily be prevented. Druggists everywhere sell it on guarantee of universal satisfaction, and has an immense sale. Ward worth & Co., of Fort Wayne, Ind., Snow & Co., of Syracuse, N. Y., and Ward Hillsdale, Mich., and hundreds of others say "it is the greatest seller they ever knew." It contains no opiates. Trial bottle and fine book on Nervous Diseases, free at Beiser & Hall's.

One day last week Laverne Smith, while chopping in the old Smith orchard south of town, caught his ax on an overhanging twig. Now Vern is at home doctoring his ear as the consequence of the ax coming down in the wrong place.

The eight or nine young men who twisted and broke over ornamental trees belonging to T. V. Hoagland, Francis Yates and others last Friday night were all found out and arrested by officer Gibson Wednesday. This is the second time Mr. Hoagland has been made the victim of this uncalled-for destruction of shade trees in the past two years, and we heartily endorse any action the officers may deem advisable. Preceding the former breaking over of trees, some two years ago, was the tearing and defacing of the large canvas sign of W. Lenardson & Son, on the west side of their store building. Then came the cutting of Wm. Prindle's wire fence in front of his residence, and then followed numerous other mean and uncalled-for misdemeanors, and two weeks ago the third burglary of Lenardson's store establishment occurred, and as yet without any further developments. Taking all this into due consideration we trust these last young men will be made an example of. We will conclude by citing one other instance which occurred but a few days ago. The offender came this time from our neighboring village of Ridgeway. This individual seemingly does not understand why and for what purpose highways are laid out. He also does not know, or rather seems to ignore the purpose for which sidewalks are laid, as in his goings and comings he finds the new sidewalk just constructed from the village to the church just right to ride horseback over; but unfortunately this professional man of Ridgeway, who rides a sorrel horse, was detected riding for some distance on the walk, and in one place the horse, breaking through, left sorrel hairs on the boards. We trust this may not be repeated, but should it be the ladies' committee of the home missionary society on sidewalks will give him a call and ask for proper settlement of damages. Let this be a warning. By order of COM. OF CONSTRUCTION.

SARAH COATS BRITTON.

The deceased was born at Bilbrough, England, August 6, 1805, and died at her home, also the home of her only son, John, at Britton, Mich., Feb. 25, 1892, at one o'clock in the morning, aged 86 years, 6 months and 19 days. She was united in marriage to John Britton in 1826. There were born to them four children, three of whom survive her, with 18 grandchildren and 30 great-grandchildren to mourn her loss. The husband and oldest daughter, Jane Wiggins, died in the same year, 1876. She experienced religion in the year 1827 and united with the Methodist Church and had been an active member about 65 years. In June, 1850, she left England with her family and came to America, reaching Michigan in the locality of what is now known as Britton.

She was a remarkable woman and was so recognized by her neighbors and friends; ever faithful in head, heart and hand, always carrying sunshine and cheer as she went from home to home among her children, grandchildren and great-children; always youthful in spirit, even down to the end of life. It was characteristic of this person to look upon the bright side of life. Seldom was she heard to say "I am tired." As is well known to her entire family, her piecework will be a reminder of her untiring labor to the children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, and unto the generations that shall yet arise to call her blessed, for it is said: "The righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance." The funeral rites were observed at her late home, where a large circle of mourners and neighbors were present, who looked upon the remains with tearful eyes for the last time, none of whom but were reminded then of one, now still in death, once ready to minister to the comfort and cheer of others, either with money or in deeds of kindness. In her was found Christ-likeness without narrowness. May her mantle continue to fall upon those who follow her in their generations. It was apparent to all who knew the deceased that her powers of mind were unimpaired, carrying the sweetness of youth in old age down to death. Text used at funeral, Revelations, 14:13, "And I heard a voice from Heaven saying unto me, Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labours, and their works do follow them."

FARMERS' SOCIAL CLUB.

The Club met at A. P. Coddington's Tuesday evening, March 8th. A very interesting program was presented and seemed much enjoyed by those present. The poem on electricity, by Mrs. O. P. Remington, deserves especial mention. It would well be worth a place in any magazine. In discussing the question, "What stock pays best for time and money expended?" there was quite a diversity of opinion. Some thought horses, some sheep, but hens seemed to have as many, if not more friends than any of the rest. G. B. Garlinghouse thought horses the most profitable if they could be sold for what they were worth, and further said he had one to sell. The Club adjourned to meet in two weeks, March 22, at G. B. Garlinghouse's, with the following program:

AN IMPORTANT DIFFERENCE.

To make it apparent to thousands, who think themselves ill, that they are not affected with any disease, but that the system simply needs cleansing, is to bring comfort home to their hearts, as a costive condition is easily cured by using Syrup of Figs. Manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co.

"I think this thing of overwork being fatal is all rot," remarked the paste-pot. "Why, of course it is," replied the Lent-umbrella joke. "Just look at us."

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, March 17, 1892.

War with Great Britain would not necessarily follow if this Government should decide, as it probably will, unless Lord Salisbury shall change his mind about that modus vivendi, to send a naval force to Behring Sea strong enough to seize all the poaching sealers, but it would certainly be expected, and, truth to tell, welcomed by lots of people in this country. President Harrison has sent the arbitration treaty and all of the correspondence not before made public to Congress, and nothing more will probably be done until Lord Salisbury answers the communication protesting against his declining to renew the modus vivendi, which, although signed by Mr. Wharton, who is acting Secretary of State during Secretary Blaine's illness, was written by President Harrison and unanimously approved by a cabinet meeting. It is written in the smooth language of diplomacy, but Lord Salisbury will have no difficulty in reading between the lines the expressed determination to maintain at all hazards the position taken from the first. In the Senate there is a very decided disposition to retaliate upon Canada should Lord Salisbury adhere to his refusal to renew the modus vivendi, in fact there would be little or no difficulty in getting the sanction of a majority of the Senate to an open declaration of war against Great Britain, so intense is the feeling against the government of that country.

A large number of petitions from the Farmers' Alliance in various sections of the country, asking for legislation in accordance with the principles of that organization, were presented to Congress this week. The Pure Food bill, which has been advocated by representatives of that organization, was passed by the Senate.

Commodore Folger, Chief of the Ordnance Bureau of the Navy, who is in charge of the gun shops at the Washington Navy Yard, testified before the sub-committee of the House committee on Labor, this week, on the advantages of the eight-hour law, as did also Col. Ernst and General Casey, of the Engineer Corps of the army; but Commodore Folger's statements were much the strongest,—in fact no stronger argument was ever made in favor of the eight-hour system than his statement of how it works in his department. He said that he believed it would be a great blessing if the system were universally adopted; that the labor and the work would be improved; that at the Washington Navy Yard he was turning out better and cheaper guns under eight hours' work per day than the contractors were doing under the ten-hour system.

The River and Harbor committee will grant no more hearings, as its members are already committed to appropriations that will make the bill carry about $20,000,000, and they fear to run it any higher. The River and Harbor bill is, to speak paradoxically, both popular and unpopular. It is popular in those sections which get, or expect to get appropriations for the improvement of rivers and harbors, and unpopular in the sections which have neither rivers nor harbors to be improved. "You tickle me and I'll tickle you" is the principle upon which it is made up and passed.

The United States Patent office is the one branch of Uncle Sam's business establishment that is carried on at a profit, having earnings to its credit in the Treasury of about $4,000,000, a portion of which one patent commissioner after another has begged Congress to spend in giving the office room enough to transact its business properly. Congress has turned a deaf ear to these appeals, and now the manufacturers, inventors, owners of patents and others who find it helpful to get copies of patents are to suffer for the negligence of Congress, as will be seen by the following, which is a copy of a letter sent to all applicants for copies of patents: "The Patent Office regrets that, in consequence of want of room for the storage and arrangement of printed copies of patents, it will be impossible to fill your order in current issues until additional room is provided by the proper authorities." This ought to bring the blush of shame to the face of every member of Congress.

WOOL AND WOOLENS TARIFF.

A Tariff Averaging 92.24 Per Cent. on Woolen Goods is a Great Boon to Shoddy Manufacturers—Enormous Profits of Woolen Mills.

Now that the bureau of statistics has issued its annual report on imported merchandise entered for consumption in 1891, we have the data required to determine how high a rate we are paying on imported wools and woolen goods. The McKinley tariff raised the duties on woolen goods so high that for a long time they were supposed to be prohibitive.

But it was soon found that notwithstanding the high duties imposed, woolen goods continued to be imported, though in diminished quantities. In 1890 we imported $54,165,438 of woolen goods and in 1891, $43,236,410. Of the imports in 1891 $23,546,439 were entered under the old tariff and $19,691,795 under the McKinley tariff. Allowing for the abnormally large imports from July 1 to October 1, 1890, for the purpose of anticipating the higher duties, the imports under the McKinley tariff are but little less than before it became a law. In short, the duties levied by the McKinley tariff are not high enough to accomplish the end intended—prohibition. How much higher they are than the old rates is shown by the following table of the ad valorem equivalents of specific and compound duties:

Wools.	1890. Per cent.	1891. Per Cent.
Clothing	48.16	50.38
Combing	44.09	50.15
Carpet	24.48	32.00
Carpet	30.49	50.00
Woolens—
Yarns	68.83	97.10
Blankets	71.14	84.74
Bunting	60.00	48.33
Carpets	46.94	60.49
Cloths	78.17	92.48
Dress goods	72.74	97.57
Endless belts	32.43	97.80
Flannels	68.65	92.89
Plushes	....	118.84
Cloaks	56.40	85.85
Hats	67.62	76.58
Knit fabrics	64.30	76.68
Shawls	66.39	79.56
Clothing, p.	53.55	81.78
Webbings, etc.	60.99	93.05
All other manufactures	68.87	87.92
Total manufactures of wool	60.12	92.24

This is an increase of over 33 per cent. Under the tariff of 1883 worsted cloths were not separated from all other wool manufactures, and the item of "cloths" in the above table represents woolen cloths only for 1890. Under the McKinley tariff woolen and worsted cloths bear the same rates. Similarly, plushes were not separately enumerated in 1890.

On bunting, as shown above, the ad valorem rate is less now than in 1890. The duties are, however, higher now than before, but since they are practically prohibitive, this fact is of little importance.

A tariff averaging 92.24 per cent. just suits the large number of so-called woolen manufacturers, who are large users of shoddy extracts and cotton. Only a short time ago one of the leading manufacturers declared that all wool goods are now the exception and not the rule. No truer or briefer statement of the effect of high and prohibitive duties has ever been made. The high duties on wool and woolens have made all wool goods so high that they are beyond the means of a large number of people. As a consequence they must wear shoddy instead.

It has been asserted that woolen goods have not risen in price in consequence of the McKinley tariff. How this can be reconciled with an increase in the duties of fully 33 per cent. and but a slight decrease in the importations is beyond comprehension.

But the McKinley tariff has been a bonanza to the manufacturers, for it enabled such mills as the Arlington, of which Mr. Whitman is president, to earn a profit of 50 per cent. in 1891. No wonder, in view of this, that Mr. Whitman is so strenuous in his opposition to any change in the duties on his products.

The present wool tariff is nothing but a legalized form of robbery. There was an old English law which provided that every person after death should be buried in a woolen shroud, in order that the manufacture of woolens might be encouraged. More barbarous and unreasonable than that ancient law, the McKinley tariff, by its merciless taxes on woolens, discourages the wearing of them by the living.

THE BINDING TWINE TRUST.

By Its Control Over the Manufacture of Machinery it is Able to Prevent the Erection of New Mills.

The National Cordage Co., popularly known as the twine trust, not only controls all the plants making binding twine in the United States, but it has also bought up all the patents on twine machinery and absolutely refuses to sell any machinery to independent companies who desire to erect plants to compete with the trust.

The experience which the committee appointed by the legislature of Minnesota to provide means for the manufacture of binding twine in the prison at Stillwater, has had with the trust is thus described by the St. Paul Pioneer-Press:

"We publish this morning for the information of the general public the facts relating to the manufacture of binding twine at Stillwater and the difficulties encountered there by reason of the absolute control of the market and the business which the trust, known as the National Cordage Co., has secured. It was the desire of the legislature, representing especially the wishes and interests of the farmers of this state, that the prisoners in the penitentiary be employed in making binding twine. Machines for this purpose were purchased, these being what is known as 'short line' machines, adapted to the use of ordinary hemp. The farmers, however, prefer twine made from Manilla and Sisal; and as these raw materials were placed on the free list by the last congress, it was thought to be good policy to purchase 'long line' machines, used in making twine from the imported material, and the prison authorities visited New York for the purpose of purchasing the necessary plant.

"It then appeared that this whole business is entirely controlled by the trust, which squeezes the farmer at its pleasure by charging higher prices for binding twine. Not only are these 'long line' machines controlled by the trust, but they have even tied up concerns that manufacture them with contracts and conditions, so that the machinery is unobtainable. The letter printed from the company offering to sell machinery if bonds for $200,000 were given by the state is a sample of the impudence of the monopoly. Of course it was impossible to make purchases under these conditions, and the prison authorities were compelled to make their additions to machinery of the same kind as that now in use, and are thus prohibited from making binding twine from Manilla and Sisal at all. The farmers can get only the ordinary hemp twine from the prison manufactory.

"The insolence and the power of this concern seem marvelous when it is remembered how solemnly congress has protested against trusts and how eager it has professed itself to legislate against them. Yet this particular one, which refuses to let the people make binding twine as long as it can compel them to buy of it at its own prices, is protected by a duty of seven-tenths of a cent per pound on binding twine made of Manilla and Sisal. A strong fight was made by Senator Davis against this duty and in favor of putting such twine on the free list, but he succeeded only in securing a reduction of the duty to the present figure. It is time that the rest of it was abolished. When the entire business of manufacture is in the hands of a single concern, which gets its raw material without paying a cent of duty, when it freezes out every competitor by getting a monopoly of necessary machinery and refuses to so much as sell a machine, then the word 'protection' as applied to a duty on the product of such a concern becomes a misnomer, an insult, and a wrong. The tariff on binding twine made from Manilla and Sisal benefits nobody in the United States but the National Cordage Co. We do not approve of the general policy of reducing the tariff by separate bills, but we shall be glad to see how many men in either house will have the face to vote against a bill that proposes to put binding twine on the free list. There is no more odious trust than this in America. Down with it."

Garfield's Tariff Views.

Had ex-President James A. Garfield been a member of the Fifty-first congress the most powerful pressure which McKinley could have brought to bear upon him would not have induced him to vote in favor of the McKinley bill. During the tariff debate in 1870 he declared in a speech in opposition to the high tariff then under consideration:

"I stand now where I have always stood since I have been a member of this house. I take the liberty of quoting from the Congressional Globe of 1866, the following remarks which I then made on the subject of the tariff:

"'We have seen that one extreme school of economists would place the price of all manufactured articles in the hands of foreign producers by rendering it impossible for our manufacturers to compete with them while the other extreme school, by making it impossible for the foreigner to sell his competing wares in our market, would give the people no immediate check upon the prices which our manufacturers might fix for their products. I disagree with both these extremes. I hold that a properly adjusted competition between home and foreign products is the best gauge by which to regulate the international trade. Duties should be so high that our manufacturers can fairly compete with the foreign product, but not so high as to enable them to drive out the foreign article, enjoy the monopoly of the trade and regulate the prices as they please. This is my doctrine of protection. If congress pursues this line of policy steadily, we shall year by year, approach more nearly to the basis of free trade, because we shall be more nearly able to compete with other nations on equal terms. I am for a protection which leads to ultimate free trade.'"

Another Window Glass Combination.

Concerning the action of the window glass combination at its meeting in Cleveland, the Iron Age says:

The advance in the price of glass made at the Cleveland meeting, held on February 16 and noticed in our last issue, is reported to take effect immediately. The rates agreed upon are: For 100-box lots or more, 80, 10 and 5 per cent. discount. The actual freight allowed is not to exceed the Chicago carload rate, which is 17½ cents per hundred weight. For smaller lots the discount is to be 80 and 5 per cent., f. o. b. at factory. The action is reported as unanimous, the manufacturers being united upon the desirability of putting the business upon a better paying basis. The revision of the present price list, which work is now in the hands of a committee, will have the effect, it is understood, of further advancing the price of glass. It is stated that the reports from the different manufacturers showed stocks in their hands to be small and the outlook generally promising.

Though the duties on window glass average over 100 per cent., the combine keeps up prices to the importing point, and then claims that the tariff is not high enough to adequately protect them—that is, enable them to levy as high taxes on consumers here as they would like to do.

Abundance at a Very Low Price.

The American Wool Reporter says: The following letter has been sent to us as evidence that an increased rate of duty has failed to stimulate the demand for wool from the section alluded to:

BEAVER DAM, Wis., Feb. 18, 1892.
Messrs. Brown & Cobb, Lake Geneva, Wis.:

Dear Sirs: In reply to your favor of 17th inst., we beg to state that we have a supply of wool adequate for our present needs and if we had not, there is an abundant supply of fine wools such as we use (fine) in our immediate neighborhood still unsold, which be purchased at a very low price in comparison with other years since "before the war." Very truly yours,

BEAVER DAM WOOLEN MILLS,
JOHN T. SMITH, Treasurer.

Cleveland's Popularity.

The magnificent reception accorded Grover Cleveland in Ann Arbor is significant of the strength of the man with the masses all over the country. If there be one state in which he is the stronger it would be difficult to name it. His name and his character, and his statesmanship, tower above this generation, clearly the peer of the statesmen of past periods of American history. Mr. Cleveland is the first leader for thirty years to give the country an issue of issues, to make dominant the question of taxation, and to strip it of its intricacies for common understanding. If he shall be the presidential candidate of the democratic party in 1892, he will be the next president of the republic. His own state politicians are his worst enemies just now, but the democratic party of the United States has the right to demand that in the interest of the success of the party, and the welfare of the country, New York shall settle its own difficulties without jeopardizing the popular demand for Grover Cleveland. The Captain of our political host must not be opposed by lieutenants in his own tent.—Toledo Bee.

The Tariff Tax.

A few days ago, while in the crockery store of J. D. Kinney & Co., on West Maumee street, in this city, some handsome and unique pottery met our eye. As it was different from anything we had ever seen, we became curious about it, and found that the ware was called Salopian ware, and was imported by Messrs Kinney & Co. directly from the Salopian Art Pottery Co., of Broseley, Shropshire, England. We advise all our readers to call at Messrs. Kinney & Co.'s and see their unique ware, and at the same time learn an object lesson on the tariff. We examined the invoice of these goods and found their cost at Liverpool to be £20, 8d, or $96.88 U. S. money. They were entered at the port of Detroit and the duty assessed on them was $59.10, about 62 per cent. Unfortunately for Messrs. Kinney & Co., or rather for the people of this community, the dear foreigner utterly neglected and refused to send along the $59.10 for duties, and of course Kinney & Co. had to pay it and add it to the price of the goods, and if the reader will go there and buy some of the ware he will have the intense satisfaction of finding "who pays the tax." The cost of this ware to Kinney & Co. was $96.88 in Liverpool, freight $10.90, and tariff $59.10. Total $161.88. They are naturally selling it a trifle above that figure, to make life worth living.—Adrian Advance.

Miss Etta Hilbert
of Lawrence, Mass.

Her Parents were in Despair

But She Was Brought Into Healthy Girlhood by

HOOD'S Sarsaparilla

Mr. Edward Hilbert, of 183 Broadway, Lawrence, Mass., sends us the following:

"Ten years ago our child was born. Having lost six children we were naturally anxious as to the health of this one. What was our dismay and sorrow to find that she was apparently doomed to the same fate as the others. She had little strength as a baby, and did not improve as she grew older. When about 2 1-2 years old she began to have

Fainting Spells,

dropping wherever she happened to be. At these times she would turn black and appeared at the point of death. Doctors told us she was in a very bad way from

Heart Trouble

Nothing that we gave her did any good until, in utter desperation, we began giving her Hood's Sarsaparilla. She gradually began to improve, the fainting fits became less and less frequent and finally ceased entirely. Her general health improved until at the end of a year, having taken seven bottles, we stopped giving it to her. At this time she was 4 years old, and, although anxious lest the troubles might return, we ceased to worry, she seemed so well. She is now 10 years old and is as a child as you will find anywhere and has never shown any indication of a return of the heart difficulty. During the past 6 years perhaps she has taken 3 bottles in all, we only giving it to her irregularly at times when she has complained of feeling tired in the spring and early summer. We feel that we owe a great deal to and cannot say too much in favor of it." EDWARD HILBERT, Lawrence, Mass.

Healthy and Rugged

Hood's Sarsaparilla

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

The Ownership of American Homes.

In the Cleveland Press Henry George, jr., has an interesting and valuable article, based upon the census statistics, regarding the ownership of homes and farms in the United States. He says:

With a view to getting some light upon this most important matter, the Single Tax club, of St. Louis, two years ago drew up a petition to the superintendent of the eleventh census to collect data to show what percentage of the people own their own homes and farms; what proportion are tenants; of those who occupy their own homes and farms; what proportion have their property free from debt; and, of the homes and farms which are under mortgage, what percentage of the value is so mortgaged?

This petition was adopted not only by all the single tax clubs throughout the United States, but all the knights of labor assemblies, all the Farmers' alliance associations and other farmer and industrial associations. So strong was the demand, indeed, that congress passed a special act extending the investigations of the census bureau to this work and made an appropriation of half a million dollars. The census bureau accordingly set about its task which was found at the outset to be a gigantic one. No such work had ever been undertaken before in this country, and it was a problem to know how to proceed. At length a very simple plan was decided upon—that of sending out printed lists of questions into selected districts that seemed to be representative of larger regions. The idea was to make a thorough canvas by sending to every occupier of a home or farm within the selected district the list of questions, asking, among other things, whether he owned or hired the home or farm, which ever it might be, upon which he resided; and if he owned it, whether it was mortgaged, and if mortgaged, to what extent.

This information has for some time been coming in, but it is only now beginning to be tabulated. In a few weeks a bulletin will be issued showing tabulated returns from two districts, representative of a large part of the western country. By the kindness of the superintendent, Mr. Porter, and of the expert in charge of this division of the census work, Mr. Holmes, I am able to give some idea of the remarkable conditions shown by the returns in these two districts.

One district consists of a group of ten neighboring counties in Kansas, a little west of Topeka. Kansas was selected because it seemed to be attracting more attention than any of the other states in that part of the country. The district embraces ten counties in the southwestern part of Ohio and includes the city of Cincinnati. This district, covering the manufacturing Miami valley, was thought to show the average condition prevailing in the state.

It was ascertained that there were in the ten Kansas counties 18,879 farms. Reports were returned from all but 1,305 of these, or about 7 per cent., which is about the percentage of farms in Ohio, not heard from and of the homes in both states not reported. The number is so inconsiderable that the result could not possibly be affected more than 1 per cent. for better or for worse, so that the following may be taken as approximately correct.

Mr. Holmes formulates results in the following clear manner:

Kansas—Percentage of hired farms in 1890	33
" " " 1880	13
Ohio—Percentage of hired farms in 1890	37
" " 1880	25
Kansas—Percentage of owned farms subject to incumbrance	64
Ohio—Percentage of owned farms subject to incumbrance	30

That is to say, extending the same percentages over the whole of Kansas as are found in the ten counties investigated, it would be found that out of every nine farms two were owned free of debt, three were worked by tenants, and four were occupied by owners subject to an incumbrance of 38 per cent. of their value.

In Ohio, on the basis of these returns, out of every eight farms four are owned free of debt, three are worked by tenants, and one is occupied by owner subject to an incumbrance of 37 per cent. of its value.

As to homes, the returns shows as follows:

Kansas—Percentage of hired homes	48
Ohio—Percentage of hired homes, including Cincinnati	70
Ohio—Percentage of hired homes, outside Cincinnati	50
Kansas—Percentage of owned homes subject to incumbrance	41
Ohio—Percentage of owned homes subject to incumbrance	22

Or, to put the same thing in another form, out of every ten homes in the ten Kansas counties examined, three are owned free of debt, five are hired, and two are occupied by owners subject to an incumbrance of 39 per cent. of their value.

In the ten counties in Ohio, including Cincinnati, out of every fifteen homes, four are owned free of debt, ten are hired, and one is occupied by the owner subject to an incumbrance of 43 per cent. of its value.

In the ten counties in Ohio, outside of Cincinnati, out of every twelve homes, five are owned free of debt, six are hired, and one is occupied by the owner subject to an incumbrance.

In Kansas the farm mortgage averages $1,422, on which the interest is $114 a year. The Kansas home mortgage averages $856, on which the interest amounts to $74.

In Ohio the average farm mortgage amounts to $1,422 and the home mortgage to $1,354. The average interest paid on the Ohio farm mortgage amounts to $85 a year, and on the Ohio home mortgage $97 yearly. The lowest interest paid in any of the twenty counties was found to be in the county containing Cincinnati, where it was 6.08 per cent. The average interest on the Kansas farm was 8.12. It should be said that these interest figures represent not only the legal interest stipulated for in the instrument of the loan, but also the fees and exactions of the loan agents.

Details of tenancy are presented as follows:

KANSAS.

Counties.	Percentage of Hired Farms, 1880.	Percentage of Hired Farms, 1890.
Chase	19.23	35.69
Clay	13.67	30.16
Dickinson	13.08	33.18
Geary	15.38	29.66
McPherson	10.75	32.73
Marion	17.66	39.73
Morris	10.22	37.90
Ottawa	9.53	26.89
Riley	15.23	23.55
Saline	12.44	30.65
Ten counties	13.13	33.25

OHIO.

Counties.	Percentage of Hired Farms, 1880.	Percentage of Hired Farms, 1890.
Adams	16.80	37.39
Brown	27.50	32.19
Butler	30.68	41.43
Clermont	21.80	36.46
Clinton	23.92	39.24
Greene	28.97	32.23
Hamilton	33.51	39.56
Highland	16.83	31.44
Preble	30.49	37.08
Warren	20.80	40.68
Ten counties	24.96	37.10

The ominous importance of these figures grows as the figures are weighed. What is true of ten average counties is true more or less of a whole state, and to say that nearly a third of the farms of Kansas, and nearly a half of the homes are rented, and that over 60 per cent. of the other farms, and over 40 per cent. of the other homes, are heavily mortgaged, is to show that the tariff has not been such a blessing to the western farmer as its supporters have given us to believe, and also that the talk about plenty of free land or cheap land to be had in Kansas is a delusion and a snare. These figures mean, in plain terms, that the people of Kansas are being divorced from the soil and are becoming renters; that the process of divorce is rapidly accelerating; it having increased 150 per cent. in ten years, and that before many decades, if present conditions prevail, there will come to pass much the same order of things as exist in deeply-sympathized-with Ireland, where few are owners and the mass are tenants or the hired servants of tenants. Indeed, there would be a great difference to the disanvantage of the American tenants; the eviction laws are much harsher in America than in Ireland, and American citizens could, and can to-day, be more cruelly treated with the sanction of the law than can be shown has been the case in any one instance through the protracted period of the Irish agrarian agitation.

Doubtless when the tabulation of the returns of some of the northwestern states commences, an even worse condition of things will be discovered, as the recorded mortgage indebtedness which has already been investigated was found to be heaviest there. There are other states in the west that will probably present a better showing than Kansas and Ohio, but it is certain that these two states can not be far from representing the general condition throughout the west.

When the investigation comes east, it is the expectation that a very much worse state of things will be revealed, for there concentrating tendencies have been longer at work. In such a state as Massachusetts, for instance, it is certain that landownership has become highly concentrated, since the population has been packing into the cities at an accelerated speed. When examination comes to the great cities it will not be surprising if the condition discovered resembles that known to have existed in Rome when the landed nobles bought the suffrages of the landless, impoverished, and embruited masses with bread and circuses. The work of tabulation will be rapidly pushed, and the results will be made public in bulletins as fast as they appear, just as the counts of population were made known.

All those who wish details of information should write to Superintendent Porter, or to expert G. K. Holmes, Census Bureau, Washington, D. C., and ask for them.

George's Reply to the Pope.

It is hard to say which portions of this work are the most valuable. Each reader will find for himself those points which appeal most to him. Naturally we are charmed with the way in which George, taking up the dry subject of finance, transforms it into a something most interesting. Our popular preachers would start if we asked them to preach a sermon on the National Revenue, yet Henry George does. He says "No sooner does the state arise than, as we all know, it needs revenues. This need for revenues is small at first, while population is sparse, industry rude, and the functions of the state few and simple. But with growth of population and advance of civilization the functions of the state increase, and larger revenues are needed. Now, He that made the world and placed man in it; He that pre-ordained civilization as the means whereby man might rise to higher powers and become more and more conscious of the works of his Creator, must have foreseen this increasing need of state revenues, and have made provision for it. * * * See how, with the growth of such cities, the one thing that steadily increases in value is land; how the opening of roads, the building of railways, the making of any public improvement adds to the value of land. Is it not clear that here is a natural law—that is to say, a tendency willed by the Creator? Can it mean anything else than that He who ordained the state with its needs has in the value which attaches to land provided the means to meet those needs.—London Financial Reformer.

Effect of Public Improvements.

Perhaps the Boston Globe does not "see the cat," but it at least hears her gentle pur:

Seeing that property holders who secure betterments at the general expense are in the first place benefited by increased rents, it is utterly unjust that, in addition to this, the general taxpayer should be levied upon for the cost of a personal benefit.

MANY PERISHED.

Victims of the Recent Blizzard in the Northwest.

Nearly a Dozen Persons Frozen to Death in the Hurricane—The Storm Reaches the Eastern States, Doing Much Damage.

WORST IN YEARS.

DEVIL'S LAKE, N. D., March 12.—More fatalities from the storm have been brought to light. Asa Wilson has been found frozen to death near the residence of his employer, Morris Duffy, 13 miles north of town. Wilson was from Eden, Minn. Three farmers named Garsket and a man named Gus Germain were overtaken by the storm when near home. They turned their wagon box over, tied up their stock and remained there till the storm was over. They are all frozen more or less, but it is not thought that their injuries are fatal, although one of them may lose his feet. The storm was the worst that has ever been known here, and coming as it did, so unexpectedly, was all the worse.

JAMESTOWN, N. D., March 12.—Frank Braithwaite, wife and two children, living 7 miles west of Oberon, were lost on Wednesday, when a mile from home. The team was unable to go farther and Braithwaite froze to death while trying to lead the horses. The woman and children were covered in the sleigh with blankets and arrived safely at Oberon.

WILLOW CITY, N. D., March 12.—Mrs. Lokken and Torgen Thompson, a boy, who live about 20 miles east of here, started to go to the house of John Tveton, about one-half mile from their home. A terrible blizzard raged and they lost their way. They wandered around in the wild storm until they became exhausted and lay down. The woman died but the boy awoke about 2:30 p. m. the next day and stumbled to the house of Ole Cregin, only a few rods distant, and told his story. Mrs. Cregin and her neighbors carried the woman's body into the house and did what they could for the boy, who will die.

ASHLAND, Wis., March 12.—The storm has abated here and all trains are on time. There are reports of several homesteaders near Iron River perishing in the storm. They were out exploring about the new copper field and have been missing several days. Two or three searching parties are out.

HUMBOLDT, Ia., March 12.—The gale here capsized John Owenson with his load of hay and broke his neck. It demolished G. H. Shellbern's big barn, which was 200 feet long. It threw John Oleson upon the ground and broke his skull.

NEW YORK, March 12.—The storm which came out of the west Thursday night has been disastrous along the coast and very severe in the interior. Heavy snow has fallen in northern New York and the railroads are blocked in various places. Navigation in the bay was almost as dangerous as it was beyond the hook. The steady fierceness of the westerly gale whipped the waves into snowy riot. The ferryboats had a hard time getting into slips.

The heavy windstorm which raged all day along the New Jersey coast has been the heaviest known for some years. No damage has been caused to shipping, as the wind blew with such terrific velocity off shore that it was impossible for any vessels to strike the beach. At Asbury Park, Long Branch, Elberon, Seabright, Belmar, Spring Lake Beach, Point Pleasant City and the other resorts on the northern New Jersey coast the wind blew a perfect gale all day, sending down chimneys, signs and trees. A number of unfinished buildings were damaged.

Heavy snow and high winds have prevailed at Auburn since early Thursday evening. Only one train has passed through on the Auburn road. A passenger train, a freight train and a relief train are stalled at Aurelius. Traffic is also suspended on the Lehigh Valley north and south.

Blizzard weather prevails throughout northern New York. About 2 feet of snow has fallen at Watertown and a high wind has made immense drifts, blocking highways and railroads. A blizzard is also raging in the Mohawk valley. The wind around Fonda is furious and the snow is blinding. On the country roads the snow has drifted to a depth of 9 feet.

Killed His Wife and Himself.

ATLANTIC, Ia., March 14.—Sunday, in a fit of jealousy, L. A. Bennett, an old soldier of the Twenty-second Wisconsin cavalry, shot and instantly killed his wife. He then rushed into the house of his son-in-law adjoining and put two bullets in the base of his brain, dying in two hours. The couple had parted a few days previously.

Have Spent Over $4,000,000.

CHICAGO, March 12.—Secretary Seeberger's monthly report to the world's fair directors shows $4,191,010.71 paid out to date for construction and administration. The balance in bank is $1,418,775.90, and something like $2,000,000 is due from stockholders.

Killed by an Engine.

OTTUMWA, Ia., March 14.—Rev. David R. Robinson, a colored Methodist minister, was struck by a Chicago, Burlington & Quincy engine while walking on the tracks in this city Sunday and instantly killed.

Death of the Grand Duke of Hesse.

BERLIN, March 14.—The grand duke of Hesse died at 1:15 o'clock Sunday morning. The official Darmstadt Gazette announces the accession of the deceased's son, Ernest Ludwig, to the grand dukedom.

NEW YORK, March 12.—An English syndicate has succeeded in forming an American type founders' trust, which includes all the chief foundries except two. The capital involved is $15,000,000.

TECUMSEH HERALD

Issued Every Thursday Morning.

TECUMSEH, MICH., MARCH 17, 1892.

A NEWSPAPER RELIC.

Mr. Ernie Anderson owns an old copy of the HERALD which is a veritable curiosity. It is number 13 of volume 8, issued Jan. 14, 1858. The head line is set out from a font of fancy job letter cast in Scotland, and brought over with the original office by Mr. Perry. It is a rattler and must be seen to be fully appreciated. The sheet is a seven column folio, published by G. S. & C. K. Spafford and edited by R. L. Baxter.

In those days every business house of any importance had a business card in the paper, whatever their other advertising might be. This column contains the cards of the Odd Fellows and Masonic Lodges amd twenty-four business cards, covering every branch of the retail trade. A few of the business men, whose names appear in this column are still living, but only three of them is now in business of any kind, B. J. Bidwell, A. James and J. S. Strong. Below is a full list of these business cards, which will be read with interest by our older residents.

The local matter is confined to one column on the fifth page. We give some of the locals therein.

Change of Proprietorship—David VanTine has purchased the interest of Wm. Richards in the furniture business. Mr. V. will spare no expense or pains, to sustain the well earned reputation of this old establishment. By aid of new machinery (lately purchased) at his manufactory, he is enabled to sell at prices to suit the times.

Heavy Beef—A cow weighing a trifle over 1900 was sold on the street, for $60.

Excursion Train—A train of 22 passenger cars containing citizens of Jackson, Michigan Legislature, and invited guests, passed through our village to-day at 11 o'clock, for Toledo. This is the largest train that ever passed over this branch.

We have received the annual report of the Supervisors for the year of 1857, but too late for publication in this issue. We will give it in our next. We will also give the correspondence "Great West."

Burned to Death—We are pained to learn that a bright little girl four years of age and over, the daughter of Samuel C. Blinn of Manchester, Washtenaw Co. Mich., was burned to death on Friday of last week, at a cooper's shop near her father's residence. She was playing with the shavings when her clothes took fire, and although her father and several men were employed with a sawing machine near by, they were completely burned from off her before she was seen by any one. She lingered in great agony for more than four hours hours after the accident.

Sensible—The Presbyterian Church and society of this village, at a recent meeting resolved to discard that absurd rule of church etiquette, which requires a whole slip-full of gentlemen to rise and file out into the broad aisle (during service it may be,) in order to give to a lady who may have happened to come in after them the foot of the slip.

Just opposite Ward & Moore,

D. P. Bunnell wants to sell his home in Brownville.

THE BICHLORIDE OF GOLD.

The Keeley Cure at Northville, Mich.

We met John C. Gram, a former lumberman of Au Sauble, Mich., to-day, and received the following description of the treatment practiced at Northville.

The Keeley Institute is located in the clean town of Northville, twenty-five miles west of Detroit, on the F. & P. M. R. R. It is a nicely laid out town—no muddy streets, nice shade trees and good pure water. It is a large, two-story building, with a large lawn and shade trees, and Dr. Keeley says it is the pleasantest institute in the United States. It is under the direct supervision of and operating under special contract with Lester E. Keeley, M. D. LL. D., the discoverer of the bichloride of gold for the cure of the liquor, opium, morphine and tobacco habits. The remedies used are all made under the personal supervision of Dr. Keeley, and this is the only institute in Michigan that does and can use them. When the patient arrives he is examined by the medical director, and especially the heart, as that organ is more vitally affected than any other by the use of liquor, opium, or tobacco. He is given four hypodermic injections daily of the bi-chloride of gold in the left arm near the shoulder. He is also given a bottle of the bi-chloride of gold remedy, of which he takes one teaspoonful every two hours. He is also given all the liquor he wants or needs by the doctor, for two reasons: The doctor can treat him according to the amount he drinks and not let his system run down by the sudden stopping of it. But every patient will stop taking it, after he has commenced the treatment, in from two to five days, and he can't give any reason for it, only that he has no appetite for it and does not want it, the smell even being offensive to him. Every person is free to do as he pleases and go anywhere he chooses to, only he must report four times a day for the hypodermic treatment. Lady patients need not report at the Institute, as the doctor calls at their boarding place and gives the treatment there. Board is cheap—only from four to six dollars per week, or a person can have a good room from one to two dollars per week and take his meals at the Club restaurant at four dollars per week. There is not a case, no matter how long the habit has been indulged in, but what is cured perfectly, if a patient wishes to be cured and goes to Northville for treatment. There is no more need for any one suffering from this disease when he or she can be cured so easily and so cheaply. All a person needs to do is to come to the conclusion that he needs it as much as others that he can point out. Anyone wishing any information on the subject will be cheerfully furnished it by writing to A. Waring, Sec'y, Northville. No one has ever regretted that he took the treatment, but joined the balance in giving thanks for making a new man of him and giving him another chance to do good to himself and his family, who are usually neglected through the use of liquor and morphine.

THE BRITTON LIBRARY.

Our hustling neighbor, the village of Britton, is bound to keep up with the procession, not only in a business, but also in an intellectual point of view. Having some business at Britton last Monday afternoon we dropped into the new Library room after supper, and were quite surprised to witness the extent of the new institution. The front room on the second floor over Brown's store has been neatly fitted up and furnished to accommodate the Library and its customers. It starts out with 400 volumes of miscellaneous books, which can be drawn out by the members every two weeks, under certain rules and regulations. The room is open to the public every evening from seven to nine o'clock. Between May 1st and Oct. 1st, it will be open from 2 to 7:30 p. m. They have lately received a donation from Congressman Gorman of 35 volumes of public documents and reports. There are now 17 dailies and weeklies and 15 magazines on file, and more will be added at an early day. The membership fee is $2.00 and nearly one hundred members are enrolled. M. L. Gillen holds the position of Librarian and he is evidently the right man in the right place. The room is neatly kept and customers are promptly and politely waited upon. The citizens of Britton have reason to feel proud over the successful inception of this public enterprise.

The Century will take up the campaign for good roads. The April number is to contain a suggestive article on "Our Common roads," by Isaac B. Potter, editor of "Good Roads" and a practical engineer. The author points out the enormous loss to this country through the present general condition of American roads, a loss which falls not only upon the farmer, but upon city people as well, who are compelled to pay uncessary prices for having produce brought to them. An American consul in France reports that the road system of that country (the most perfect system in the world) "has been of greater value to the country as a means of raising the value of land than have the railways." In France every market cart, with its broad tire, is a road-maker. Mr. Potter's article is full of practical suggestions for the betterment of American roads, and it is fully illustrated.

THAT TIRED FEELING

Is often the forerunner of serious illness, which may be broken up if a good tonic like Hood's Sarsaparilla is taken in season. This medicine invigorates the kidneys and liver to remove the waste from the system, purifies the blood and builds up the strength.

Constipation is caused by loss of the peristaltic action of the bowels. Hood's Pills restore this action and invigorate the liver.
